MOSCOW, Jan. 25.—Under the auspices of the Young Communist League, which has 2,000,000 members, a nation-wide movement was begun today to collect funds for the construction of Soviet Russia's first submarine.The movement, which includes lotteries, special concerts, motion picture performances and lectures will be given to raise money.
The State Bank will open a special account called the "Submarine Account," to which contributors may send remittances.In some districts one hectare (about 2.5 acres) of land will be set aside and the revenue from the agricultural yield will be given to ward the construction of the submarine. Members of the Young Communist League will work on their days off to help swell the fund.WOULD PUT BRITISH NAVAL

Advocates This "Historic Stroke" at Conference.By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Jan. 25.—While the conference delegates are still struggling with the puzzle of procedure, the powerful editorial writers in the London Sunday newspapers have unleashed their guns.J. L. Garvin, one of the authoritative and independent "Observer," proposes that Anglo-American parity be reached by a new method. It is that the British at once abolish three huge battleships which are among the oldest scheduled for the scrap heap in 1934.
This, he says, would save the United States from having to build while asking the rest of the world, in the words of President Hoover, for "drastic reductions."Garvin also advocates a "historic stroke" at this conference, which he believes should be nothing less than that "on the most reasonable business terms he would place at the disposal of America peace and war—it was war at last despite every effort—all British naval bases throughout the world."EXCHANGE HEAD

STOCK COLLAPSEE. H. H. Simmons Cites Huge Security Issues by Investment Trusts and Holding Companies.OVERPRODUCTION ANOTHER FACTORSays Situation Would Have Been Healthier if Public Had Had Better Idea of Finance Concerns' AssetsSpecial to the Post-Dispatch.
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25.—E.
H. H. Simmons, president of the New York Stock Exchange, in an address here tonight, placed a heavy burden of blame for the stock market crash last fall upon huge issues of securities by investment trusts and holding companies.Simmons was the principal speaker at the dinner of the Pennsylvania Railroad.
In his address he listed "the colossal output of new stock issues during the two months preceding the break" as the principal factor which converted "an inevitable but orderly declining market into a panic."

FOUR OTHER FACTORS LISTED.

He gave the following other reasons for the break:
1. Economic disturbances abroad during the earlier months of 1929.
2. Lack of equilibrium between buying and selling.
3. Overproduction in industry.
4. Need for absorption of considerable foreign liquidation.During last September, alone, Simmons stated, new security issues by holding companies and investment trusts aggregated about $650,000,000.
"Many of these trusts," he said,
"loaned money on call and invested in securities. Instead of immediately buying American securities. The situation would have been vastly healthier if the public could have gained a more accurate idea of the actual assets behind American investment trusts and finance company issues."With this in view, the Exchange, he said, had formulated regulations for listing such issues which would have called for disclosure of security portfolios.
"But new trusts," he continued,
"listed their issues on the exchange, with the result that this effort for more widespread publicity as to investment trust assets and earnings proved of little avail."A New Feature in Finance.
"The investment trust has, of course, been a completely new feature in American finance and its nature and functions have been very widely misunderstood and misinterpreted."Unfortunately, the results of American inexperience with investment trusts were visited last fall not merely upon investors in these trusts but upon the whole American securities market.

Jan. 15.—(Delayed)—(By Radio via London)—While following the ice pack edge westerly in Antarctica's uncharted waters at 10:30 o'clock last night, there dramatically appeared on the ice margin ahead a steamer proceeding towards us.We wiped our eyes, thought it to be another spectacle of the Antarctic mirage, which phenomenon is an almost nightly occurrence. But no. When nearer, we discovered it to be the Norwegian ship Norvegia.
We dipped our flags and stopped our engines, hoisting a flag wishing them a pleasant voyage. They hoisted a "thank you" and swung their ship 80° to approach the Discovery, presently lowering a boat.Then came aboard that famous Norwegian explorer, Capt. Riiser-Larsen. An hour was spent in exchanging a rough outline of our respective programs. Finally, after briefly looking over the Discovery's scientific equipment, the visitors left.The personality of Riiser-Larsen made so favorable an impression on the Discovery's company that we all joined in a hearty cheer for the Norvegia as our guests rode away.The Norvegia this season has been operating in Antarctic waters in close association with the Thor's Hammer, large mothership of their whaling fleet. Just prior to our meeting, she coaled a short distance within the pack ice edge, where the swell was reduced by a couple of whales, as fenders, being lashed between her and the mothership.Coal was piled high on the decks of the Norvegia, which was so deeply laden therewith, and hampered by the carriage of two large airplanes, that they were very anxious of the time ahead, should a gale spring up.In accordance with our original program, I explained to Riiser-Larsen that we are continuing our investigations west to at least the forty-fifth, but not exceeding the fortieth, degree of east longitude, before again turning eastward.A young woman and a boy died old, a student at the St. Louis Academy of Beauty Culture, 804 Pine street, fell dead soon after she entered the school on the secning of a headache.The question came up in connection with an effort by Senator Cousens, (Rep.), Michigan, to have eliminated from the bill a section, already existing law, which permits returning American tourists to bring in goods valued at not more than $100 free of duty.The Michigan Senator's proposal was defeated, 43 to 19, but the provision was tightened by an amendment by Senator Tydings, (Dem.), Maryland, which would deny the exemption to any person more than once within a period of 30 days.Proposed to Protect Merchants.

The Finance Committee had proposed to liberalize the clause by increasing the exemption to $200, but Chairman Smoot suggested this be rejected and the existing limit was restored.Cousens first proposed an amendment to deny the privilege to any one unless they remained out of the country more than three days, but so much objection was raised that he finally asked elimination of the exemption. He said American merchants along the Canadian and Mexican borders were losing millions of dollars through Americans going over the border daily and bringing back purchases under $100.Senator Jones, (Rep.), Washing-

Carillon Duty Reduced.
The Senate today approved a reduction in the tariff on carillons from 40 to 25 per cent and an exemption from duty of all sets consisting of 30 bells and more.The House had cut the present 40 per cent duty on the musical bells to 20 per cent, but the Senate Finance Committee recom-

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—An amendment to the tariff bill, which would deny the "courtesy of the port" and other special privileges now granted to Senators and Congressmen and other high Government officials returning from foreign countries, was adopted today by the Senate.The proposal, offered by Senator Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, provides that "no courtesy of the port, free entry, or special privileges or preferences in examination of merchandise or baggage shall hereafter be extended to any person whose-ever who is subject to payment of customs duties."Although not now the law, it has been the custom of the Treasury Department to grant such privileges to returning members of the Senate and House. This means merely that baggage of the travelers is expedited in the examination process and does not exempt the baggage from inspection, but charges have been made in recent months that the courtesy has been abused.As adopted, the amendment would not apply to members of the diplomatic corps. In proposing it, Harrison said he wanted it to apply to officers of the Government in high places as well as those in ordinary life.Customs Exemption Tightened.
"I am not sure but what it ought to be enacted into law," said Senator Fess, (Rep.), Ohio, the only other Senator to comment on the proposal.The question came up in con-

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 25.—Mrs.
Cora Belle Warren, 25 years old, was shot to death and her husband, William Warren, 35, probably fatally wounded tonight in what police believe was an attempt to play a prank on the wife of Otis C. Waller. Waller was held in connection with the shooting.Waller told officers he and his wife were at the apartment of a mother-in-law, Mrs. Ella Reed, and that he heard a noise at the back door. He said he did not investigate because of threats made against his wife's life within the last week.He said someone then knocked on the front door and that when he opened it, pistol in hand, a woman's voice said "Stick 'em up." Waller said he fired five times at a man and woman before he discovered they were his neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Warren.Police questioned Warren and he admitted his wife had ordered Waller to put up his hands when the door was opened, in an attempt to scare the neighbors.Waller was held without bond pending an inquest.
Police said they had learned that this week Mrs. Waller had received several telephone calls from unidentified women threatening to kill her, unless she placed large amounts of money in specified places for them. A demand was made Thursday night that $1000 be placed in her mail box by midnight.FALLS FROM PLANE TO DEATH

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 25.—
Frank Campbell, 22 years old, a while flying over the outskirts of the city late today and was killed.

Witnesses told the Coroner Campbell apparently was flying upside down at an altitude of 500 feet when he fell out.U. S. untold, the plane continued on about half a mile and crashed near a group of houses.
The pilot, who took off from Boeing Field had 40 hours of flying to his credit. Investigators said it was apparent that the young man had not been using the safety belt. Officers at the Washington Aircraft and Transport Co.'s school said Campbell had been in-

First—Opposed by An-gio-French Delegates.By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Jan. 25.—An important conference between Premier Tardieu of France and Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy, lasting an hour and a quarter, from which came no word of progress toward the settlement of the Franco-Italian naval difficulties, tonight round up the first week of the five-power naval disarmament conference.The Franco-Italian situation dominated today's proceedings among the delegates, who are still seeking to find a suitable political background for the conduct of their naval disarmament programs.While the French Premier and the Italian Foreign Minister talked this evening, the Japanese looked on from their headquarters and Prime Minister MacDonald and Secretary of State Stimson rested in the quiet of their country retreats.Although no progress was reported after the Franco-Italian discussions, conference circles do not despair, but regard the meeting as one of a long series of conversations that probably will be necessary to clear away the causes for dispute.Italy Holds Out for Parity.
Tardieu and Grandi tonight seemed to be satisfied merely to restate the French and the Italian position. Italy again emphasized her right to naval parity with any Continental Power, repeating at the same time her desire for drastic reductions. France insisted that the relative strengths of France and Italy should correspond to the European political situation.Tardieu described the talk as extremely cordial and marked by good humor on both sides. Grandi, emerging from the headquarters of the French delegation and wading off the advance of newspapermen, exclaimed: "The attack is on!" But he referred to the newspapermen rather than to the French statements. In any event, he declined to surrender and be questioned.Though the first week of the conference has ended without signs of exceptionally rapid progress, plans have been perfected for resuming the work Monday morning, when the chiefs of the five delegations will meet at No. 10 Downing street to discuss the general agenda.After this meeting of the order in which the categories of ships will be taken up probably will be known. It is thought that a general compromise between the methods of measuring naval strength by global tonnage and by categories has been tentatively reached.Differences Over Program.
The Americans are standing strongly for taking up the cruiser problem at the very beginning, but the British and the French are in favor of starting with the question of battleships. The Japanese have so far been in favor of the British view, but it has been learned authoritatively that they are ready to undertake discussion of any phase of limitation and reduction as soon as European political problems can be crowded out of the way.The presence of battleships on the conference agenda does not mean that their abolition will be discussed, but only their limitation.
Some members of the American delegation have carefully emphasized this point.Prime Minister MacDonald will remain at Chequers, country residence of British Prime Ministers, until tomorrow night. He entertained the delegates from the British dominions today.Secretary Stimson rested over the week-end at Warren House, Warren, an estate north of London, that he has rented. He entertained a few guests informally, including Ambassador Morrow and Mrs. Morrow.Ambassador Morrow did not leave London until late in the afternoon.

Robert Minor Among Injured Communist Protest Meeting in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Two were injured today when police broke up a Communist demonstration in front of City Hall. The demonstration was a protest against the death yesterday of Steve Davis, a clerk, who was shot by a patrolman during a strike disturbance in the Bronx, Jan. 16.

Herbert Benjamin, organizer-secretary of the Communist Party in New York City, said that Commissioner Whelan had written to Roger Baldwin of the American Civil Liberties Union, proposing adequate police protection for meetings.

The demonstration had started, with Robert Minor, editor of the Daily Worker, haranguing the crowd from the steps of City Hall, when a flying wedge of troopers split the crowd into two parts.

As the three groups were hustled off in three directions, mount police joined the patrolmen, and several of the Communists were with blackbacks and the hoofs rearing horses.

Minor was among the injured. Dr. Samuel Minowitz, who dressed the wounds of the injured in nearby law office, said he saw a policeman knock Minor unconscious with his club.

Several of the other Communists suffered black eyes, and in one case, a newspaper reporter, who struck in the stomach, one policeman's hand was cut, and another had a badly bruised face.

About 1000 men and women participated in the demonstration.

MECK-MAVOY SUIT COUNT REVIVES SEWER LAW FIGHT

APPEAL SOUGHT TO U. S. SUPREME COURT

Plaintiff in $9803 Action Hints He Quit Project for Other Reasons Than Those He Gave.

Opposition in St. Louis County to operation of the sewer law enforcement, several years ago to provide for the sewer districts has been intensified by discussion of the suit filed Wednesday by Charles C. Meck, former engineer for the St. Louis County, to recover $9803 from P. H. McAvoy, a policeman, whom Meck says he advanced money which Meck says he advanced.

Meck, though he won't tell whether he quit the project for other reasons than those he gave, hinted that he quit the project for other reasons than those he gave.

Ever since the law was introduced in the Legislature it has been the subject of criticism and attack. The chief objections are: The law makes it possible to include land not having sewers in the district; the law authorizes district supervisors to employ engineers at salaries for unlimited fees; it takes property for sewers which will receive no benefit from them.

An organization headed by John Moore, a lawyer, and Jules R. Moore, a physician, was organized recently to carry the attack on the law to the Supreme Court of the United States. It had been upheld by the Supreme Court of Missouri in a friendly suit filed by the district against St. Louis County, although an almost identical statute preceding it had been held unconstitutional because of a defective title. The pending enactment to provide a metropolitan sewer district in St. Louis and St. Louis County contemplates unified administration of sewer maintenance and of future construction.

Meck resigned as engineer for St. Ferdinand district, which embraces 12,000 acres in the northern part of the county, on May 12, 1927. Its operation has been marked by a dispute over the propriety of paying fees to attorneys who at first volunteered to work gratis and one of whom still refuses payment. An eighth district, Kirkwood, who incorporated recently after some property owners objected to inclusion, but the effort to combat its establishment has not been dropped. On Jan. 18 Judge Mulvey dismissed a petition to incorporate the River des Peres district, after its attorney sought a continuance or a change of venue.

Most of the districts have enlarged their original boundaries to include the incorporation of a district in any county newspaper. The notice for the River des Peres district was published in a Ferguson paper, five miles outside the district, but 223 property owners filed objections. The Wellston district published notice of its original incorporation in the Watchman-Advocate, best-known paper in the county, and there were many objections. Since then, notices of three extensions were printed in the Wellston Local, a journal of limited circulation, and there have been no objections. Notice of a hearing on Feb. 3 on the latest extension was published in the Local on Jan. 15.

There has been an unquestioned need for sewer facilities in large suburban areas of the county but prior to the present law, which is known as the Ralph Act because it was sponsored by State Senator Ralph of Valley Park, a lawyer, there was no adequate public provision for sewers, except in several towns. Once established, a district is administered by the board of three supervisors, under general supervision of the Circuit Court, but the Court has no voice in fixing fees. The County Chamber of Commerce has been active in endeavoring to keep the people informed of sewer affairs and to obtain proper sewer facilities at reasonable cost. It has just sent questionnaires to the various districts, for information about finances, attorneys and construction plans. A mass meeting has been called in the Overland district for next Thursday night, at All Souls' Hall, Tennyson and Hood avenues, to discuss the sewer situation there.

Meck's estimate of work, which was learned yesterday that Meck, who was an engineer for the district, had estimated cost of building sewers for the district at $100,000 to $250,000, and Meck figured the assessment on property which would receive no benefit from the sewer system at $3.72 per acre. Other assessments, it calculated, will be $100 per lot for the average developed subdivision property, $100 per lot for the average residential property and $100 per lot for multiple property, the variation depending on the size of the lot. One district of Ferguson concluded yesterday that the total cost on his district would be $600, since payments will be due annually for 20 years with interest on the unpaid balance.

Some of the eight districts now operating in the county has issued notices of started constructing sewers, but the plans are in various stages of completion. Seven of the districts (Webster Groves, St. Louis, Jennings, Overland, LeFerry, Central and Wellston) anticipated tax income by advances aggregating $401,000.

11-Year-Old Giant and His Father

THE father, Harold Wadlow, is 5 feet 11 inches tall, the boy, Robert, is 7 feet tall.

11-Year-Old Upper Alton Boy 7 Feet Tall and Still Growing

Washington U. Medical Experts Who Examine Him Say He May Add Another Foot to His Stature.

Robert Wadlow, Upper Alton schoolboy, who, with his twelfth birthday four weeks in the future, is seven feet tall, was examined by Washington University specialists at Barnes Hospital yesterday.

In an examination of the boy, which included photographs and X-ray pictures, the university professors pursued their study of the growth of normal persons in the eighth or nineteenth year. This gland, the size of a pea, located at the base of the skull, controls normality or abnormality of growth. In cases like Robert's, overstimulation of this gland results in abnormal height.

Dr. D. P. Barr, Busch professor of medicine, conducted the examination. He said afterward that the prospect was that Robert would add another foot, perhaps a foot and half or more, to his stature before he stopped growing. He mentioned the Irish giant, Byrn, eight feet nine inches tall, and Cushing's giant, eight feet three, as historic examples and said it was possible that the Alton boy would surpass both of them. Robert grew four inches in the last year. Abnormally tall persons sometimes continue their growth until the age of 22 or 23, though the growth of normal persons stops in the eighteenth or nineteenth year.

Robert is the son of parents of ordinary stature. His father, Harold Wadlow, is five feet 11 inches tall. He is the youngest member of his seventh grade class at Milton School. He shares in the games of boys of his own age, so far as his size will permit. His clothing is made to order. His shoes are size 25, and his shirt has a 17½ and half or more, to his stature before he stopped growing. He

CHAPPIE MORAN HELD ON $50,000 FRAUD CHARGE

Confidence Man One of Two Arrested in Peoria, Ill., on Michigan Realty Dealer's Accusation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PEORIA, Ill., Jan. 25.—With the arrest here today of Charles (Chappie) Moran, notorious confidence man, and James Kenney of Peoria, a former saloonkeeper, was revealed a swindle in which Chauncey Barber, real estate dealer of Lansing, Mich., lost $50,000 in November, 1928. Barber became suspicious of the deal only recently and came to Peoria Tuesday in the hope of finding the men who cheated him. He saw Moran and Kenney seated in a parked automobile in the downtown district this afternoon and caused their arrest on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Kenney was later released on $25,000 bond. He denied the charge and said he had never seen Barber. Kenney said Moran had been a friend of his for several years, but that he did not know him as a confidence man. Moran was held in default of bond. He made no statement.

Barber told this story to police: "A man who introduced himself as J. J. McLaren came to my office in Lansing in October, 1929, and arranged to have some property on an airport. He told me the deal would have to be confirmed by a Col. John Hill of Miami, Fla., and made arrangements for me to meet Hill in Peoria."

"McLaren had a Packard automobile, driven by a chauffeur, and we went to Peoria in it, arriving Nov. 4. When eating dinner in a restaurant we found a pocketbook under the table. It contained money and some bonds with the name J. J. Stewart indorsed on them. McLaren said he knew Stewart, and we went to a hotel to return the pocketbook."

"Gives 'Tip' on Stock.
"Kenney was the man who posed as Stewart. With him was Moran, who used the name Swain and said he represented a bank. Col. Hill also was in the group."

"Stewart said he wanted to reward us for returning his pocketbook and said he knew a stock that was sure to go up. We each put in some money and the next day Swain came back with more, which he said represented our profit. We added some to this and again gave to Stewart to invest, and again Swain returned with what he said was our profit."

"Turns Over $50,000.
"Then Stewart said the item was ripe for a big killing, but that I would have to put up $50,000. I gave it to him, expecting to reap another profit. Stewart said it might take some time to realize on this investment and suggested that I return to Lansing, saying he would keep in touch with me."

"I went home, but I never heard from them."

GAMBLER LISTED $1000 A MONTH UNDER 'SALARIES'

Harry Murdoch Arrested for Refusal to Explain Income Tax Deduction, Gives $5000 Bond.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

The Internal Revenue Bureau's recent inquiry into alleged payments for protection by Madison County gamblers, resulted in the arrest yesterday of Harry Murdoch, a former operator of slot machines on the East Side and now manager and principal owner of the Mounds Country Club, a gambling resort, who had persistently refused to identify the recipients of $24,800 which he paid out in 1927 and 1928 at the rate of $1000 a month.

His arrest, as told exclusively in late editions of yesterday's Post-Dispatch, was made on a Federal indictment returned at Springfield, Ill., Thursday, charging him with failure to "give testimony and supply information" about the payments. He was released on $5000 bond.

Murdoch, in his Federal income tax returns for 1927 and 1928 listed "salaries" of $12,000 a year, which he refused to discuss when called before Internal Revenue Agent John R. Kirk, but which he deducted from his taxable income, the indictment charges.

One Year, $10,000 Fine Is Penalty. A section of the Internal Revenue Act provides that the Government may demand information from citizens concerning income tax deductions, and that any persons refusing to supply such information will be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor punishable upon conviction by a prison term of not more than one year, a fine of not more than $10,000, or both.

Although District Attorney Province and Assistant District Attorney Alexander, who were in charge of the Federal grand jury, refused to discuss the indictment, it is understood that the payments concern Murdoch's operation of slot machines only. The Mounds Club, on the State highway between East St. Louis and Collinsville, was opened last April 6.

It is known that another man was associated with Murdoch in the slot machine business and also listed in his income tax returns, "salaries" of $1000 a month for the two-year period. He, too, was called before Kirk last month and questioned. Like Murdoch, he declined to discuss the payments. District Attorney Province declined to tell whether Kirk had told him of the other man.

Invalid 18 Years, Spends Time Writing Unfortunates

Miss Sunrise A. Rall Reads Papers to Find Those Who Need Help in Forgetting Troubles—Hurt in Car Accident Has Undergone 58 Operations.

MISS SUNRISE A. RALL.

Miss Sunrise A. Rall, who has not walked for 18 years—since both of her legs were broken in a street car accident—has a curious way of passing the time. She writes letters to people who have had accidents or other misfortunes, letters which she hopes will help them forget their troubles.

Sitting in her bed in City Hospital, she was looking over the afternoon papers when a reporter called on her yesterday. Watch the papers, she explained, that's the best way to find the names of persons who need cheer. The smiling and spoken in a cheerful voice, well known in St. Louis hospitals.

"We're going to break my left leg again—in at least four places and I hope five. I'll be better after the first operation. I've healed 1 and confident I will be able to walk. Heretofore the doctors have taken charge. This time I'm going to tell them what to do. I've been on this job long enough to know something about it."

Since the accident she says she has undergone 58 operations, including numerous bone graftings, and has spent about half her time in hospital beds. June 2, 1912, was the date of her mother's funeral. She was 23 years old then. She and an escort were on a street car going to a Sunday evening church service. The trolley wire broke and the car, losing control, which crashed along Grand avenue and crashed into a stationary work car on Hickory street.

Miss Rall probably would not have been injured had she remained in her seat. Observing the motorman's plight she ran forward and attempted to apply the air brakes. She was caught in the wreckage of the vestibule and sustained numerous injuries, including broken legs and jaw bones. She was the only person seriously hurt.

Being an invalid is an experience which impresses a person with the goodness of the world. Miss Rall has found out. The $7500 which she received from the street car deductions of $43,255.37, making her taxable income $3912.55. The deductions, according to the indictment, include "salaries, exclusive of labor, $28,175.14; losses; $2000; depreciation, obsolescence and depletion, $5400; rent, repairs and other expenses, $7710.72."

The "salaries exclusive of labor" include payments of $12,000 concerning which Murdoch also refused to supply information, a second count of the indictment charges.

The sections of the internal revenue act under which the Government may fine and imprison citizens who refuse to give information about their incomes, were intended to assist in tax collections. The department, in asking Murdoch to whom he paid $24,000, wanted to determine whether the recipient paid an income tax on the money.

The lien against Murdoch, filed in Edwardsville last Nov. 12, is for $78,073.89. Other liens, bringing the total sought by the Government to $190,096, have been filed against Edward Deimling and George E. Little, both former Sheriffs of Madison County; William Patrick McQuillan, Randall Norvell and Ira Sparks, partners in the Mounds Club; Dominick Italiano, Collinsville bootlegger now in prison; Girardo Bonello, who lives in the Collinsville house owned by Italiano; James Sharas, East St. Louis proprietor of candy stores and George Stathis, East St. Louis grocer and poultry merchant.

$3,000,000 TO BE SPENT BY STATE ON COUNTY ROADS

Separation of Grades Where Denny Crosses Manchester and Watson Included in 1930 Program.

NEW ROUTE TO THE SOUTHWEST

Number of Highways to Be Widened to 40 or 56 Feet Adjacent to the City.

Plans for $3,000,000 to $3,500,000 worth of road construction by the State Highway Department in St. Louis County this year, including separation of grades at two crossings of Denny road—the first such project in the St. Louis district—and a new route extending southwest for 15 miles from the city limits, were announced by Division Engineer Rudder yesterday.

Six State roads radiating from St. Louis are to have widths of 40 or 56 feet adjacent to the city, in addition to Lemay Ferry road, already 40 feet wide adjoining St. Louis. The cross-county belt highway, by way of Denny road, is to be completed this year, except for the extreme northern end. The year's program constitutes a considerable part of the work planned for traffic relief under the $75,000,000 State road bond issued in 1928.

Plans have been approved, except for minor details, for grade separations where Manchester road and Watson road cross Denny road. Denny is part of the belt route, State highway No. 77. Manchester is the route of U. S. highways Nos. 50 and 66. Watson and a new location west of Denny are to be the new route of No. 66. Considerable increase of the already heavy traffic is anticipated on all three routes, so the State desires to eliminate congestion at the intersections.

Plans Indefinite.
It has not been determined whether Manchester shall be carried over a depressed roadway for Denny, where they intersect in northern Kirkwood, or whether Manchester shall be put in a cut and Denny overhead. Whichever is the cheaper method will be adopted, but the first plan is to depress Denny for a distance of about 700 feet, putting its roadway between concrete walls and carrying Manchester across on a concrete bridge. The cost is estimated at $75,000 to $100,000. Both Denny and Manchester will have 40-foot pavements of concrete at this point.

Watson road is to be carried over a depression for Denny road. Each pavement will be 40 feet wide. A less elaborate structure, at an estimated cost of $35,000, will be required from the one in Kirkwood, since Denny can be run through an earth hollow at Watson. However, the bridge carrying Watson across Denny will have an ornamental facing in harmony with the surrounding residence district.

The Highway Department's picture of the grade separations includes ornamental street lights. Engineer Rudder said it was virtually certain they would be provided at Denny and Manchester, because of the heavy traffic in this suburban business center and that it was likely they would be used at Denny and Watson. Furthermore, he remarked, "We're coming to the time when lights will be provided all along the main State highways."

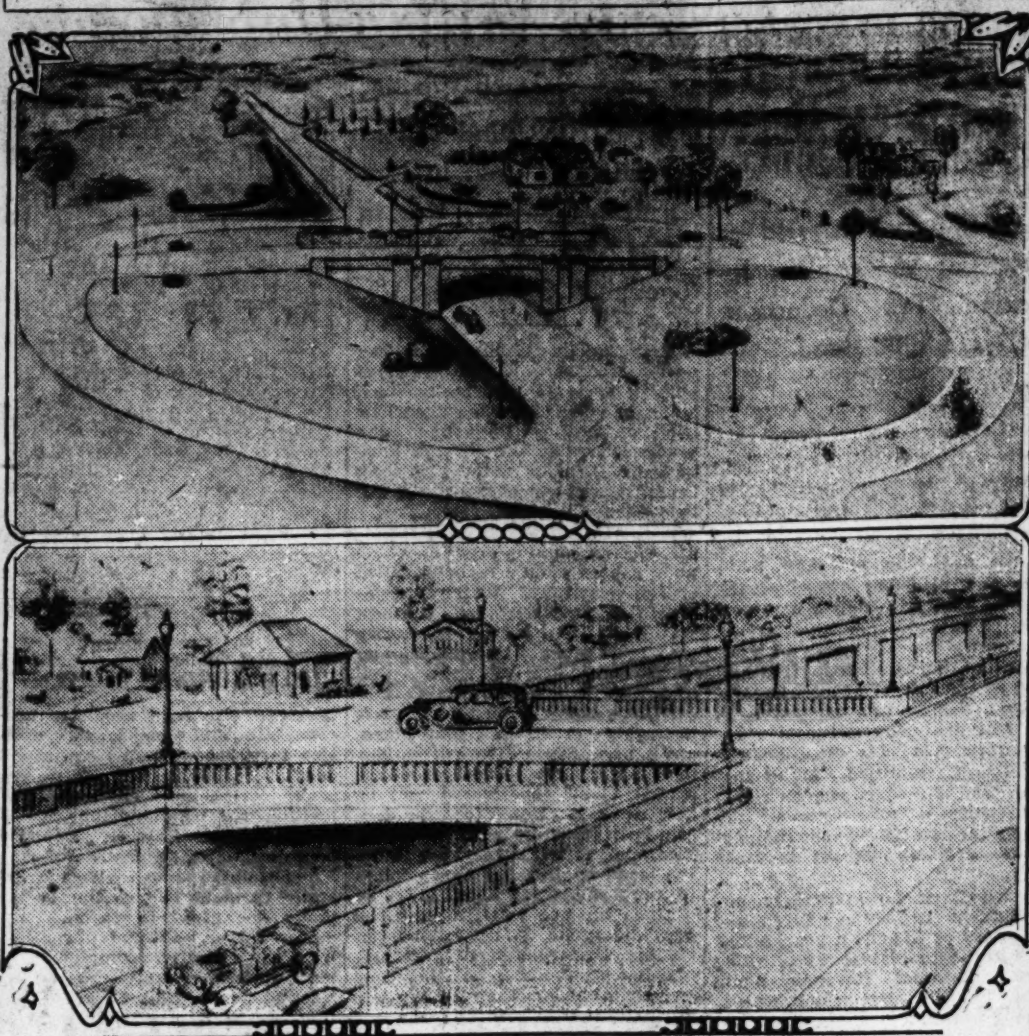

The New 15-Mile Road.
The new 15-mile road will be the beginning of the new route of U. S. highway No. 66. It will follow Watson road from the southwestern city limits to Denny road, traversing a district between Big Bend and Gravois roads which has been comparatively undeveloped for lack of thoroughfares. Between Denny road and the intersection of Antire and Vandover roads, south of Valley Park, it will cut across country in a virtually straight line, crossing the Meramec River about one mile south of the "big bend" at what formerly was Meramec Highlands, and about two miles north of Fenton. From Vandover road westward it will pursue the general course of Antire road but with considerable deviation to straighten the path through the picturesque, rugged country there.

This year's project extends only to the Votaw Bridge, where Antire road crosses the Meramec about two miles east of Eureka. Later, the new route for No. 66 will go through Eureka, Allenton and Pacific to the junction of Nos. 50 and 47 near Villa Ridge. Watson road is to have a 40-foot concrete pavement between St. Louis and Denny road this year and the new No. 66 will be paved to a 20-foot width west of Denny.

The steel bridge to be built over the Meramec above Fenton this year will have either a 30 or 40-foot roadway, allotting for future highway widening. Its trusses will be inverted beneath the roadway instead of stretching above it. Rudder said a new bridge to replace the Votaw structure near Eureka is not likely to be erected this year.

Plans to Provide Safety on County Highways

UPPER picture shows the grade separation at Denny and Watson roads, St. Louis County, to be constructed by the State Highway Department this year in connection with the paving of Denny road as State Highway No. 77 and of Watson road as a new location for U. S. Highway No. 66. The view is south on Denny, with Watson crossing overhead. The lower picture is of a grade separation to be carried out by the State this year at Denny and Manchester roads. There Denny is shown as going through a long walled cut, and the car shown on the bridge is headed west in Manchester. It may be decided to have Manchester pass under Denny, however.

been paved for several miles south of Gravois road, extending almost to Mehlville on Lemay Ferry road. It is to be paved under an existing contract all the way from Mehlville to Denny and Big Bend roads, Kirkwood, as soon as weather permits. Another contract will be let soon to extend it from Big Bend to St. Charles road, near Pattonville, including 40-foot width through Kirkwood.

Summary of Projects.
Other projects on the State's program in the county this year, as announced by Rudder, are:

Widening of Manchester road between Big Bend boulevard, Maplewood, and Denny road. From 20 to 40 feet, and substitution of concrete pavement for the present soft surface in Maplewood and Brentwood. If a proposed condemnation suit by Maplewood is terminated in time to provide additional right-of-way, the width will be increased to 56 feet between Big Bend and Hanley road. If Brentwood gets added right-of-way, Manchester will be made more than 40 feet wide for one block on either side of North and South road. A committee of Brentwood citizens is seeking donation of land to provide a 100-foot right-of-way throughout that town.

Completion of the widening of St. Charles road from 20 to 40 feet between the Wellston-St. Louis line and No. 77 near Pattonville, a distance of six miles. One stretch of about two miles has been finished.

Pavement of Page avenue, 56 feet wide, between the city limits and approximately Ferguson avenue, with a new cut-off about three-quarters of a mile long northwestward from the latter point to St. Charles road.

Widening of Gravois road to 66 feet for one mile between the city limits and Webster road.

Construction of a new road from No. 99 at Hall avenue east to the Chain of Rocks Bridge.

Rudder said all work in the program was expected to start within the next three or four months, as contracts will be awarded soon, and that at least two-thirds, if not all, should be completed this year.

Recently St. Louis County announced a $2,000,000 bond program for improving 121 1/2 miles of roads this year, a number of the county projects dovetailing with the State plans. Harland Bartholomew, planning specialist, who is drawing up a comprehensive scheme of county roads, conferred on details Friday with Rudder, County Highway Engineer Jablonsky and Chief Engineer Cutler of the State Highway Department.

RECEIVERSHIP SUIT AGAINST DE FOREST RADIO CORPORATION

Owner of 1300 Shares of Stock in Concern Starts Court Action.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 25.—An order to show cause on Feb. 4 why a receiver should not be appointed for the De Forest Radio Corporation, of Jersey City, was obtained in Chancery Court today by H. C. Von Korff, Staten Island, N. Y., owner of 1300 shares of common stock in the concern.

Today's move was the second against large New Jersey radio corporations within a week, and it is the second against the De Forest corporation within recent years. The first ended when creditors took over the firm and reorganized it. The corporation, which manufactures radio tubes and accessory equipment, has not paid dividends, today's petition charges, and asserts the Jersey City plant is shut down.

Proposes W. J. Bryan Monument.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A monument at the Capital for William Jennings Bryan was proposed in a bill today by Senator Howell (Rep.), Nebraska. The measure called attention to Bryan's service in the House, his three campaigns for the Presidency and his activity as Secretary of State in the Wilson Cabinet.

Clemenceau's Donkey Dies.
GISORS, France, Jan. 25.—Clemenceau's donkey has followed its master to the tomb. It died a few days after her thirtieth birthday. With the donkey the old Tiger made many a pleasant excursion in the Vexin country, when he lived at Beauronne, near here. Often seen waiting in the station yard for the arrival of the train from Paris, the Tiger's little equipage was well known throughout the region.

ST. LOUIS PARTY TO LEAVE ON MEXICAN TOUR FEB. 18

Will Be Received by President, Visit Famous Places and Take in Mardi Gras.

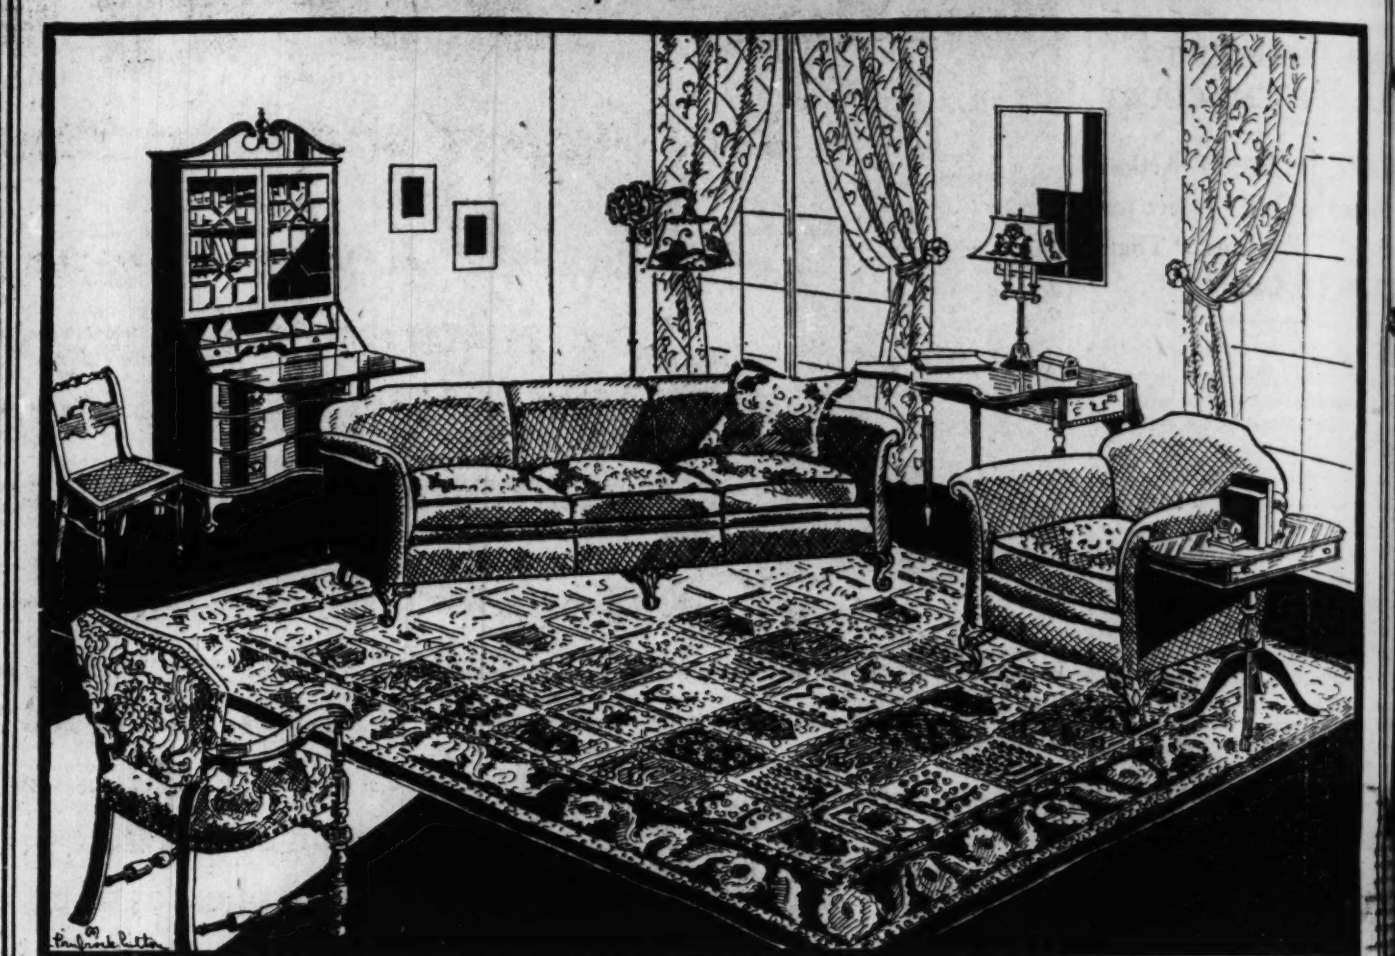

To improve mutual understanding and trade relations between St. Louis and the Republic of Mexico, a party of business and professional men and women will leave here Feb. 18 for Mexico City under auspices of the Advertising Club. Accommodations for 160 persons have been arranged. The trip will occupy 14 days. En route the party will make brief stops at Dallas, Fort Worth and San Antonio, Tex., crossing the border at Laredo on Feb. 21. After stopping at Monterey, industrial city and capital of Nuevo Leon, the travelers will reach the City of Mexico on the evening of Feb. 22. At the Mexican capital, the visitors will be received by the President. During their four days' stay they will visit the nearby city of Puebla, religious center of Mexico; the pyramid of Cholula, the Pyramids of the Sun and Moon at San Juan Teotihuacan, the Shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe, the monastery at Ajmalman and the Floating Gardens of Xochimilco. They will return by way of Matamoros, Tamaulipas and Brownsville, Tex., making an automobile tour of the lower Rio Grande valley and visiting Mission, McAllen and Harlingen, Tex. After participating in the Mardi Gras celebration at New Orleans, the tourists will return to St. Louis on March 6.

NUMBER OF CRIMES REDUCED
Gerk Considers Relief of Poor an Aid in Lowering Rate.
Relief work by policemen is an aid to crime reduction, particularly robbery, in the opinion of Chief of Police Gerk. In the week ending last Tuesday there were 219 crimes committed in the city, as compared with 374 during the corresponding period last year. Gerk has had his men make every possible effort to relieve destitute persons during the severe weather.

The Biggest and Most Timely Sale We Ever Held!

to Profit, at our Greatest Bargain Festival!*

BERKEY and GAY Furniture Company of Grand Rapids famous for their supreme quality were recently acquired by the Simmons Company of Chicago. This tremendous merger united two of the giants of the Furniture Industry and involved more or less sweeping changes in selling policies. It takes time to work out new merchandising plans and in the meanwhile Berkey and Gays' factories operating at peak production were turning out thousands of dollars worth of furniture daily. Suddenly the New Directors were confronted with rapidly accumulating stocks before they had definitely completed their new selling contacts.

Lammert's Take Over Surplus Stocks

Quick action was needed. Lammert's have been for years the largest outlet for Berkey and Gay in the United States. These surplus stocks of Berkey and Gay Furniture are offered to the public on a price basis previously unheard of. We welcome the opportunity because, representing the most advantageous purchase we ever encountered, it unfolds to the furniture buyers of St. Louis the greatest bargains it has ever been our privilege to offer.

Reductions Ranging from 25 to 50%

Berkey and Gay Furniture even at regular prices has set for itself an enviable standard of value. In ordinary sale periods a reduction of 10% was sufficient to stimulate unusual buying activity. Imagine then the sensation created by reductions at the height of the season of 25, 33½, 40 and even 50%.

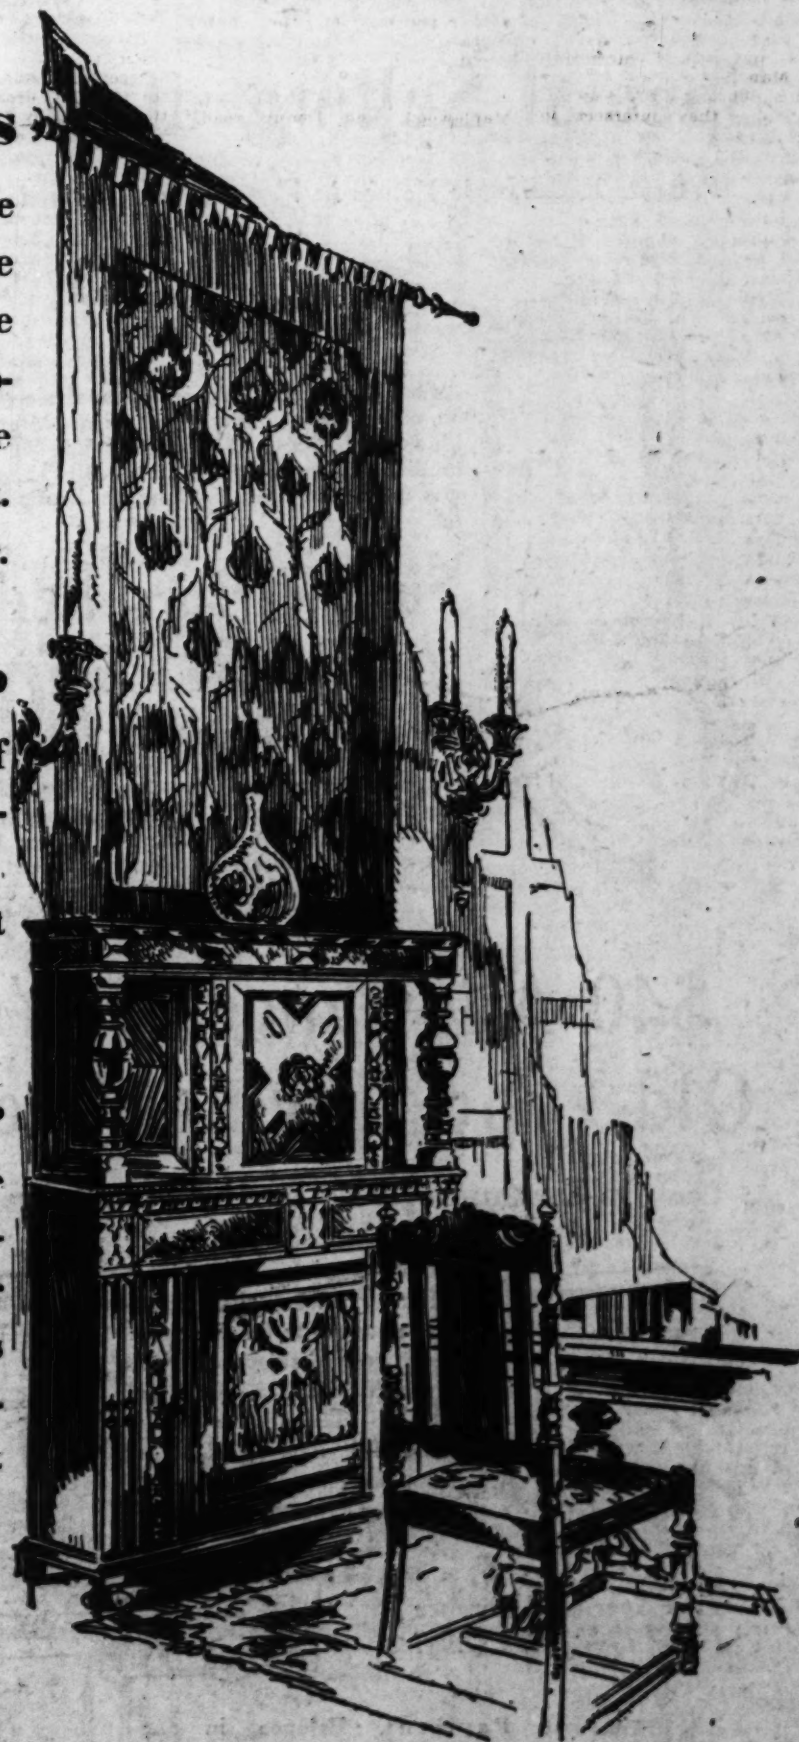

The average reduction is about 40%.

And this is all the newest style furniture mind you. We try to be conservative in our statements but it is difficult to restrain our enthusiasm when an event of this magnitude occurs. Remember $391,000 worth of furniture is involved. Early inspection is invited. We anticipate tremendous crowds and we ask your indulgence if we are unable to give the usual prompt Lammert Service.

ECONOMIC RIVALRY CAUSE OF FILIPINO WEST COAST RIOTS

White Men Object to Foreign Labor That Works for Small Wages on Farm and in City.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25.—The coming of Filipinos into economic competition with white laborers has caused a series of small disturbances along the Pacific coast in the last few years, with a serious situation developed in the Pajaro Valley of California where lettuce is now being harvested.

A consensus compiled by students of Oriental immigration indicates that economic competition is the real trouble though augmented by the Filipinos alleged attentions to white girls.

Three disturbances since last September—at Wenatchee and Cashmere, Wash.; Exeter, Cal., and the present one at Watsonville—were primarily caused by white men objecting to Filipino labor in orchards and on farms. Of the three, Watsonville's clash was the most serious with the death of one Filipino, the stabbing of a white man at San Jose and injuries inflicted on both sides in gang fights.

Watsonville's tense situation was created when a white man objected to the employment of white girls as dance partners of the Orientals to a Filipino club house just outside the city. On other occasions a similar situation has led to fighting, deportation of Filipino colonies to other parts and arrests. While leaders of the islands deplore the increased exodus of Filipino youths, it is conservatively estimated that more than 65,000 Filipinos are now in the three States on the Pacific seaboard with an annual increase of 12,000. The newcomers usually have two avenues of employment—domestic service and farm work. At first the majority seek the fields and many become confirmed "fruit tramps."

Many of them soon return to the larger centers of population looking for "white collar" jobs. They offer their services for much less than white men will accept as wages. The Filipinos will promise to do two jobs for the wages of one; they offer to work as bus boys in restaurants at a low figure; run elevators, enter domestic service, act as janitors or any other job for which they are fitted. Hundreds of them are employed in hospitals. Thus, students agree, an economic problem is confronted in the city as well as the country.

In the fields a similar situation exists with the Filipinos accepting a wage far below the average pay the white workers can accept and remain independent. In the huge canneries of the West, similar conditions are found with Filipinos working next to white men and girls. It is in cannery work that the smoldering enmity most often comes to the surface, as the Filipinos lavish gifts upon the girls.

Many of the immigrants hire out in groups to orchardists and other agricultural enterprises. Fruit workers are migratory, starting with handling crops in the Imperial Valley of California in the spring and moving northward until the Wenatchee apple orchards are ready to be plucked. In winter there is a general exodus to the cities.

It is pointed out that the Filipinos occupy a peculiar position in the eyes of the Federal Government. In 1924 legislation was enacted to exclude all aliens who were ineligible to citizenship. Filipinos come under that classification but courts have ruled that as citizens of a subject country they are entitled to free entry to the United States without restriction. A number of associations and leagues have been formed on the Pacific coast to study the situation both in its economic and in its social aspects.

OPERA "SADKO" PRESENTED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—In a setting representing the ancient city of Novgorod and the underocean palace of the king of the sea, the Metropolitan Opera Company presented Rimsky-Korsakov's opera "Sadko" today for the first time in America.

A ballet of sea maidens and ocean creatures, dancing in the illusion of rippling waters, skimmed over the stage to the strains of Russian music. Sailors piloted merchant ships back and forth through canvas waves, and crowds of comedians and clowns danced about the wharves in presentation of the fantastic tale woven around the singer, Sadko.

Edward Johnson, American tenor, sang the title role. Editha Fleischner appeared in the soprano role of Volkova, and Mrs. Bourskaya as Lioubava Bouskayeva. Tullio Serafin conducted.

The audience crowding the "Golden Horseshoe," the orchestra, the galleries and even the standing room to the doors, gave an enthusiastic reception to the opera, that has been hailed as, scenically, the most brilliant of Rimsky-Korsakov's works.

The opera, which was composed in 1898 when Rimsky-Korsakov was hailed as a master of his craft, took its musical nucleus from the symphonic poem "Sadko," which the Russian composer previously had written.

PARIS SAID TO HAVE DECIDED ON LONG SKIRTS FOR SPRING

Five Inches Below Knee to Ankle Reported to Be Modish Length; Buyers There for Showing.

PARIS, Jan. 25.—With hundreds of American buyers here for the annual showing of spring styles advance information indicates that the smartest frocks in Paris are definitely long—from five inches below the knee to the ankle.

The "five-inch" dresses are designed for street and afternoon wear, with slightly longer gowns for dinner, and those of extreme length for formal evening wear. If the Paris designers know what they are talking about, the ultra-short skirt is definitely passe.

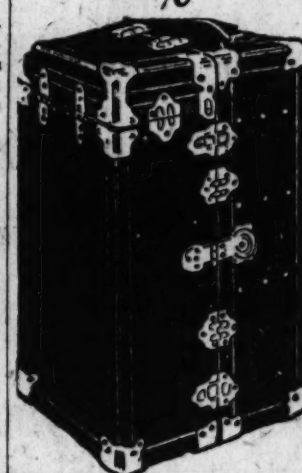

LAWYER SENTENCED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

John L. Bair, Former City Attorney of Brentwood Gets Two Years.

John T. Baird, former City Attorney of Brentwood, was sentenced to two years in prison by Circuit Judge Nolte at Clayton yesterday, following his plea of guilty last Thursday to an embezzlement charge.

Plea for a parole, which Baird made following the sentence, was denied by three of the four county Circuit Judges, sitting as a parole board.

POWYS IS DEBUNKER OF DEBUNKERS, HE SAYS

Modernists in Religion His Favorite Game, British Lecturer Declares.

"My role," said John Cowper Powys, "is debunking the debunkers."

"My favorite target is the modernist movement in religion; those preachers who attack fundamentalism and get an audience by preaching ethical uplift and sneering at the old dogmas. My opinion, of course, is that the old dogmas should be studied with infinite interest, like the royal family of England, or old monasteries or old pictures."

"It is possible that one is much nearer the truth if he can say the creed—even the Athanasian creed—if he ponders each word of it, than if he just talks about 'fatherhood of God—brotherhood of man.'"

Powys, English lecturer and author, here to speak tonight at the Y. M. H. A. Forum and tomorrow morning at the Junior League, devoted a part of the afternoon to autographing copies of his recent book, "The Meaning of Culture," at the Doubleday-Doran shop. The business, irksome to some writers, was a pleasure to him in meeting varied persons with a common interest.

Culture a Smoke Screen.
"Culture is a smoke screen," he asserted. "I had to write a book about 'culture,' and so I twisted the word to cover my own philosophy of life. Nobody likes the word, of course. It is snobbish and vague—a smoke screen."

"It does not appear certain to me that 'prejudices' should be cleared away as soon as enlightenment discovers them. Perhaps they should be fostered."

"Broadmindedness is a thing that rouses antagonism in me. My aim is to be revolutionary and reactionary at the same time, and so outflank the 'broadminded' on all sides. Wisdom is not in a dusty middle course, but in the two flaming extremes."

"In England it is the high church people who are the most religious, the most socialist—the real Bolsheviks—who have always been most ready to walk side by side, helpfully, with the poor."

A Thrust at Modernists.
"I should hate to put a spoke in the wheel of any quiet, really good people, but I am by no means sure that all modernists are that sort. Some of the followers of 'fatherhood of God—brotherhood of man' may be quite as bad as Sinclair Lewis' terrible clergyman."

He made it clear, in case it could be anything else, that his interest was rather in mankind than in mankind's pure wickedness, and it was not from the ethical standpoint that he asked:

"Suppose a man were cruelly tempted to betray his best friend by making love to his wife—do you think a faith in 'the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man' would keep him from it?"

U. S. TO DROP SUIT AGAINST A. M. PALMER

Sought to Recover $5,500-000 from Former Alien Property Custodian and Associates in Bosch Deal.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A proceeding brought by the Government against A. Mitchell Palmer, war time Alien Property Custodian and later Attorney General, and several of his associates, alleging they had committed wrongful acts in the seizure and subsequent sale of the Bosch Magneto Co., was ordered discontinued today by Attorney General Mitchell.

The complaint to be dismissed sought to recover $5,500,000 from Palmer, Francis P. Garvan, who succeeded him as Alien Property Custodian, Martin E. Kern, Arthur T. Murray, the Chase Securities Co., Henry Hornblower, and other partners of the investment house of Hornblower & Weeks. All were either officials of the Government with responsibility for portions of the transaction or associated as purchasers of the enterprise after its seizure.

"In January, 1919, during the incumbency of A. Mitchell Palmer as Alien Property Custodian, the custodian sold the shares of the Bosch Magneto Co. to Martin E. Kern for $4,150,000," the Attorney General's statement explaining the action said.

Action Brought in 1926. "The action about to be dismissed was brought in 1926 on the theory that the defendants had conspired to cause these shares and certain patents to be sold by the Custodian for less than their fair value and recovery was sought for the difference between the selling price and the then fair value of the shares, the amount demanded in the bill of complaint being approximately $5,500,000."

It had been determined after institution of the proceedings, Mitchell's statement continued, that "the financial interest of the United States is now negligible" in any amount that might be recovered, because "only one of the persons who owned the stock at the time of the seizure has been found to have had the status of an enemy alien." The former owners of the seized stock who would have been benefited by the recovery, it was added, "recently made a settlement among themselves covering this controversy and other related matters" and now desire that the litigation be concluded.

No Evidence of Wrongdoing. "It is only fair to say that on consideration of all the evidence which the Government has been able to adduce," the Attorney General said in completing the account, "three of the four special assistants to the Attorney General who had charge of this litigation unite in the conclusion that the evidence does not support the claim that any of these public officials were guilty of any wrongdoing. No evidence of any kind has been adduced to show that any of them profited in any way as a result of the sale." The proceeding as to the Bosch Magneto Co. was one of the last seizures of the Alien Property Custodian. It was instituted after a decade investigation into the conduct of the Department of Justice under Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney General, and has been pending in the Federal District Court for Massachusetts, though no phases of it had reached a trial stage prior to the dismissal order today.

Statement by Former Custodian Francis P. Garvan. By the Associated Press.

ROSLYN, N. Y., Jan. 25.—Francis P. Garvan, former Alien Property Custodian, tonight made the following comment regarding the discontinuance order of Attorney General Mitchell in the Bosch Magneto case: "The Germans have won out. The Government now asks to discontinue the case, but perhaps the case is not over yet. Perhaps the people of this country are entitled to know the full history of this remarkable case and its significance to their welfare."

"Today in Boston the courts released my testimony which concluded the case. It is being copied and will be available tomorrow. Perhaps on Monday we may be able to speak of the next step."

The testimony to which Garvan referred was taken in his Long Island home, "Roslyn House," in the form of a deposition which was to be presented to the United States District Court at Boston. Garvan was in ill-health at the time.

LAWYERS VOTE ON SENTENCE. By the Associated Press.

BETHANY, Mo., Jan. 25.—Lawyers fixed the sentence here today when Frank Miller, 23 years old, of Erie, Pa., charged with burglary, pleaded guilty. He was arrested at Blytheville after robbing five stores the night of Dec. 14. Most of the loot was clothing and when captured in the motor of a hay barn Miller was wearing seven sweaters.

GOLFER'S ASHES LAID UNDER TREE HE NEVER MISSED

Scattered on Links at Surbiton, England, Near Beech That Spoiled His Play.

By the Associated Press.

SURBITON, England, Jan. 25.—Golfers on the Surbiton Links, in the London metropolitan area, halted their game today for one of the most unusual ceremonies that ever occurred on a golf course.

Standing silent, they watched the sprinkling of the ashes of their oldest member, T. F. Halliburton, under a beech tree on the first and eighteenth fairways.

Halliburton, who at 73 was a golfing devotee, frequently hit his tree in playing either of these holes. It was his last request that his ashes be sprinkled beneath it. Dr. Harry Cooper, Halliburton's friend, performed the ceremony.

NEGRO WHO SHOT JEWELER GETS 20-YEAR SENTENCE

Convicted of Wounding Proprietor of Franklin Avenue Store.

By the Associated Press.

William Ivory, 24-year-old Negro, 2031 Biddle street, was sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary Friday night, by a jury in Circuit Judge Calhoun's court, which found him guilty of assault with intent to kill, after only 10 minutes of deliberation. Maximum sentence on the charge is life imprisonment.

Ivory was identified by Nathan Lisak, proprietor of a jewelry store at 1208 Franklin avenue, as the man who shot him twice at his store last Nov. 18, when he failed to obey an order to remove a ring from the show window. One of the shots inflicted a minor scalp wound and the other a serious neck injury. Ivory was also identified by a taxicab driver who brought him to the store.

SIX ALABAMA DEPUTIES HELD ON DRY CHARGES

Arrests Follow Grand Jury Investigation; Another Assailed of Assault.

By the Associated Press.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 25.—Six Tuscaloosa County Deputy Sheriffs were arrested today on grand jury indictments charging them with prohibition law violations. A seventh deputy was indicted and arrested for assault and battery.

Sheriff Foster King said the indictments were the result of a grand jury investigation which he had asked. County Solicitor Edward De Graffenreid also said the indictments were the result of a grand jury investigation which he had asked. County Solicitor Edward De Graffenreid also said the indictments were the result of a grand jury investigation which he had asked.

The officers indicted for prohibition violation are Waldo Morrison, John Payne, Floyd Pitts, C. J. Stallworth, E. H. Henderson and Aubrey Payne.

The Sheriff announced that he had revoked the commissions of the men. They were released under bonds totaling $15,000.

The seventh deputy indicted was Lee Ray, stationed at Brookwood. The assault and battery charge was the result of a fight at Brookwood last Monday in which four youths were injured. Ray alleged he was attacked by the youths when he sought to arrest one of them.

HEADS INSURE MANAGERS

Chester O. Fischer, general agent of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., was elected president of the St. Louis Life General Agents and Managers Association, Inc., at a meeting last week. Other officers elected are Richard Oliver, vice president; George Barnes, secretary-treasurer; and Flavell L. Wright, M. A. Nelson, Corwith Wagner and John J. Crowley, members of the Executive Committee.

TRUSTEESHIP FOR FOX VOTING STOCK PLANNED

Disclosure by Undermyer Follows Entering of Default Judgment for $342,158.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Samuel Undermyer, counsel for the Fox Film Corporation, disclosed today that plans were pending for a trusteeship for the class B (voting) stock of the corporation. The statement was contained in a disclosure that followed the entering of a default judgment for $342,158 against the corporation in the Supreme Court.

Undermyer said friends of William Fox had arranged to pay and take over the judgment so that there would be no interference with "pending plans for trusteeing the class B stock and refinancing the company, all of which looks very favorable."

Thursday a trusteeship for the Fox Film Corporation was proposed as an alternative to receivership action, but Fox declined to accept that compromise and said he would fight the receivership.

Undermyer said he "hoped and believed" that the next few days would see a solution of the company's troubles.

The judgment entered today was on a promissory note for $450,000 given to the Public National Bank and Trust Co. of New York on Dec. 3. Attorneys for the bank said $109,285 had been paid on the note when suit was started and $1638 paid since.

DIRIGIBLE ON TEST CRUISE

Los Angeles Maneuvered by Radio Compass.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 25.—The dirigible Los Angeles was maneuvered by radio compass test maneuvers in a radio compass test maneuver, leaving the marine station at Parris Island, S. C., at 10:13 o'clock this morning, the ship arrived over this city at 1:15 p. m., appearing at St. Augustine a little more than an hour later.

The dirigible is expected to be back at Parris Island at sunrise tomorrow.

U. S. CENSUS OF MANUFACTURE AND SALES BEGUN IN ST. LOUIS

Distribution Figures Taken First Time by Special Agent and His Staff.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Special Agent of the Census Bureau, arrived yesterday to start a census of manufacturing and distribution, the latter a feature of the Government census service.

Data will be collected, said, on all sales in the United States, wholesale and retail, on sales of raw materials as well as manufactured goods and on stocks. Statistics on manufacturing have been collected every year since 1929, but sales figures never have been collected before.

The work will require from five to six months, Wood said, and will collect data in St. Louis, Missouri, Jefferson County, Mo., and St. Clair and Madison counties, Illinois. The population census, to be handled by a separate staff of enumerators, will start April 1.

MORE FACTS ON NEWSPAPER OWNERSHIP

Ownership Would Be Further Revealed by New Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A bill to require newspapers to disclose their real ownership, supplementing existing law, was favorably reported to the Senate today by Chairman Phillips of the Postoffice Committee. The present law requires that a certificate of ownership of publications, including names of the editor, publisher, business manager, stockholders, known bond holders and holders of securities, be filed with the Postmaster-General.

The bill would require such additional information about ownership as the Postmaster-General might request. "While postoffice officials never attempt to ascertain the real ownership of newspapers," Phillips said in a statement, "in cases where security holders appear upon companies' books as trustees, some other fiduciary relation, information is not required by law and consequently is seldom obtainable."

U. S. CENSUS OF MANUFACTURE AND SALES BEGUN IN ST. LOUIS

First Time by Special Agent and His Staff. Samuel W. Wood, chief agent of the Census Bureau, arrived yesterday to begin the work of manufacturing and distribution of the census of the Government service.

Data will be collected, Wood said, on all sales in the United States, wholesale and retail, on sales of raw materials and on sales of manufactured goods and services. Statistics on manufacturing have been compiled every year since 1920, but sales figures have never been collected before. The work will require from five to six months. Wood and his staff will collect data in St. Louis, Missouri, Jefferson County, Mo., and St. Clair and Madison Counties, Illinois. The population census, to be handled by a separate staff of enumerators, will start April 1.

MORE FACTS ON NEWSPAPER OWNERSHIP WOULD BE FURTHER REVEALED BY NEW BILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A bill to require newspapers to disclose their ownership, supplementing existing law, was favorably reported to the Senate today by Chairman Phipps of the Postoffice Committee. The present law requires that a certificate of ownership of publications, including names of the editor, publisher, business manager, stockholders, known bond holders and all known holders of securities, be filed with the Postmaster-General.

HOUSE GROUP TO CONSIDER CHANGES IN JADWIN PLAN

Chairman Reid Tells Hoover That Valley Residents Are Dissatisfied With Flood Control Scheme.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Revision of the Jadwin flood control plan for the Mississippi River was proposed to President Hoover today by Chairman Reid, of the House Flood Control Committee.

The Illinois Representative notified the Chief Executive at a conference that the Flood Control Committee would attempt to formulate legislation to bring about engineering changes in the flood control plan which would meet with the approval of the people in the section who are dissatisfied with the Jadwin plan.

"The people of the various sections of the Valley are dissatisfied and claim they will be in a worse condition from a flood standpoint than they are at the present time," Reid said in a statement. "They claim that the plan not only wrong from an engineering standpoint but needlessly destroys many thousands of acres of valuable land."

Reid said the ruling of the Federal Courts that land and flood rights had to be acquired by the Federal Government before project makes either a change in engineering plan necessary or will require the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars for the purchase of lands.

"The people of Missouri object," he continued, "to the taking of five miles of their property for a floodway to protect Cairo, Ill., and claim that even with the destruction of their land the city of Cairo will not be adequately protected."

"The committee will be glad to hear of any substitute for the Jadwin engineering plan that will not require so much land to be taken in Missouri for a floodway and yet give the city of Cairo adequate protection."

PROBLEM OF JURISDICTIONAL LABOR DISPUTES CONSIDERED

Subcommittee of Unions, Meeting at Tampa, Fla. Adjourns for 30 Days.

By the Associated Press. TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 25.—A subcommittee representing various branches of the laboring trades met today in a brief executive session today to consider plans for abolishment of jurisdictional disputes and adjourned for 30 days without making an announcement as to the exact nature of the program under consideration.

"We will not commit ourselves to any one plan until a number of them have been submitted to the subcommittee," said Oscar W. Rosenthal, Chicago, vice president of the National Association of Building Trades employees. "We are going about this matter with open minds and want employers, labor, the public or anyone interested to submit plans and help us with this most vital problem."

When members of the subcommittee finally agree on the best possible plan, it will be submitted to a meeting of all international unions to be held probably in Washington.

The sub-committee is composed of Michael J. McDonough, Oakland, Cal., and president-elect of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor; John J. Hyman, Boston, and Paul J. Morris, St. Louis, who represent the building trades department; and C. G. Norman, New York; J. J. Scully, Boston, and Oscar W. Rosenthal, Chicago, representing the National Association of Building Trades Employees.

Chinese Inspect Navy Yard.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 25.—A Chinese naval delegation, headed by Admiral Tu, which has been studying the training, organization and equipment of the United States Navy, today inspected the Portsmouth Naval Yard.

Rear Admiral W. W. Phelps escorted the visitors through the plant.

NO DISCOMFORT

Once a woman of her age had to be careful. Today she eats anything she wants! Takes a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet—and after eating distress vanishes.

Chew a Stuart's Tablet after the heartiest meal, and you, too, can smile at indigestion. Stops acid stomach disorders. A modern combination of Calcium Carbonate, Magnesia and other soothing, healing ingredients in the safe anti-acid (8½ times as effective as soda) offered in these tablets. "A sweet stomach for twenty-five cents."

MAKE THIS TEST!

Purchase a 50c. handy pocket tin of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at your druggist's, use them after meals and avoid the pains, discomforts and distresses due to indigestion. One Stuart's Tablet will neutralize several times its weight of acid material in the stomach.

ADMITTS HE SIGNED
BANK OFFICER'S NAME

Defendant in Flint, Mich., Embezzlement Case Says He Had Permission.

By the Associated Press.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 25.—Admission that he signed the name of John Storck, now vice president of the Union Industrial Bank of Flint, to a note for $550 and used the note as collateral in a stock transaction made under examination today by John S. DeCamp, on trial for embezzling $98,000 of the bank's funds. DeCamp asserted, however, that Storck had given him verbal authority to sign his name to the note. DeCamp is a former executive of the bank.

Asked what became of the stock he had bought by using the note, DeCamp testified he did not know. DeCamp denied any knowledge of the existence of a pool in the bank for the purchase of stock but a moment later when asked regarding a "triplicate" which bought stock, he said that Grant J. Brown, James H. Thompson and himself had been associated in the purchase of stock. He was asked if the funds of the bank had been used in buying stock and answered "not entirely."

Taking testimony was concluded at noon.

Judge James S. Parker put over the beginning of arguments until Monday. Eleven days have been consumed in hearing the testimony.

WALES BEATS LORD AT GOLF

British Crown Prince Getting Ready for Lion Hunt.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Jan. 25.—Preparatory to lion hunting, the Prince of Wales is getting his shooting eye in trim by golf. Today he took Lord Knollys into camp, winning 5 and 3, having received six strokes from Lord Knollys whose handicap is two.

The Prince executed a great recovery shot on the ninth hole where he drove into a bunker, but came out with a perfect shot for 150 yards, 10 feet from the pin.

The Prince has started the golf craze in the conservative Royal Cape Club which hitherto had followed the lead of the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews.

Cardinals Announce Spring Training Schedule of 28 Games

RED BIRDS TO PLAY A'S SIXTH DAY IN FLORIDA

Twenty-eight games, 15 of them in major league clubs, are on the spring exhibition schedule of the Cardinals announced last night by Secretary Clarence Lloyd. The league opponents will include the Boston Braves, Detroit Tigers, Philadelphia Phillies, New York Yankees and the St. Louis Browns. There will be two games with the Browns, constituting the final abbreviated spring series at Sportsman's Park. The Cardinals will also play the Philadelphia Phillies in eight spring contests. There also will be three games with the Tampa and two with the St. Louis Browns.

The 1929 spring training trip of the Cardinals will be unusual in that the entire squad will report to the training camp at Bradenton, Fla., on Jan. 26, a week later than usual because there will be no exhibition games during the trip. The Cardinals will play the Philadelphia Phillies at Bradenton, Fla., on Jan. 27, and the St. Louis Browns at St. Louis, Mo., on Jan. 28. The Cardinals will also play the Philadelphia Phillies at Bradenton, Fla., on Jan. 29, and the St. Louis Browns at St. Louis, Mo., on Jan. 30.

Pesek to Be Declared Champion If Wrestlers Dodge N. B. A. Tourney

Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Unless Dick Shikat, Jimmy Londos and Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight wrestling "eligibles" to the National Boxing Association's title elimination tournament, send in their entries and forfeit money by Feb. 1 midnight, John Pesek of Ravenna, Neb., will be declared world catch-as-catch-can champion.

If any one of the three men mentioned remains out and the others enter and go through with their assigned matches, the delinquent will be suspended indefinitely in 32 states.

Of the three men referred to, Sonnenberg claims the title by virtue of a victory over Ed Lewis. He is recognized in Massachusetts. Shikat is recognized champion in New York and Pennsylvania. Londos holds no direct claim to the title.

Pesek Posts Forfeit.

In an exclusive communication to the Post-Dispatch, yesterday, Secretary John W. Driskill of the N. B. A., replying to inquiries made by the Post-Dispatch, declared that, up to Jan. 25, John Pesek was the only wrestler of the five men named on Jan. 10 as eligible to compete for the world title who had come forward with the entry conditions. Pesek's entry, backed by $2500 appearance money, is now in the hands of the National Boxing Association, Secretary Driskill stated.

Driskill announced that a change in conditions, brought about by the defeat of one of the eligibles, Roy Steele, at Memphis, Jan. 16, at the hands of Shikat, had limited the tournament to four men, so that there will be no "bye," and Sonnenberg will have to wrestle in the first round, against an opponent whose name will be drawn.

One Objection Now Removed.

These conditions may clear up what promised to make for a walk-over for John Pesek. It was feared the tournament might go on the rocks because all of the eligibles, except Pesek, had objected to the N. B. A. letting Sonnenberg in on

CARNERA GOT $17,904 FOR PETERSEN BOUT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The business of fighting Primo Carnera, regardless of the outcome, threatens to develop a "nouveau riche" among the aimless wanderers in cauliflower patches from Maine to Mexico.

Like the gold rush of the Art Shires days, slightly frayed leather workers tore in upon the heels of Big Boy Peterson today to take their coats off the mammoth Italian as well as the magnificent gate receipts that promise to greet his tour of the flaic centers. Some of the eagerness was genuine desire to take a sock at such a huge target. Two hundred and seventy pounds of undeveloped heavy weight. But most of it followed the revelation of the earnings of Carnera and Peterson for one minute and 10 seconds of jousting in Madison Square Garden last night. $19,000 a minute for Peterson.

Peterson, it was solemnly announced, took his place among the highest of all paid athletes of the ring by drawing down $19,000 for a minute and 10 seconds of jousting in Madison Square Garden last night. $19,000 a minute for Peterson.

Lott Wins Canadian Indoor Tennis Title in 5-Set Match

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 25.—George Lott of Chicago, today won the Canadian indoor tennis singles championship, defeating Fritz Mercer of Bethlehem, Pa., in the final round, 5-7, 6-3, 1-6, 12-10, 6-4.

Lott had to stage a brilliant rally to win from Mercer. The Pennsylvanian took the first and third sets to lead by two sets to one. But Lott broke his rival's morale with a victory in the long-drawn-out fourth set which went 22 games before the Chicagoan won it at 12-10. Lott then ran out the fifth set at 6-4 to win match and championship.

Lott succeeded J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., as Canadian indoor title-holder. Hall defeated Lott in the final round last year, but was eliminated in the semifinal round the time by Mercer.

Mercur and Hall won the doubles championship, defeating Emmett Pare of Chicago, and Clifford Marsh of Buffalo, in the final round, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4. Only in the second set did Pare and Marsh give Mercur and Hall much opposition.

Y. M. H. A. FIVE TRIMS COLLINSVILLE, 49-30

In a free-scoring basketball game, Y. M. H. A. defeated the Red Rose Club of Collinsville on the Y. M. H. A. floor last night, 49-30.

Collinsville furnished the high individual scorer in Maurer, center, who had six field goals and three free throws for 15 points, half of his team's total. Jacobson, with 12 points, was high for the Y. M. H. A.

By Dent McSkimming.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 25.—By-Product, a 3-year-old filly which comes of an illustrious sire, Black Toney, outlasted the rush of Earl of Warwick, Fred Jr. and five others to win the Winter Garden claiming stakes, feature event of this afternoon's race program at the Fair Grounds track here. A big advantage in the weights enabled By-Product to hold on in the drive through the stretch when half a dozen horses closed the intervening gap, reducing a three-length lead to a short race, and winning the big portion of the $3000 stake, which amounted to $2550. C. B. Ramsey, owner of By-Product, lost his horse. The winner was claimed by J. G. Demarest, who had Woodbury in the race for $5000. Demarest got a filly which appears to be worth twice that sum.

Although there were four stake races on the card of seven events, the crowd of 4000 seemed to focus its attention on the Winter Garden stake. Even the late scratching of Stars and Bars and Arcurus failed to retard the interest. By-Product went to the post the favorite with Fred Jr. second choice and Layland third.

Jockey Verlyn Smith got By-Product out of the stall barrier unhindered and in even stride. He hurried the filly hard in the short run to the first turn, outstripping Layland and Bridgroom for the coveted lead position. Earl of Warwick and Broadacre were closest in pursuit of the three leaders in the chase through the backstretch and it appeared at the far turn as though either Bridgroom or Broadacre might move up to make it a real battle. However, Smith kept By-Product running evenly, hugging the rail.

Entering the stretch, the trailing horses closed on the leaders and Bridgroom, which was 5 lengths back at the half mile ground, and Earl of Warwick and Fred Jr. all at once found Fred Jr. was carrying 120 pounds and in this final drive the excess burden probably told the story. Earl of Warwick was second and Fred Jr. third. The time for the mile and a furlong was 1:53.5. The track was very fast. The winner paid $6.10 for $2.

Favorites were defeated in four of the five other races on the card. In the second race Double Heart and Panchito of the Three D's Stable ran one, two in front of the choice, Tantiu. Uluniu won his first purse of the winter meetings when he took the fourth. He paid $15.00 for $2. Hayes' Choice, at $15.10, in the fifth, was the only other winner to pay in double figures.

Bob Dalrymple of the Boston A. finished third, ahead of N. P. Halliwell of Harvard.

Russell Chapman of Bates College noted out Fall, Edwards, New York University's speedy Negro star, in the final of the Bishop Chivers 1000-yard run. Chapman's time was 2 minutes 16.2 seconds.

IF Primo Carnera comes through and makes good for the boys who dealt him that shower of bouquets yesterday, the heavyweight fight game can crawl out from under and crank up. The old machine had almost broken down, thanks to lack of material and promotional blunders. According to the scribes and Phalarises who had a 70-second fight with the huge Italian as he blasted "Big Boy" Peterson out of the picture at Madison Square Garden Friday night, Signor Carnera is "the goods."

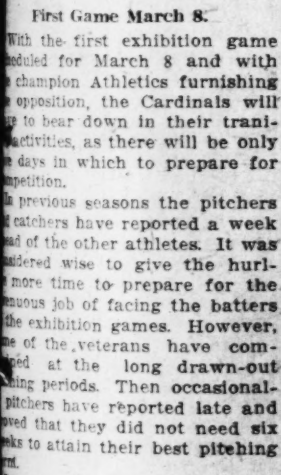

Black Jack Johnson is almost predilecting that Carnera will be champion. "If he gets three months' proper coaching," presumably under none other than Jack himself.

Carnera, they say, is fast, hits straight and has much more boxing sense than had been attributed to him. Instead of being clumsy, he is positively agile, we are told.

May Make Ring History.

ALLOWING for certain exaggeration and the fact that Peterson offered practically no opposition, it nevertheless appears that here is a possibility the like of which has not been seen in the ring before.

All the best trained candidates of history, men who could not scale down under 240 pounds, were of the sloppy, non-athletic type. That goes for the Carl Morris, the Willards, the Dunkhorsts and others. But here is a man who, photographs show, is a 270-pound athlete, without superfluous flesh anywhere. Some of his photos reveal that he is as symmetrically built as a lightweight. If Carnera can pedal his 270 pounds around the ring with the led by Larry Gouge and Billy Hill, the St. Louis Flyers shook off their scoring impotence last night and blasted out a 7-to-3 victory over St. Paul. It was the first triumph for Coach Jamieson's men in seven starts.

As a result of the victory, the Flyers advanced to a tie for fourth in the American Association, with a total of 25 points, more than the club earned last season.

Goyer scored three of the seven runs unassisted last night, while Hill scored two by himself and assisted in another. Nobby Clark, Chicago police scored the other two markers.

The Flyers went after St. Paul men the jump and settled the issue to its intent and purpose by going in five goals in the first period while holding the visitors offenseless.

Clark Scores First.

Nobby Clark started the scoring for his club with a goal of the same hand, when he did a solo rush through the St. Paul team and scored on a hard shot. Goyer followed with the same kind of a rush after a minute later, while after three minutes, Curly Head-worked the puck through the Paul defense and handed it over, who scored his second goal. The attack subsided for a while after that and then broke out in a rush toward the close of the period, for the Bruins scored on a dash after 16 minutes, while Billy Hill counted the fifth marker single-handed when the session had but eight seconds to go. The during the first period there was but one penalty assessed—that Boileau—but in the second half, the rougher play was used liberally with the result that men from each side were eased.

It was while Boileau was in the penalty box that St. Paul had its real opportunity to score, and took advantage of it. Cully Wilson, coach of the St. Paul club, batted his way down the ice, took a shot at the goal and when Kearney saved, he caught the puck and went home.

That was the extent of the scoring in this period, but in the third period goals were more numerous, six in all.

LOW GEAR CAPTURES HANDICAP BY A LENGTH

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Jan. 25.—Over a lightening-fast track and before a crowd estimated at 10,000, A. Wentzel's colt, Low Gear, scored his second straight victory of the meeting in taking first money in the Miami Herald Handicap here today.

The gelding son of Sir Martin probably ran the best race of his career. He picked up 150 pounds and taking the overland route, won going away at the end. Molasses Jane, making her first appearance of the season, was second and Dunmore third. The mile and 70 yards was run in the very fast time of 1:42 3-5, which is 2-5 of a second slower than the track record held by Old Slip.

Low Gear was always the choice, being backed down from 2-1 to 8-5 at the close. Hearde and Sand Fiddler, the Mullick Stable entry, alternated in the lead for the first seven furlongs, but in the stretch the field closed on them. Molasses Jane and Low Gear both moved at the same time and for a second Molasses Jane showed in front, but she could not hold her advantage nor stall off the determined dash of Low Gear. The latter slowly drew away to win by a length. Molasses Jane beat Dunmore four lengths for the place.

NORTH YPRES WINS AND PAYS $462.80 FOR $2

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 25.—North Ypres, a 3-year-old chestnut colt, won his first race of his career this afternoon at the Agua Caliente track and paid his backers $462.80 for a $2 mutual ticket. His place price was $35.20 and he paid $53.80 to show.

Ridden by Jockey D. Triett, North Ypres ran the five and one-half furlongs in 1:07 1-5.

North Ypres by North Star III, Ypres II, by the White Knight and owned by the Northway Stable, ran four races last year, finishing in the money once when he came in third. This was his first race this year. He was trained by E. L. Fitzgerald.

W. C. Andewich's My Dandy paying $11.60 for a $2 ticket won the feature attraction on today's program card. La Brue Stable's Lito was second and Hey Diddle Diddle was third. The time for the six furlongs sprint was 1:12 2-5. Ervast, the favorite, finished third.

My Dandy broke quickly and showing keen speed, winning by three lengths. Lito gained steadily and finished fast. Hey Diddle Diddle raced gamely to the finish. Ervast was blocked by the winner at the far turn and was eased up in the stretch.

LOTT AGAIN IS RANKED NO. 1 IN WESTERN TENNIS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—George M. Lott Jr. of Chicago held his top position in the Western Lawn Tennis Association's rankings for 1929, the official list revealed today. Johnny Hennessey of Indianapolis again was second.

Leaders in other events, listed by the association which includes Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio were: Men's doubles, George O'Connell and Fred Royer, Chicago; women's singles, Clara Louise Zinke, Cincinnati; women's doubles, Miss Zinke and Ruth Osterman, Cincinnati; junior singles, William Schommer, Milwaukee, Wis.; junior doubles, Fred Brace, Pontiac, Ill., and Nate Ganger, Cleveland; boys' singles, Frankie Parker, Milwaukee; boys' doubles, Parker and Robert Hutchinson, Lawrenceburg, Wis.; girls' singles, Muriel Adams, Indianapolis.

Lott and Hennessey, leaders in the men's double rankings in 1929, were not included in the 1929 rankings because they failed to compete in a representative number of doubles matches.

Miss Zinke also topped the women's single players in 1929 as well as the doubles division with Miss Osterman. All the leaders in the boys' and girls' classes are newcomers, most of the previous leaders having passed the age limit.

Muny Net Body Puts Restriction on Park Team Play

A rule barring private tennis club members, who also are members of part net clubs, from participation in inter-park team play has been adopted by the Municipal Tennis Association in annual executive session.

The new arrangement gives private club players a chance to get into the inter-park competition by resigning from the private organizations by May 1.

Martin J. Telle was re-elected president of the Muny body. Other officers named are Joseph Kelly, vice president, and Otto Thiele, secretary. Christian Stotie succeeds Adolph Frank as treasurer.

STEIN JUNIORS MEET
BOWLING MATCH

A special match game will be rolled on the Washington Alleys at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon with the Juliann Fives of the St. George Parish Alleys opposing the Otto Stein Jr., a picked team which will represent the Washington Alleys in the A. B. C. Tournament at Cleveland in March. Three games total pins will decide the winner. The Juliann, composed of young bowlers, came into prominence by winning second place in the team sweepstakes held at Vescovo's Alleys two weeks ago, besting some of the strongest clubs in the city with a total of 2913 pins. Their line-up will be composed of Erban Brunsman, George Kuehner, Jake Jennewein, Ernie Guenther and Buzz Tonkovic. The Stein Jr. will be composed of Bud Kaelin, Steve Kenny, Hank Lenz, Stanley Malchowicki and Otto Stein Jr.

Bowling Notes

An individual contest, on a handicap basis, began at the Rogers alleys last night and will continue tonight with squads taking alleys at 7 o'clock. This is the first handicap contest of the season on the Rogers alleys and a lower entry fee will prevail than in the contests for bowlers with averages of 185 and under which were formerly featured weekly. Reservations can be made at the alleys or by calling Garfield 5779.

Entries for Frank Heide's two-man classic, to be rolled on Heide's alleys Feb. 15 and 16, are coming in fast and a large entry is expected. The event will consist of six games per man instead of the customary eight games and the entry fee is $5 per man, bowling included. Entries may be filed by calling Grand 9139 or securing blanks from Heide at 2035 Park avenue. Among the teams entered are Jerry Ameling and Lee Martin, W. Glau and F. Joerges and B. Rice and E. Rice of the Witter Raza; J. Rohrbach and H. Readmon, H. Frederic and Bud Schmitt and E. Foerster and R. Guth of the Banner Sodas; Lee Gronck and Robert Bruce, Dennis Sweeney and M. Shevlin and Fred Zappala and partner.

A contest for bowlers with an average of 185 and under and one for bowlers with an average of 170 and under will be held at Nick's Recreation Parlor, 5411 Virginia avenue, tonight. Squads will bowl at 7 and 8 o'clock. For reservations call Riverside 9511.

The fourth annual South Side Handicap tournament is scheduled to begin at the Benton Park alleys Feb. 8. Entries are coming in fast and the tourney officials expect last year's record of 96 teams to be exceeded by about 50 teams. Entry fee is $1 per event and entries can be filed by calling Prospect 9480.

The Roberts took a lead of 56 pins over the Golden Eagles in the first half of their six-game total pin match. The Roberts rolled 2919 to 2863 for the Eagles on the Golden Eagle alleys. The second half of the match will be bowled on the German House alleys this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Banner Sodas, who have a victory over the Golden Eagles to their credit, will meet a band of Arway bowlers in a special three-game match at the Arway alleys this afternoon. The Banners will line line up as follows: J. Rohrbach, H. Frederic, R. Guth, B. Schmitt and H. Readmon, while their opponents will show the following lineup: W. Westerhoff, C. Glau, Fricke, W. Glau and F. Mataya.

Jerry Ludwig set a new individual three-game record in the West Florissant Business Men's League with a 721 total. Ludwig had games of 244, 265 and 212 and helped the North Side Chevrolet to increase their lead to three games over the Wendts.

Mrs. W. R. Smith led the individuals in the Women's Major City League on the Washington alleys Friday night, rolling 617 with games of 199, 213 and 214. She led the Bly Moss team to a two-game victory over the Martin-Breit. Mrs. Pingel led the losers with 522. The Mid City Five lost the odd game to the Associated Grocers in a close match, scoring 2677 to 2696. Miss Pio Schickel led the winners with 592, while Mrs. Colborn's 565 was high for the Mid City team. In the other matches, the Andersons won two games from the Hartmanns, and the Stein Juniors won two from the Lees. The high scores were: Mrs. Speck, 563; Miss Uhlen, 542; Mrs. Wilson, 534; Mrs. Wagstaff, 525; Miss Keating, 522; Mrs. Moore, 515, and Mrs. Peters, 505.

Results in the Outlying Banks League on the Florissant Recreation alleys were as follows: North-easterns 2, Cass 1; Natural Bridges 2, West St. Louis 1; Savings 3, Lindells 0; Lowells 2, Eastons 1. The team leaders were: Schroeder 555, Markey 536, Kern 424, Boehmer 562, Boundy 576, Helms 515, Wamhoff 513 and Langewach 556.

Virginia Hemenway Engaged to Wed
Paul Goessling

Announcement Made at Luncheon Given By Her Mother; Many Other Betrothals of Interest Announced.

FOLLOWING a host of late winter weddings with their attendant festivities comes the announcement of a number of interesting engagements.

Yesterday a popular member of the debutante group of two seasons ago made known news of her betrothal. At a luncheon given by her mother at their home, announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Virginia Hemenway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Donaldson Hemenway, 25 S. 10th place, and Paul Goessling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Val J. Goessling, 4016 Flora place.

Miss Hemenway attended Mary Institute and was graduated from Miss Hill's School of Great Barrington, Mass. The following year she spent traveling in Europe with her family. She made her formal bow at a reception given by her mother, and became a member of the Junior League. Miss Hemenway is a sister of Mrs. George D. Barnett and William Donaldson Hemenway Jr., who married Miss Betty Corby two years ago.

Mr. Goessling is a graduate of Washington University and is a member of the University Club. For several seasons he has been identified with the debutante set.

The luncheon guests were Miss Celeste and Miss Mary Louise Hammett, Miss Susie Singley, Miss Elizabeth Clark, Miss Jane Pirrung, Miss Margaret Ryan, Miss Edith Peters, Miss Mary Nuckerman, Miss Grace Switzer, Miss Elizabeth Dyer, Miss Mary Louise Scott, Miss Martha Hurley, Miss Frances Breck, Mrs. Dwyer Gardner, Mrs. Elliot Kingman Ludington, Mrs. William G. Weld, Mrs. Palmer Livingston Clarkson, Mrs. Henry Jocelyn Butler, Mrs. Wilson Lewis, Mrs. Stanley Moon, Mrs. David Teasdale, Mrs. Hemenway Jr. and Mrs. Gerald Goessling, sister-in-law of the prospective bridegroom. The wedding plans have not been announced.

Miss Kathleen Walker and Frank Edward Boling to Wed

MR. AND MRS. CYRUS M. WALKER of Kansas City, Mo., announce the engagement of their daughter, Katherine, to Frank Edward Boling, 7033 Lindell boulevard, formerly of Kansas City. The announcement was made last night by Mr. and Mrs. Walker at a dinner given in their home, which close friends of the engaged couple were invited. David L. Grant and Ralph Wood and the prospective bridegroom's parents, were present for the occasion.

Miss Walker attended the Baryton School in Kansas City and was later graduated from the Bennett School, Milbrook, N. Y. She is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Boling attended the University of Missouri and has been a resident of St. Louis for several years. The wedding probably will take place in the late spring. Mr. Boling and his bride will make their home in St. Louis.

Schuyler-Hall Wedding Feb. 1

INVITATIONS have been received from Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Thompson, 4211 M. Many St. Louisans At Miami Beach, Fla.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 25. ST. LOUIS persons, who have been arriving in large crowds this month, will be interested in the three largest balls of the season, which will take place soon. The Junior League ball will be held Feb. 8, in the Palm Gardens at the Roney Plaza. The Venetian Ball will be given by the Committee of 100 at the Nautilus Hotel, Feb. 14 and the annual costume ball of the Bath Club, a "circus night," Feb. 20.

Society spends at least two-thirds of its time in the open during the season here. In addition to activities such as polo, golf, tennis, riding, bathing and boating, affairs such as teas and tea-dances, and dinner-dances are held in the open in Miami Beach. Luncheon and bridge parties are also held out-of-doors.

A number of St. Louis people attended the openings of several of the most popular night clubs this week. The Roman Pools Casino, Deauville, Club Lido and Villa Venice are among those recently opened. The Bath Club dinner-dances Thursday night are popular with exclusive society and the tea-dances twice weekly at the Flamingo and Roney Plaza Hotels, are always well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Bruen were hosts to a large party at the opening dinner-dance at The Deauville this week. Their guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Watts, Mrs. Helen Watts Jones and Willard Cox of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. Salling W. Baruch, Salling W. Baruch Jr., and William Pratt of New York, who are well known socially in St. Louis.

Robert W. Brooks and his daughter, Miss Florence Brooks, arrived this week at the Roney Plaza from St. Louis.

An interesting party held at the Bath Club dinner-dance this week included Mr. and Mrs. John B. Denvir and their daughter, Mrs. Jane Parsons of St. Louis. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Watts and their daughter, Mrs. Helen Jones, John T. Davis, Claude S. Kennerly, Arthur C. Garrison, Peter Bernard Behr and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Mersman all of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Westlake, Mrs. Paul Brown, Mrs. Robert M. Brown, Mrs. Ida L. Keller and Mrs. A. M. Keller, all of St. Louis, have returned to the Roney Plaza from a visit in Cuba.

The St. Louis colony was augmented last week by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver J. Anderson and their children and Mrs. John S. Lionberger and her small daughter, who will spend part of the season at Olympia Beach. Others who will make Olympia Beach their headquarters for the season are Mr. and Mrs. Wooster Lambert and their small son, and Mr. and Mrs. Marion Lambert and baby daughter.

Miss Marjorie Little, Former St. Louisan, Engaged

THE engagement of Miss Marjorie Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alden H. Little of Chicago, formerly of St. Louis, and Henry Kidder Gilbert Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Gilbert of Chicago, was announced Friday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Tyrrell Williams, an aunt of the prospective bride, at her home, 443 Westgate avenue.

Miss Little, an attractive debutante in St. Louis a few seasons ago, is a graduate of Mary Institute and Ogontz School in Philadelphia. She traveled abroad for a year before her debut. She was one of the four special maids of honor to the queen at the Velled Prophet ball. She is a transfer member of the Chicago Junior League, from the St. Louis Chapter, in which she was prominently identified with its philanthropic work. Mr. Gilbert, who now makes his home in Newark, N. J., is an alumnus of the Hotchkiss School and Yale. He will take his bride East to reside after the wedding, which will be a notable social event in Chicago next June.

The guests at the luncheon were eight close friends of Miss Little, most of them contemporary debutantes. The announcement was made in verses attached to miniature bride's bouquets given as favors. The table, covered with pale green damask, was adorned with masses of yellow roses.

Mrs. Little and her daughter will depart tonight for their home.

Miss Celeste Grindon to Wed George Mockler Jr.

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR T. GRINDON, 7372 Sutherland avenue, Webster Groves, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Miss Celeste Grindon, and George Mockler Jr.

Miss Grindon is a graduate of Nerinx Hall and Webster College, and is a popular member of the younger social set. Her maternal grandfather was Rudolph Cherot, and her grandmother Louise Bourdon. Joseph Grindon was her paternal grandfather, and his wife was a member of the family of du Pavillon, of the early French settlers in St. Louis.

Mr. Mockler is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Mockler, 6017 Washington boulevard. He attended Washington University.

Dramatic Festival of Rosati-Kain Alumnae

THE Dramatic Club of Rosati-Kain alumnae announced last week the cast for the production of "Midsummer Night's Dream," to be given at the eighth annual dramatic festival of the club, Feb. 18, 19, 20 and 22, at St. Louis University auditorium. The purpose is to raise funds for the Catholic Girls' High School at Newstead avenue and Lindell boulevard. Among those who will appear in the play are Olivia Ojeman, Elizabeth White, Catherine Siemer, Margaret Maher, Lucienne Deschodt, Marguerite Nauman, Helen Jaggerman, Marie Lamper, Marie Poelker, Alice Craden, Wilhelm Muntch, Rosaline Madden, Eloise Krings, Dorothy Dolan, Elizabeth Popp, Esther Teehan, Lillian Zink and Sadie Hertz. The cast, which has been recruited from former graduates and pupils of the school, will number upwards of 75 members.

The Rosati-Kain orchestra will furnish the music. Miss Margaret De Runtz is president of the dramatic club and Miss Ruth Collins, treasurer of the festival fund. Miss Rosaline Madden is chairman of the play committee and Miss Lucienne Deschodt of the cast committee.

Fonbonne Mothers' Card Party. The Mothers' Club of Fonbonne College, Wydown and Big Bend boulevards, will hold its annual card party Saturday, March 1, in the gymnasium of the college. Members of the committee in charge are: Mrs. C. J. Scullin, chairman; Mrs. L. Schellcher, Mrs. T. Hanlon, Mrs. C. A. Schmidt, Mrs. A. S. Betz, Mrs. E. W. Stout, Mrs. G. D. Bicher, Mrs. A. Wagner, Mrs. P. Barrett, Mrs. T. M. Burmeister, Mrs. P. Baer, Mrs. G. Ernst and Mrs. J. O. Holton.

Mrs. Herbert Claiborne Pell, who is devoting her days to pallets and brushes, opened an exhibit at the Junior League clubhouse Thursday. One of the most interesting of her paintings is the "Russian-American Madonna," the models for which were her daughter, Mrs. John H. G. Pell, and her grandchild.

Another artist member of society is Miss Rhoda Low, whose exhibit of 40 water colors and a few etchings in her apartment on Tuesday was widely attended.

Delphians' French Program. A tea will be given by the Delphian Council of which Mrs. B. A. Thompson is president, Friday afternoon, Feb. 14, at Hamilton Avenue Christian Church. The program will be opened with a group of French songs, to be followed by a dramatic reading of the "Puppets of Fate," by Mrs. Donald MacDonald.

This story, which deals with the life of Napoleon and Josephine, was written by Mrs. MacDonald and presented in New York a few years ago. The program will close with the playing of the national hymn of France, "The Marseillaise," on the piano. Tea will be served in the church parlors.

Backgammon Revival At Palm Beach Party

PALE BEACH, Fla., Jan. 25. LATE January finds social affairs in Palm Beach on the crecendo. The past fortnight witnessed the arrival of distinguished folk from all parts of the United States and a sprinkling of important foreigners has imparted a cosmopolitan air.

The week was given an auspicious start with the reception and tea by John E. Irwin, New York, at the Everglades Club. More than 200 members of the exclusive set were in attendance.

Backgammon is being revived in Palm Beach this year. This old-fashioned game was enjoyed by many who attended the dinner dance at the Florida Embassy Club, with which Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fell, New York, entertained on Monday night in honor of Mrs. Allan Gouverneur Wellman, also of New York.

Sprays of real orange blossoms were scattered on the long table when Mrs. William F. Bode, Chicago, entertained on Tuesday with a bridge luncheon in the Venetian room of the Breakers Hotel.

Stylos for the entire year seem to be crystallized at Palm Beach. Not for years have such low-cut gowns prevailed for evening wear. The skirt has been given nearly all of the material in the frock worn by the fashionable woman from dusk to dawn. Flowered chiffons and satin vie for popularity. Miss Alice de La Mar, New York, wore a handsome white satin gown at the Colony Club during the week, while Mrs. Gilbert Miller, the former Kathryn Bache, New York, was in flowered chiffon. Mrs. Albert B. Dewey Jr., Chicago, was seen on the board walk wearing a white and black gown with a white slipper and carried an envelope bag to match.

Mrs. Frank Vernon Skiff, Short Hills, N. J., entertained 30 friends Wednesday, with a bridge luncheon in honor of her sister, Mrs. Gardner Pattison, also of Short Hills. Mrs. Charles M. Hall, Detroit, entertained 36 guests with luncheon and bridge Wednesday in honor of her sister, Mrs. Royal S. Sharp, Chicago.

Prince Leopold of Prussia left for Havana Tuesday night for a two weeks' stay. He intends returning to Palm Beach for a longer visit.

Count de Pedicaris has come from New York to join Countess Pedicaris, who is the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. P. P. Hoffman, Cincinnati, O., at the Breakers.

The debutante coterie was augmented during the week by Hope Bonnet, daughter of Dr. J. H. Bonnet, Thomas L. Bennet, and Rose Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Davis, all of New York. Both made their formal bows to society this season. Ann Rainey, New York, also is seen with the younger set. Miss Rainey entertained a company of 20 Wednesday night at the Colony Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaugnessy, whose marriage was an event of the early season in Palm Beach, have returned from their honeymoon and have taken a cottage for the season. Mrs. Shaugnessy was the former Mrs. Jessie Hood Bassett, Jackson, Mich.

Mrs. John Emerson (Anita Loe), and Nina Wilcox Putnam spend much time together. Patricia Ziegfeld is devoted to deep sea fishing and is the organizer of their yachting parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spindler, Wilmette, Ill., have joined the mid-Western colony at the Breakers. Arrivals from Michigan include Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Burden, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Farr, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Holley, Detroit; and Mrs. C. P. Downey and Mrs. W. K. Prudden, Lansing, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Garbisch (Bonnie Chrysler) passed through Palm Beach early in the week on the way from Nassau. They took time to dance and dine at the Colony Club and at the Bath and Tennis Club.

Mrs. Flo Ziegfeld (Billie Burke), Mrs. John Emerson (Anita Loe), and Nina Wilcox Putnam spend much time together. Patricia Ziegfeld is devoted to deep sea fishing and is the organizer of their yachting parties.

Mrs. Longworth at Party for Mrs. Gann

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. WASHINGTON society this week witnessed a meeting of Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister and official hostess of the Vice President, and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, wife of the Speaker of the House.

These two prominent figures in the capital's official society had met many times before at the White House and elsewhere, but not at a party given specially for either. The occasion was Tuesday night's reception at the Congressional Club in honor of the Vice President and Mrs. Gann, the invitations specifically setting forth this fact.

There were present many members of the Senate Women's Club, thought to be the real storm center in the Gann precedent controversy.

Vice President Curtis beamed in on the reception in the most pleasant manner, and everyone beamed back. He stood beside Mrs. Porter H. Dale, wife of the Vermont Senator and president of the Congressional Club. Next to him stood Mrs. Gann, and beyond her, Mrs. Charles P. George, his daughter, who had come to Washington for a short visit with him.

Mrs. Gann wore a clinging black velvet gown with its deep cream lace yoke. Mrs. George wore a gown of deep rose pink chiffon. Mrs. Longworth's gown was of black and rose brocade, over which was strewn a design of gold roses. There were flounces on the skirt and a bustle effect at the back. She carried under her arm a huge bag fashioned of the material of her gown, and she wore jewels.

She greeted the Vice President warmly, stopped to chat with him and then, after a longer chat with Mrs. Gann, if there was the slightest embarrassment, even those nearest were not able to detect it. There came a feeling that they might have been enjoying a big joke at the expense of the public.

Remaining more than an hour, Mrs. Longworth mingled with the guests and chatted, principally of her daughter, Paulina, who she said liked seeing her portrait by the artist at once. It is for the Hungarian artist, Miss Elena and Miss Berta de Hellebrant, sisters, the child has posed, each artist taking her from a different angle in a different mood and working in a different medium. Mrs. Longworth confessed to liking the less serious portrait better.

This seemed to be a week for artist exhibitions. The Minister of Austria and Mme. Froehlich gave an exhibition for Mr. R. Halder, Austrian portrait painter, who made a favorable impression with his characteristic portrait of Charles G. Dawes, painted while Mr. Dawes was Vice President. The only thing missing was the famous up-side-down-Dawes pipe.

There was a charming head of Mme. Froehlich, and, attracting particular attention, the portrait for which Munsell posed in the pipe. At the same hour, at the Mayflower Hotel, a Bulgarian artist, Prof. Michailow, held an exhibition under the direct patronage of the Ambassador of Germany and Frau von Fritzsche and Gaffron and the Minister of Bulgaria, Simon Radoff, and Mme. Radoff. There was no tea at this function, and Mrs. James J. Davis, most of the women of the diplomatic corps, society folk and artists wandered about at will, chatting about the paintings.

Naval Flyer to Wed. By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Lieut. Apollo Soucek of the navy, holder of the world's altitude record for seaplanes, is engaged to marry Miss Agnes Eleanor O'Connor of Washington and Wellsville, N. Y. Announcement of the engagement was made in Wellsville today by Miss O'Connor's father, Patrick L. O'Connor.

The setting for the ball is magnificent, carrying the spectators from South America through the other countries of the Western World.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy are coming from New York to join Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman in judging the costumes.

President and Mrs. Hoover were guests of honor at the dinner given Tuesday night by the Secretary of War and Mrs. Hurley.

While the outer world commented upon the scarcity of high officials at the dinner which the President and Mrs. Hoover gave for Vice President Curtis, the party in the Hurley home was no more official and included many guests from the Secretary's State, Oklahoma, Senator and Mrs. Thomas and Representative and Mrs. O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. William Skelly of Tulsa, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Phillips of Bartlesville, and Mr. and Mrs. John S. Darby of Muskogee were among the guests.

The Southern Society was host to all the state societies of the Capital at a reception and dance this week.

Miss Clara Bolling, niece of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, represented Alabama; Miss Mildred Huston, debutante daughter of Claudius H. Huston, chairman of the Republican National Committee, Tennessee; Miss Jane Sheppard, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Texas; Mrs. Arthur M. Hyde, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, Missouri.

Some of the other representatives were: Miss Effie Broadnax, Minnesota; Miss Ruth Ashton, California; Miss Ernest L. Jahnke, wife of the acting Secretary of the Navy, Louisiana; Mrs. Katharine Benson Langley, Kentucky; Miss Virginia Faust, Illinois; Miss Grace Roper, Massachusetts; Miss Sue Pollard, daughter of the Governor of Virginia, came from Richmond to represent that State.

One Dress and One Suit or Two Suits, at 2 for $25.

Come and See! The Dresses Speak for Themselves!

●● The bright, crispy, new selections and the wealth of colors and styles will inspire enthusiastic buying. We couldn't sell one of these dresses at half the sale price. While each dress costs you but $12.50 the "one-at-a-time" sale price would have to be dollars more. By selling two dresses or more than two to each purchaser, we sell much faster... thus the selling cost is lower, the volume of sales greater... we save and you save. When you see these dresses you'll probably want to provide for all Spring, however, if you know your limit is one dress, shop with someone else and divide the cost at 2 for $25.

The party will be given at the home of Mrs. C. H. Christie, 5 South Moreland avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

A dramatic pageant, "The Coming of Peace," portraying the aims of the naval disarmament conference being held in London, will be given under the auspices of Kirkwood League of Women Voters at the Parish House tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. This pageant was written by Mrs. J. H. Miner of Kirkwood and she is directing it with the assistance of Miss Irma Summa. The pageant will be given following a luncheon to be held at the parish house. There is no charge for the play. Mrs. Robert Metcalfe is receiving reservation for the luncheon.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Kirkwood Presbyterian Church will hold its annual praise meeting this morning at the regular hour of service. The Rev. Francis S. Downs of New York City, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, will be the speaker.

Daniel M. Grisom, who has lived for a number of years in Kirkwood, the last 20 of which have been spent at the Old Folks Home of St. Louis County, is holding an informal reception this afternoon in celebration of his 101st birthday. Besides the many friends in Kirkwood to call, there will be several from St. Louis, one of whom, George D. Markham, has sent him the following greeting: "I trust that the reason the good Lord leaves you so long on earth is because you are an encouraging example to the rest of us, and not for the reason which George Eliot put into the mouth of one of her characters, who said 'seems as though people that ain't wanted this side of Jordan, ain't wanted the other side either.'"

Mr. Grisom is to be presented with a large birthday cake with candles and a bouquet of 101 red roses.

Mrs. Ralph Graves of Osage Hills entertained with a four-table bridge party Sunday evening.

Mrs. De France Evans of South Geyer road has recently returned from a visit with her parents at Prophetstown, Ill.

"Hair that fairly sparkles with new life and lustre!"

It's important to have your hair arranged to suit your type. The effect is lost, though, unless your hair is kept soft, lustrous, abundant. This is easily done. A million busy women and girls know how. They put a little Danderine on the brush each time they arrange their hair. Try Danderine tonight and see how marvelously it cleanses your hair; gives it new life and lustre. Danderine dissolves dandruff; soothes, heals the scalp; stimulates the growth of long, silky, abundant hair. It makes the hair easy to manage; holds it in place for hours. Waves "set" with it, look nicer and stay in longer! Five million bottles used a year proves its popularity!

ADVERTISING SIMPLE HOME MIXTURE DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Cincinnati Barber Tells How Any One Can Prepare It in 5 Minutes.

Any man or woman can easily look twenty years younger by simply darkening their gray, faded, or streaky hair. This is now easy to accomplish with a recipe given by a well known Cincinnati barber.

Simply take a half-pint of water, add one ounce of bay rum, 14 ounces of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound. Shake and it is ready to use. These ingredients can be bought at drug stores at trifling cost.

Applied to the hair twice weekly this delightful mixture quickly gives the desired shade. It is easy to use, is not sticky or greasy, will not color the scalp and does not rub off.

Legge Busy on Farm Problem A Tough Job Calling for And Lots of It—

'Safe and Sane' or 'Bolshevistic,' 1000-a-Year Man Purposes to Imitate Whether They Like

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

PRESIDENT HOOVER in June of last year deferred farm bill, which authorized the appointment of a Farm Board on whose nine members would be hauling the farmer out of the economic morass.

Soon afterward, according to the story of the following incident occurred in the William Alexander Legge, president of the International Association of Business Executives, a 40-year-old man, encountered an old friend wandering about the city.

"What are you doing here, Alec?" the friend inquired.

"Oh, the President sent for me," replied Legge. "He wants me to go on that crazy Farm Board of his."

"Are you going to do it?" asked his friend.

"I certainly am not. I've got a perfectly sensible job in Chicago and I intend to stick to it," was the reply. "I'm on my way over to the White House to tell the President so."

Several hours later the friend encountered Legge a second time. "I suppose you told the President you wouldn't have anything to do with his Farm Board," he remarked.

"Do you know what he was about to do?" exploded Legge. "He was about to give the chairmanship to that wild-eyed fellow, so I talked him into giving it to me."

What a Sign of Relief!

That, so the legend goes, was how the Hoover administration acquired what is generally regarded now as its most interesting and picturesque figure. Whether it is true or not, the fact remains that a noted industrial magnate was suddenly catapulted into the leadership of the farm relief movement—a movement which in the minds of most conservative business men, has always been stamped with the label of radicalism.

What a sign of relief they must have heaved on learning that the job had been entrusted to a man whose safety and sanity was attested by the fact that he was not only a director in a bank and a railroad, but for seven years had been president of one of the largest manufacturing corporations in the world.

The "wild-eyed" man whom the story names as Hoover's original choice for the chairmanship is known as a somewhat radical leader in the farm co-operative movement, and there is no doubt that his appointment would have been far more acceptable to the farm organizations in the West and South. Indeed, the announcement that the head of the "Harvester Trust" had been chosen to lead the new Farm Board served to confirm the worst fears of many members of the farm bloc in Congress.

This impression was not entirely erased by the new chairman's appearance before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, which had to consider his confirmation. Although he had resigned the presidency of the Harvester company, he admitted that he still owned stock having a market value of approximately $1,000,000. He added: "Obviously, it cost me a great deal less—and in my judgment it is worth a great deal less—an opinion which subsequent events in the stock market abundantly tended to confirm."

Nevertheless—to paraphrase a former President's remark on the subject of him—it looked to the committee like an awful lot of stock.

"Is it your present intention to continue ownership of that stock in the International Harvester Co.?" he was asked.

"As far as I know at the present time."

Legge Busy on Farm Problem, A Tough Job Calling for Nerve And Lots of It—He Has It Safe and Sane' or 'Bolshevistic,' Former $100,000-a-Year Man Purposes to Rout Speculators Whether They Like It or Not.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.

PRESIDENT HOOVER in June of last year signed the long-dormant farm bill, which authorized the appointment of a Federal Farm Board on whose nine members would fall the Herculean task of hauling the farmer out of the economic swamp in which he had floundered for the last 10 years.

Soon afterward, according to the story popular in Washington, the following incident occurred in the Willard Hotel:

Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester Co., a member of that select class of business executives known as $100,000-a-year-men, encountered an old friend wandering in the lobby.

"What are you doing here, Alex?" the friend inquired.

"Oh, the President sent for me," replied Legge. "He wants me to go on that crazy Farm Board of his."

"Are you going to do it?" asked his friend.

"I certainly am not. I've got a perfectly sensible job in Chicago and I intend to stick to it," was the reply. "I'm on my way over to the White House to tell the President so."

Several hours later the friend encountered Legge a second time.

"I suppose you told the President you wouldn't have anything to do with his Farm Board," he remarked.

"Do you know what he was about to do?" exploded Legge.

"He was about to give the chairmanship to that wild-eyed fellow," so I talked him into giving it to me."

That, so the legend goes, was how the Hoover administration acquired what is generally regarded now as its most interesting and picturesque figure.

Whether it is true or not, the fact remains that a noted industrial magnate was suddenly catapulted into the leadership of the farm relief movement—a movement which in the minds of most conservative business men, has always been stamped with the label of radicalism.

What a sigh of relief they must have heaved on learning that the job had been entrusted to a man whose safety and soundness was attested by the fact that he was not only a director in a bank and a railroad, but for seven years had been president of one of the largest manufacturing corporations in the world.

The "wild-eyed" man whom the farm names as Hoover's original choice for the chairmanship is known as a somewhat radical leader in the farm co-operative movement, and there is no doubt that his appointment would have been far more acceptable to the farm organizations in the West and South. Indeed, the announcement that the head of the "Harvester Trust" had been chosen to head the new Farm Board served to confirm the worst fears of many members of the farm bloc in Congress.

This impression was not entirely erased by the new chairman's appearance before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, which had to consider his confirmation. Although he had resigned the presidency of the Harvester company, he admitted that he still owned stock having a market value of approximately $1,000,000. He added: "Obviously, it cost me a great deal less—and in my judgment it is worth a great deal less—an opinion which subsequent events in the stock market abundantly tended to confirm."

Nevertheless—to paraphrase a former President's remark on the subject of ham—it looked to the committee like an awful lot of stock.

"Is it your present intention to continue ownership of that stock?" the International Harvester Co. was asked.

"So far as I know at the present time," was the composed rejoinder.

Many other questions were asked, some of them obviously framed for the purpose of showing that it was unlikely a man of Legge's corporate connections would be imbued with a deep sympathy for the man behind the plow.

Finally Legge made this little speech:

Legge Makes a Speech.

"When the farm organizations agreed that one business man should be appointed who would be familiar with the problems of agriculture, the field was rather limited. Few business men have broad contacts with farmers."

"For 30 years I have been dealing with them in every state in the Union, and in practically every county of every state. I think that perhaps I know more of them personally than any member of this committee. You know your own states better than I do, of course, but I happen to have an acquaintance with them in all sections. From my knowledge I do not believe the farmer wants a handout."

"You have said that in carrying out the provisions of the law we should have in mind the principles that are constructive and for the permanent benefit of agriculture, and that we should do it with a reasonable measure of safety. That, I submit, is what we are trying to do. That is what I personally would continue trying to do."

"I don't want to be confirmed in this job under any misapprehension, or on the strength of any promise whatever except to exercise the best judgment that I possess. I didn't seek the job. I was not even a volunteer. I'm simply a drafted man. I don't claim that it was any particular credit to me that I was selected, and it won't hurt my feelings a bit if you send me home. That is not all I could say, but I think it is sufficient."

Misgivings remained, but Legge was confirmed. And thereafter, for a long period of months, very little was heard about him, and nothing from him.

But he was busy. At first, disappointed Washington business men would not believe it when he declined their social invitations with the simple explanation that he

Sidelights on the London Conference Mischievous Makers Busy With False Stories of Anglo-American Break

Admirals Not Holding Center of the Stage as They Did at Geneva, and the Naval Advisers Have Little to Do.

Dawes Says "Diplomacy Isn't Too Hard on Brain, but It's Hell on the Feet"—Many Americans Dining Out.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Jan. 25.

NOTWITHSTANDING the auspicious opening of the London Naval Conference and the manifest effort of various delegations to pave the way for an agreement, scare stories prejudicial to success of the gathering have not been lacking. Shearer is not here in the flesh but his spirit seems to go marching on.

While the steamship George Washington was bringing the American delegation to England some writers on board sent back yarns that Secretary Stimson in a "panic" had ordered the boat speeded up in order to hasten the conferences with MacDonald. It was also suggested that there was a break in the ranks of the American advisers and that American delegates were unduly secretive regarding their aims. None of these concoctions was warranted.

Since the arrival of the delegation in London a story has gone out about an alleged gap between the American and British delegations, with Tardieu acting as mediator, and captious critics have taxed MacDonald with impropriety in addressing an American radio audience before the opening of the business sessions of the conference. One blushes to realize that these are emanations of Americans.

The usually mellow voice of MacDonald had a steely ring as he denied the story of a break with the Americans. His denial hardly was needed. If one thing more than another is obvious to unprejudiced observers at the conference, it is that the British and Americans are working in friendly co-operation.

France holds the key. If there were no Mediterranean question, Great Britain and the United States would get together tomorrow. Present conversations look toward the fixing of the naval strength of France as a necessary preliminary to determining the tonnage to be allotted England. Once a basis is established between England and France, negotiations between England and the United States should proceed without difficulty.

The task of our delegates, as well as the British, is to keep down French demands in order correspondingly to keep down Britain's conception of her requirements. All talk of a rupture between Britain and the United States at this stage is mischievous tommyrot.

As for MacDonald's radio address, he was solicited to make it by a representative of the National Broadcasting Co. and there was nothing in it that might not have been uttered with propriety at any time or any place. I am assured that that British Broadcasting Co. would be delighted to extend similar facilities to Stimson for as often and as long as he might care to go on the air.

"had to work every night." It was true.

With the possible exception of Senator King of Utah and Senator Norris of Nebraska—the two most notorious druggies in Washington—Legge probably keeps longer working hours than any man the capital has seen in recent years.

The late Senator La Follette had a regular working schedule of 16 hours a day, six days a week, during sessions of Congress.

Legge, a widower, lives at a hotel which is situated almost midway between the White House and his office. He rises at 7, dresses, and goes directly to the White House, where he participates in the exercises of the "Medicine Ball Cabinet," and they say that when he hurries the ball it takes a man to stop it. He is well over six feet tall, broad-shouldered, big-boned, rangy and 64 years old.

"I'd like to come," replied the sandy-haired chairman, "but a man from the West happens to be in town who has been trying for three months to see me on a very important matter, so I've promised to eat dinner with him and talk it over."

Several months after he appeared before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, out of the clear sky over Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and other centers of the grain commission trade, numerous charges of the most blood-curdling character were heard. It was said that the Farm Board has "gone Bolshevik"—that it had embarked on a program that was "socialistic," "paternalistic," "communist," and all the other forms of "ism" which are to be abhorred and put down by the God-fearing home-loving, coupon-clipping, American business man.

In short—and this was what it boiled down to—it was charged that "this man Legge" was bent on "ruining the grain trade."

Millions of grain men from the Northwest came rushing to Washington with white, stricken faces. Presidential Secretaries Walter Newton (former Minnesota Congressman) and George Akerson (former Minneapolis newspaper correspondent) looked very grave.

"A large staff of naval advisers have found little to do."

ONE of the things that differentiate this from the abortive Geneva Conference is that Admirals are not holding the center of the stage. We have with us a large staff of naval advisers, but to date they have found little to do. It is difficult to see how they could find much, since all figures on relative naval tonnage were long since worked out.

One of our two delegates at Geneva was an Admiral and an expert committee was created early in the proceedings. The conference took its tone from the technical findings of the naval men. In this conference all American delegates are civilians and the first task to which they have addressed themselves is to establish friendly contacts with other delegations. The thought constantly is stressed by Stimson and his colleagues, that there is no desire on our part to overreach the others but to arrive at an understanding that will leave each nation satisfied.

Political rather than technical phases of the problem are being grappled with at the start. Any expert committee that may be created will be advisory merely. It will not have the dominating influence that the experts had at Geneva. This conference, though growing naturally out of the Washington conference, is attacking the problem, as lawyers say, de novo, without laying undue stress on ratios and yardsticks, and in this fact lies the main hope of its success. Without disparagement of Stimson's abilities the writer ventures the opinion that Dwight Morrow has been largely responsible for changing the method of negotiation.

French insistence on global tonnage limitation remains one of the great stumbling blocks. Global tonnage means total tonnage, within which each nation might build any kind of vessels it desired. British and Americans stand for limitations by categories. One of the purposes of the preliminary private conferences is to find a formula that will cover both French and Anglo-American theories. A suggestion that limitation be by categories but with a provision allowing limited transfers from one category to another is being considered as a compromise. At the bottom of the global tonnage contention is the desire of France to maintain an unrestricted submarine fleet—a desire which was the primary cause of the failure of the Washington conference to limit auxiliary vessels.

THE most unconventional member of any delegation is Gen. Dawes. Of all the dignitaries who greeted the American delegation at Plymouth, he alone did not sport a silk topper. Dawes was observed by newspaper men the other day to be walking as if very tired. He was asked what was the matter and replied "diplomacy isn't too hard on the brain but it's hell on the feet." Some of our delegates and advisers would doubtless add that it is hell on the stomach. They are doing as much dining out as Vice President Curtis and Mrs. Gann.

BRITISHERS were much more interested in the King himself than in what he said at the opening of the conference. Everywhere one heard the question "How is the King looking?" It was the King's first appearance since his recent illness and the evidences of his restored health overshadowed all other news in British journals that day.

WHEN appropriation was made by Congress to furnish the home of the American Ambassador, given to the nation by J. P. Morgan, Mrs. Houghton, wife of the Ambassador at that time, was filled with delight. She saw visions of a house beautifully fitted up with suitable old world furniture. Her joy was brief. Reading of the bill showed that Congress had required all furniture to be American-made.

Mrs. Houghton called off her shopping tour and placed her own furniture in the main rooms of the Embassy, using prescribed Grand Rapids pieces elsewhere. The same plan is now being followed by Gen. and Mrs. Dawes.

Among the things received from America was a large supply of fine aluminum kitchenware. English servants had never seen anything of the sort and balked at using it. The upshot was that the aluminum set was discarded and the familiar copper and iron pots substituted. That's England.

In the stately conference rooms of the United States Chamber of Commerce, across Lafayette Square from the White House, there was dark talk on such subjects as "Government in business" and "impeding private enterprise."

Correspondents of metropolitan newspapers forsook the spicy lobby investigation, the juicy radio investigation and the salty tariff debate, and hurried to the seventh floor of the brick building at Thirtieth and E streets to find out what in the world had happened.

Chairman Legge professed astonishment. An oculist could have located the wrinkle in his eye.

The hard, he said, had simply been plodding along, endeavoring in its humdrum way to carry out the purposes of the farm marketing act.

What had it done? Well, since one purpose of the act was to fa-

Mellon Looks on U. S. Action In Putting Naval Cut First As 'Augury Full of Hope'

Says That "Most Amazing Thing About This Country" Is Rapidity With Which It Has Left the War Behind.

By BASIL MANLY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY ANDREW W. MELLON today gave powerful impetus to the world movement for reduction of naval armaments when he declared in an authorized interview that "it is an augury full of hope that in the new decade which is just opening we should be concerned first of all with the efforts being made at London to make peace more sure by coming to an agreement regarding naval armaments."

"War is still responsible for the major part of our expenditures," Mellon said, "and it is in the light of these facts that we must give our wholehearted support to all intelligent and honest efforts on the part of the various nations to bring about a reduction in the heavy burden of armaments to the lowest point consistent with the safety and peace of the world."

Quite naturally the interview turned first to the epoch-making transition that has taken place since the World War and culminated in the conference at London.

"It has been more than a decade since the war ended. Do you feel satisfied with the progress that has been made both in this country and in the world at large?"

"Satisfied is hardly the word to use in that connection," said Mr. Mellon. "Like most people, I am never entirely satisfied with progress no matter how great that progress may have been. But certainly, when we look back on conditions as they were ten years ago and compare them with conditions today there is no reason to be dissatisfied with what has been accomplished. In fact, the one thing which comes to mind is the comparative quickness with which we have left the war behind, as contrasted with other wars which many of us can remember."

"You mean the Civil War?"

"Yes, I was thinking particularly of the long struggle which the Southern states were obliged to make before they regained anything like their former economic position. Even in the North there were troubles enough—such as the panic of 1873 and the large debt which the Government inherited from the war, debt which I may say, it managed to pay off with about the same rapidity, relatively speaking, as we are doing today in the case of the debt left us by the last war. Of course the Civil War was confined to one country, whereas the whole world was affected by the last war."

Conditions More Stable.

"You feel that there has been a general improvement in conditions throughout the world since the war ended 11 years ago?"

"Yes, we have been moving steadily and in the right direction. As we have got further and further away from the war the various nations have realized the necessity of adjusting themselves to new conditions both within their own borders and in their relation to the outside world. New trade currents have come into existence. Debts and taxes and reparations have had to be taken into account. Currencies have had to be stabilized. And last of all the bitter feelings engendered by the war have had to subside. It has been a period of readjustment, and as such it has been both difficult and confusing. But all periods of transition are like that; and out of the present one has come the conviction that mutual concessions must be made in order not only to preserve the peace of the world but to improve working conditions and make life more secure. If men are to be given the incentive which they must have and to which they are entitled."

"You think then that conditions in the world at large have become more stable and that the average man's chances have thereby improved?"

"I think even the worst pessimist would agree that that is true. It is necessary to point out only a few of the steps that have been taken for anyone to realize how far we have come from the confusion immediately following the war. Take the question of reparations. It was not until 1924 that the world felt that it was at last on the road to financial reconstruction. The committee which framed that plan very wisely limited its scope to certain definite objectives. These steps taken to be, first, the balancing of Germany's budget; second, the stabilizing of Germany's currency; and third, the determination of the amount of reparation payments which might be made by Germany and transferred to the creditor Governments in the immediate future. It was not within the jurisdiction of the Dawes committee to fix the amount of Germany's reparation liabilities."

Views on Debt Settlement.

"Nevertheless that committee succeeded in evolving a plan of settlement which should operate for a sufficient time until confidence could be restored and a final and comprehensive settlement could eventually be agreed upon. The Dawes plan more than fulfilled expectations, so that last year decisive steps could be taken in the direction of a final settlement. As a result we have what is known as the Young plan, under which the total amount of German annuities is fixed and also the division of those annuities among the several creditor Governments. That such an agreement could be reached is a definite step forward and should prove of enormous value to the world."

"You spoke just now of the debt settlements as constructive factors in arriving at the present situation. What do you mean by that?"

"I mean that with the settlement of the debts an element of uncertainty has been eliminated from the international situation. So long as they remained unsettled they constituted an unknown quantity in the balance sheets of both debtor and creditor Governments. Currencies could not be stabilized. Credit was affected and extension of trade among the various countries was seriously retarded. Ours is one of the chief creditor Governments and so the responsibility developed upon us to put an end to this uncertainty by proceeding at once to a settlement of the debts owed to this Government by foreign nations."

"The last agreement, as you know, was the French agreement, which was approved by the Government last month and brought to an end the long drawn out negotiations which the United States has been conducting with 15 countries. The total amount is funded at about $11,500,000,000 and the present value of payments provided for by the agreement is slightly less than $7,000,000,000 at 4 1/4 per cent or about 57 per cent of the aggregate debt prior to refunding."

"You spoke a moment ago of currency stabilization. This has been done in practically all important countries, has it not?"

"Yes," said Mellon. "Japan was the last important country to return to a gold basis and affected the stabilization of her currency only a few days ago. The return to a gold basis of such countries as Great Britain, Germany, Italy, France and many others besides."

"I think even the worst pessimist would agree that that is true."

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM
I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the rights of all parties, never being to any party, always opposing privileged classes and public plunderers, never lacking sympathy with the poor, always remaining devoted to the public welfare, never being satisfied with merely getting news always being drastically independent; never being afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

The name and address of the author must accompany every contribution, but on request will not be published. Letters not exceeding 200 words will receive preference.

Education and the Pope.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial on "The Pope's Letter on Education" is disappointing.

While doubtless the encyclical was prompted by the controversy between the Vatican and the Italian Premier, yet the very universality of the church to which it was dictated lends it a much broader significance. You state "if the Pope's letter were to be construed literally it would mean that a great deal of this country it would cause a great deal of confusion," and then hasten with "the assurance that it is only a suggestion and really doesn't mean anything." Yet, it is to be construed literally, and applied literally, in the way for its application. Certainly the Vatican will watch hopefully the reaction of the American people to the suggestion that parochial schools be subsidized and substituted for public schools in certain localities.

The subsidizing of schools, regardless of creed, would be the death knell of our public school system, which is the marrow of democracy. Our public school system has not failed; it needs no substitute. It guarantees a liberal education for American youth, regardless of wealth or social position, race or creed. It does not interfere with the faith of the individual. Compare it with that of Mexico, where the church has had 400 years to develop its educational activities. As one who has traveled there, there is no comparison of the moral advancement and civilization of the two nations. Compare the illiteracy.

Americans should never lose sight of the fact that our public school system is the very core of our democracy, our hope of supremacy as a nation, and our assurance of future liberty. We should look with disfavor upon any suggestion that would tend to retard its scope or efficiency.

Years Effect of Mergers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ONE wonders what the result will be in the not-too-far-off future after all the mergers have been effected by big business. What's to become of the poor intelligent class of people in the United States, those with aspirations and ambitions to make a place in the world for themselves, in the day when the life of individual effort and of competition is swiftly being crushed to death?

How can America be the "land of opportunity" when the mass of her people are compelled to become minor parts of a great mechanical scheme? The world has had many revolutions and the dark clouds of protest and rebellion have even now begun to gather on the United States horizon. A day of reckoning will no doubt come soon or later, a natural outcome, proved by history many times. Big business is surely riding to a fall.
SYMPATHIZER.

Maine's First Chief Justice.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A printed statement that Ethan Shepley was the first Chief Justice of Maine.

A letter from the Maine Historical Society dated Portland, Me., Jan. 15, says: "Willie 'Law, the Courts and Lawyers of Maine' gives you the correct data on the Chief Justice question. Ethan Shepley (not Ethan) was Chief Justice 1848-1853.

Nathaniel Weston in 1811 when they formed the Eastern Circuit, was appointed Chief Justice of the Second Circuit, containing Lincoln, Kennebec and Somerset Counties.

In 1810 Maine became a State; Judge Weston was appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, then Chief Justice in October, 1814, until 1841.

This letter from the Maine State Historical Society sent to me proves Nathan Weston was Maine's first Chief Justice of the highest court that existed prior to 1820.

Frederic Mellen was the Chief Justice of the first Supreme Court established in 1820, and served from 1820-1834.

The degree of LL. D. was given Chief Justice Nathan Weston by Dartmouth College, New Hampshire, and Waterville, Maine.

Law and the Child.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WOULD be much pleased if you would give space to this paragraph. The author, whoever he may be, has said a mouthful about factors antedating the application of law. Let it be passed on the walls of our homes:

While it is a fine thing to enact wholesome laws for the suppression of crime, and the proper treatment of the criminal, a bigger and better business would be the supplying to the American child of every advantage, equipment and opportunity to steer him away from crime, rather than right into it. In short, the real big business of the American people is not the enactment of many laws, but the proper bringing up of the American child. As once of early training is worth a pound of later conviction, so the proper upbringing of the child is worth a pound of later conviction.
M. C. TURNER.

MONOPOLY AND POLICE RADIO.

Radio is past the experimental stage as a police auxiliary in the fight on crime. Its record in Detroit alone is impressive. Speedy police cars, radio equipped, are directed by messages from a central station, and are able to travel quickly to the scene of a crime. In one instance, officers met holdup men leaving a bank with their loot less than a minute after the alarm had been given. Passers of bad checks have been arrested within a few minutes after their description was broadcast; auto thieves, after driving a block or so, have been surprised to see a police car overtake them; murderers have been caught before they could dispose of their weapons.

This speedy capture of criminals has enabled police to obtain much evidence extremely useful in their prosecution. As a result, Detroit attributes a reduction of 54 per cent in felonies and an increase of 45.8 per cent in convictions to its police radio. "We are catching the criminal red-handed by the use of radio," says William F. Rutledge, Detroit Police Commissioner. "We are eliminating the introduction of circumstantial evidence in trials by indisputable proof of guilt."

Detroit's success has inspired several other cities to adopt the system. It has been installed in Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Spokane, Wash., and Berkeley, Cal., and by the Michigan State police. Other cities, "sold" on the idea, desire to put in police radio, but are finding an unexpected obstacle in their paths. In this latter class is St. Louis, where a penthouse on the new police headquarters building is ready to receive the broadcasting apparatus and 235 police cars are waiting to be equipped.

The all-powerful hand of monopoly intervenes to block this forward step in the pursuit of criminals by setting an exorbitant figure for installation of the equipment. Kenneth R. Cox, the Detroit radio engineer who perfected the system there and recently conferred with the St. Louis Police Commissioners, gave the facts and figures the other day in his testimony before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is investigating the radio monopoly.

In Chicago it was proposed to build three transmitters at a cost of less than $10,000 each and to equip 250 cars with receivers at $50 each, Mr. Cox testified. The Radio Corporation of America interfered, threatening suits for patent infringement if Chicago built its own equipment instead of letting R. C. A. concerns do the work. Thereupon prices were quoted—$26,712 for transmitters and $288 for receivers. These figures were far in excess of the Chicago appropriation, and work came to a standstill.

The situation in St. Louis is similar. Although no decision has been made as to the type of apparatus to be purchased, one of the Commissioners announces that "it will be one that will not involve the department in patent litigation." This means, of course, that equipment of R. C. A. subsidiaries will be used. It is reported that this will cost considerably more, the difference representing a premium St. Louis must pay to safeguard itself against patent litigation.

Thus the facts which the Senate committee inquiry has been bringing out in the last few weeks come intimately home to St. Louis. It is a story similar to the account of exorbitant exactions detailed by men interested in setting up a trans-Atlantic news service. It follows in outline the testimony of a radio manufacturer who told of paying immense royalties to the monopoly, which, he said, had "terrorized the industry and intimidated dealers and jobbers everywhere." The fabulous percentages of profit are of a piece with Owen D. Young's testimony that the R. C. A.'s commercial facilities, which cost $25,000,000, were to be sold for $100,000,000. All this and more lends prophetic significance to the trust which Mr. Bryan ever said: "God never created a man good enough to hold a monopoly."

Senator Couzens of Michigan suggests one way out—a courageous fight by the independent radio concerns on the claims and exactions of the monopoly. Although the R. C. A. patents have not been upheld in the courts, the concern's great financial power is sufficient to intimidate its competitors with threats of infringement suits if its rights are upheld. Mr. Couzens is a veteran of the fight which Henry Ford waged on a similar combine in automobile patents, and from his experiences in that battle of the giants he gives to the independent radio men this pungent advice: "You ought to fight."

But since the independents have not gathered their courage and opened this epochal fight, and the Government has not interfered, the monopoly remains. The disclosures thus far made at the Senate inquiry are suitable material for action by the Department of Justice. In the monopoly's blocking of police radio it is interfering with the modernization of police departments, thus running counter to one of President Hoover's suggestions for solving the crime problem. The situation offers a highly important footnote for the Law Enforcement Commission's report to the President.

Democratic thunder for the 1930 congressional campaign. Parrot fever was brought to this country by the Republicans. It was never heard of here until after Secretary of State Stimson imported Old Soak.

PRESERVING PISA'S TOWER.

In the mistake of a medieval builder was born one of the Middle Ages' seven wonders, the leaning Tower of Pisa, and now the twentieth century engineer's skill will come into play to preserve it as a marvel of the modern world. Universal interest will follow the plans for strengthening the tower. The traveler will rejoice to hear again the seven bells at its summit; chiming silent many years lest their vibrations disturb the delicate equilibrium of the structure.

The 178-foot tower, high as a modern 15-story building, has a slant of 14 feet from the perpendicular, which gives the sightseer a sickening feeling as he views the Tuscan landscape from its top. Begun in 1174 and completed in 1350, the campanile's survival to this day is one of those impossible things which just happen. It rests on sand and clay watered by four springs not far below the surface, its foundations go down only 10 feet and cover merely the area of the base, earthquakes are not uncommon in the vicinity. The tower began to settle at one side when two stories had been built, 750 years ago. The architects were alarmed, but after a pause six stories more were piled on, with the makeshift device of skirting the upper stories in the opposite direction.

The tower's slope has increased recently about one-twentieth inch a year. Some engineers think this could go on for 300 years before the mass collapsed of its own weight; others say it is even now in danger.

ger. Cement will be pumped into the earth nearby, strengthening the foundation and keeping out water, and the structure itself will be reinforced after the plan recently used at St. Paul's Cathedral. Had the structure, built in violation of common engineering principles, looked the Colossus of Rhodes and the Pharos of Alexandria by collapsing into a jumble of masonry, few would have been surprised. Now it seems destined to survive for many a day as one of the world's prime curiosities.

AUTOS FOR A SONG.

Bad news travels on a far more powerful wave length than good news, but it picks up many marvelous distortions as it slips along through the ether. For instance, the British version of the stock market crash sounded very much like the fall of Rome. The motor industry, in particular, had crawled into its hole and died there. The London Daily Express headlined on its first page late in November the news that motors were "selling for a song in U. S. A.," basing its information on a "dramatic conversation by trans-Atlantic telephone direct with Detroit."

With overproduction of nearly 1,000,000 cars owing to the crash, it was possible to buy them for almost anything a rash person cared to offer, the Daily Express said. Installment buyers were turning their cars back in droves. Some unfortunates, lacking gasoline money, were abandoning their machines in fields. To be frank, the situation was chaotic, with more cars on hand than anyone knew what to do with, and no one with money to buy them.

THE DREAM OF ERIC GUGLER.

Fifteen years ago Eric Gugler returned to New York from Italy. When he landed, the soul of Eric Gugler was sad. For, after paying his respects to the Statue of Liberty and thrilling at the spires of Manhattan, he turned his gaze to Battery Park and found the close-up disappointing. He glanced sideways along the rail and saw others experiencing the same emotion. Many were strangers to Mr. Gugler's native shores. This was deplorable.

Eric Gugler mulled the thing over and drew and re-drew plans. Finally he completed a design for the embellishment of Battery Park and submitted it a few weeks ago to the Regional Plan Group. This group passed it around and agreed that Mr. Gugler had had a pat inspiration. It was symbolic, that was what. Mr. Gugler had caught the true spirit of America and had dashed it up in masonry so clearly and beautifully that even the densest immigrant could not fail to grasp it. Briefly, the plan calls for a plain shaft, 80 feet square at the base, rising to a height of 800 feet, its tip outstretching the tallest skyscraper. Flanking the shaft are two armillary spheres, one representing the celestial globe, the other the succession of planets, each 80 feet in diameter.

Mr. Gugler assured the commission that he considered the design the most important expression of his studies and anyone, after visualizing the effect, will agree that Mr. Gugler certainly has not been idle for the past 15 years. To St. Louisans such sculptural goings-on in the metropolis of the world help compensate for the casting of one of their favorite Generals in the role of a heavyweight wrestler who wanted to be a jockey.

"CEASE AND DESIST."

People have been hearing some lovely things about a cigarette over the radio: how it gave "it" to the "dices," wit to the witless, pep to the weary, melted the too, too, solid flesh to shadowy silhouettes; a message of hope to almost any angle of despair. People will not hear those lovely things over the radio any more. Such puffery for the puff has been expurgated by the Federal Trade Commission. The commission has scanned these pastels in prose and has found charm, grace, color, joy, verve, elan, pretty periods, visions of fulfilled desire, all the glitter and lure of jeweled persuasion, but scarcely a taint of fact. It has issued an order to the cigarette impresarios to "cease and desist."

Right! But if the commission's proxy standard is to obtain throughout the whole vast domain of advertising literature, what then? What of the lover's flambeau? Of the candle-gleam of science? The fief of dreams? The golden key that unlocks the bastles of logic? How will it be when imagination has been banished from the belles-lettres of the mart? Gladvertising becomes advertising! That is what the Federal Trade Commission has decreed with its "cease and desist."

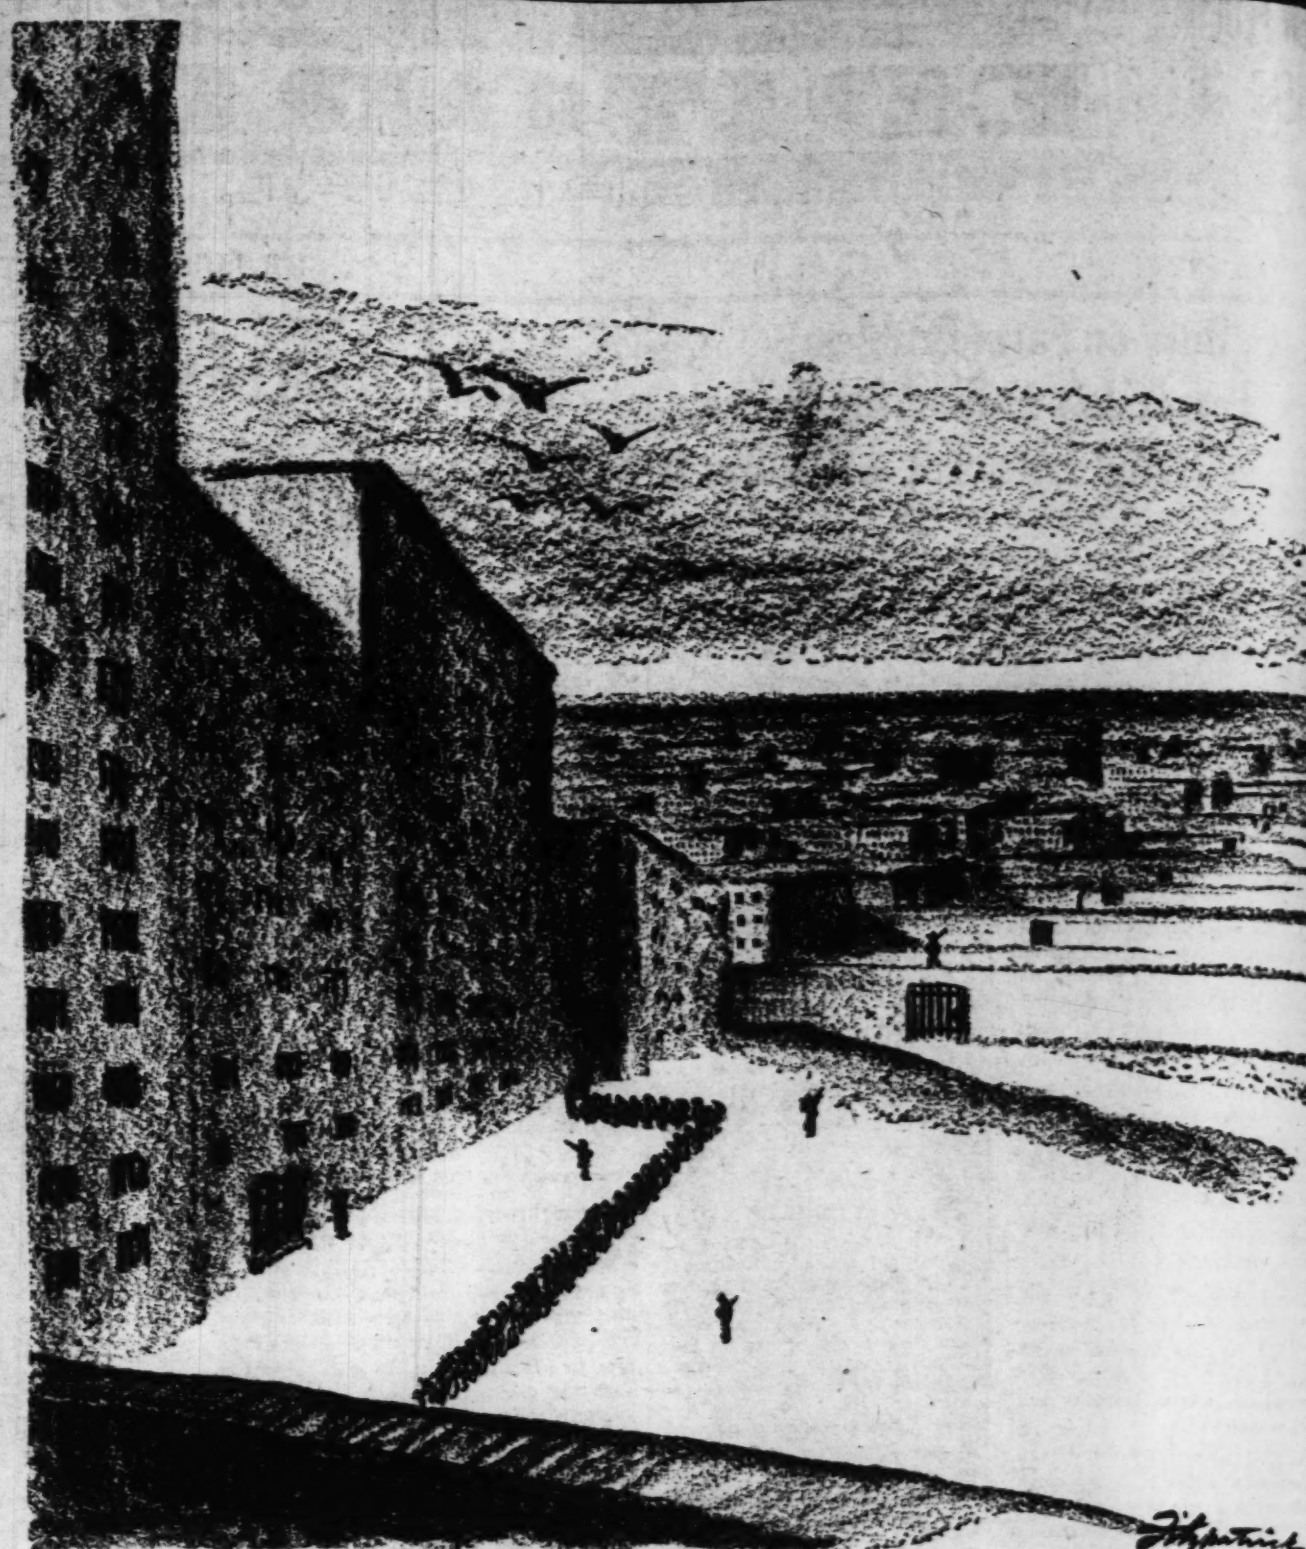

RETRIBUTION'S CLASSIC.

Somewhere in France is a rich, unhappy, old man who yearns for the rough-and-tumble of the oil fields. His name is James E. O'Neill. He fled the country when the investigation of the Ohio Gang, initiated by the Senate, finally hit the trail of the Continental Trading Co. The one rift in his exile was a secret voyage to Canada to make restitution to his company of his share of the Continental plunder. In the late Chancellor Hadley's phrase, he has been a "fugitive from the subpoena."

The papers say he wants to come home. How would he be received? Cautious inquiries have been made as to the Government's attitude. Seemingly the answer has not been reassuring. So he marks time with a melancholy pensive.

Associated with O'Neill in that "clandestine enterprise," as the Continental was described in legal opinion, were Harry Sinclair, H. M. Blackmer and Robert W. Stewart. Architects of their own fortune, all of them, who planned and built industrial empires by their own intrinsic force and genius. This future enterprise, organized, as the Supreme Court said, "for no legitimate purpose," has wrecked them all. It drove Blackmer into the same exile wherein O'Neill sought asylum. It drove Stewart out of the chairmanship of the Indiana Standard. It drove Sinclair into the ignominy of a common jail. It drove Albert B. Fall, who stooped to gather some of the crumbs, into pitiable moral penury.

The fate of the Continentals is retribution's classic.

LAND OF THE FREE.

What's Wrong With the Theater?

Little of significance on Broadway except some revivals and a few pleasant bits, says critic; American theater "drifting toward barbarism," in sense of having no consistent point of view; best work now being done in lighter forms; condition reflects absence of passionate issues in our lives waiting to be expressed in drama.

Stark Young in the New Republic.

THE theater's case stands thus: except for some of the revivals of the Civic Repertory Theater, and here and there among newer and struggling groups, there is not a play of any significance to be seen in New York—and these few revivals are not American and, of course, not new; they are familiar pieces, often Russian. The Theater Guild, after a flat season last year, has begun this with two failures. The Provincetown Playhouse, after a famous record in the past of plays, actors, designers, has, concluding this season of declining fortunes and of subsiding opportunities to discover worthwhile plays, at last thrown up the sponge and closed its doors, not without some unpaid debts.

Otherwise, there are some pleasant plays. "Strictly Dishonorable," for example, some plays, a very few, that appear to be one way or another entertaining, and one play with a delicate theme and partly realized creation of "Berkeley Square." Of musical shows there seem to be a few about which enough people differ in opinion, whether they are bad or good, to keep them in our minds, and which seem to be at least better than nothing. In general, we may say, without the least inch of highbrowdom, that nobody pretends there is any great glamour remaining in the theater, and that nobody raves and thrills about the shows to be seen.

On the other hand, there are numerous dancers, and vaudeville and revue moments that are capital. And it is these bright aspects of our American theater that foreign visitors notice.

Is there anyone who will claim that the great interest in decoration, in scenic designing, in the problems of production, directing, acting, that was so much in the air five or six years ago, exists no longer? There are some good actors still, mostly women, a good many skillful actors in a small way, and a good many young people of talent, but with small chances of ever learning much more than they know now, which is mostly how to make themselves interesting on Broadway. But about actors we need not despair, since acting to a large extent follows the drama, in that it interpenetrates and gradually develops itself and finds its style in connection with the plays that arise to be acted. The subject boils down pretty much to the writing of plays.

The general condition of the theater just now is, however, very much what we might have expected. There are some things—and art is the chief of them—that cannot be handled in being by enterprise, promotion, White House plaudits, local boasting or patriotic ambition, cannot be bought, faked or mechanically nourished. We have reached in the theater, then, what we might have expected from the trend of our life, and from our system of stars, our costly theater rents with their necessary long runs, our concessions to popular taste and cheap publicity methods, and cheap news, and so on and so on, all of which we all know. There is nothing especially to get excited about—the theater follows the public that it serves—and no reason to say more.

As for that other side of the theater art, more lively and truly popular, its chances are not more restlessness and exhausted nerves, and from a gay, full, happy temper that is not mechanized and driven into something hard and empty. Its best bet at present may be its barbarism.

SPRINGING FROM THE FARM.

FROM the Western Leader.
MOST of the country's great men spring from the farm—and generally as far from it as possible.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.

QUIETLY and without show a few days ago, six-foot, handsome, always smiling Enrique Olaya went to the Washington Union Station to board a fast train for New York. A few friends were at the station to bid him goodbye. As he stepped on to the car a photographer leveled his camera.

Enrique Olaya, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States from the Republic of Colombia, had just returned to Washington to return in a few weeks as, perhaps, his Excellency, Enrique Olaya, President-elect of Colombia.

As a member of the Liberal party, Olaya will spend the next few weeks campaigning by air for the Presidency of his country. If he is elected, it will be the first time in more than 50 years that a member of the Conservative party has not been elected to the Colombian Government.

WASHINGTON takes more than a passing interest in the political future of the popular Colombian Minister. Diplomatic circles for weeks have discussed his candidacy—stated that one of their own group may be so honored.

His chances of election are good. The Conservative party in Colombia is split with two candidates in the field, and Olaya, about one-third of the Legislature is composed of members of the Liberal party. It is on the Conservative split and his personal popularity that Olaya is making his chances of success.

Physically the biggest diplomat in Washington, Olaya's generous smile and eagerness to be of service to all, no matter how low in rank, have won for him no small place in the estimation of both official and unofficial Washington. He is one of the most popular diplomats who visit the State Department. His friendship for this country has been demonstrated many times.

His command of English is faultless. Washington knows him as a diplomat who cares little for society, man who prefers the quiet of home to the place to society his position entitles him.

Olaya has been here since 1922. If he is successful in his campaign for the presidency he will return to wind up his affairs at the Colombian Legation. If not, he will come back just the same and pick up his duties as Minister where he left off.

CAPITOL HILL is one of the earliest places in the world for a stranger to develop an inferiority complex if he is susceptible.

There are stairs he may not ascend, because they are for Senators and Representatives only. There are tables where he cannot sit to munch a sandwich. Elevation will not stop at his floor if there is a man who desires a ride.

In the Supreme Court the rule of seniority is even carried to hat pegs. The first is for Chief Justice Taft and others are for Justices according to rank.

WHY DISCRIMINATE?

NEW FEDERAL HOSPITAL NEAR CITY PLANNED

Narcotic Farm Also Proposed in Connection With Prison, Official Says.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—In calling for a survey of Government-owned real estate in the St. Louis area, Col. D. P. Quinlan, assistant to the chief co-ordinator of the Government, had more in view than the possible location of a new Federal reformatory at Jefferson Barracks.

Quinlan said today he could not disclose the nature of the projects considered for the St. Louis area, but it was learned from other sources that these include construction of a 350-bed "Veterans' Bureau" hospital and the establishment of a Federal narcotic farm. Quinlan explained he had received many offers of sites from landowners in Missouri and nearby States, and that when all the facts were in hand, he would make his recommendations.

If the reformatory is located at Jefferson Barracks, more land than the 50 acres mentioned in the Becker and Immigration Inspector Nash must be available. The bill passed by the House Wednesday, providing for two new penal institutions, stipulated that the sites for each must contain not less than 1000 acres. The bill further stipulated that the prison be located in the northeast section of the country and the reformatory west of the Mississippi River. This would eliminate East St. Louis from consideration for the reformatory. There is no limitation regarding the narcotic farm.

In discussing the need for two new Federal prisons, Chairman Graham of the House Judiciary Committee read to his colleagues Wednesday a letter he had received from Attorney-General Mitchell. "Relief for the intolerable overcrowded condition of our correctional institutions is imperative," Mitchell wrote. "The proposed bill seeks to accomplish this by authorizing the establishment of a reformatory west of the Mississippi and a penitentiary in the Northeastern section of the country."

"The Atlanta penitentiary now has about 2500 inmates, whereas it has a normal capacity of 1712. It could, however, with reasonableness accommodate about 2000. The Leavenworth penitentiary is about the same size as the Atlanta prison. Even in an emergency it should not be required to house more than 2000 men. To accommodate the nearly 3000 men incarcerated at that institution it has been necessary to place eight men in a cell designed for four, and to press into use as dormitories badly ventilated cells."

"The Atlanta penitentiary is so overcrowded that the inmates are so close together that they are unable to move about freely. The inmates are so overcrowded that they are unable to move about freely. The inmates are so overcrowded that they are unable to move about freely."

"The kitchen and mess facilities are so over-burdened that the evening meal must be served beginning at 2:10 p. m."

Quinlan, who served at Jefferson Barracks while the new advocate division of the army, has retained his interest in the St. Louis co-ordinating zone. Congressman Dyer, of St. Louis, has discussed with him the possibility of establishing one or more of the correction units near St. Louis.

FOREIGN CREDIT DATA FOR ST. LOUIS FIRMS

Will Be Obtained From Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Arrangements have been completed by the Chamber of Commerce Foreign Trade Bureau with the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce whereby credit information regarding importers of foreign countries will be furnished St. Louis firms.

To safeguard the interests of the St. Louis exporter the bureau in the future will submit requests for credit information to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce on each inquiry received. Confidential reports on these firms will then be sent to the Foreign Trade Bureau from Washington.

These reports in turn will be submitted to the local firms which follow up the inquiries referred to them by the Foreign Trade Bureau.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY GROUP TO VISIT WATERWAYS ABROAD

Members of Association Will Assemble in St. Louis July 15

For Trip.

Members of the Mississippi Valley Association will assemble in St. Louis and Chicago on July 15 next for a tour of European waterways. They will sail July 18 from Montreal on the Duchesse of Athol, spending two days on the St. Lawrence River and only four on open sea. Time will be allowed for inspecting port facilities at Montreal and Quebec.

Holland, Belgium and Paris will be visited in the main tour, with arrival at New York Aug. 23. Extensions are being arranged for those who wish to visit the Rhine, Hamburg, Lucerne, Berlin and other German and Swiss cities. Italy and the Riviera, returning as late as Sept. 10. Information may be obtained from the association headquarters, 511 Locust street.

Zoo Pictures at Luncheon.

A collection of 25 etchings by Claude Lorraine, seventeenth century artist, has been lent to the Art Museum by Dr. Moyer Fleisher, 5370 Pershing avenue. The collection, with two of the artist's etchings owned by the Museum, will remain on view for about 10 days.

Lorraine made only about 45 etchings, some of which rank with the best. The subjects shown include pastoral scenes and marines.

Address On City-County Union.

Prof. Thomas H. Reed, consultant of the City and County Metropolitan Development Committee, will address the League of Women Voters on the current work of planning a metropolitan government for St. Louis and St. Louis County at the Town Club at 2:15 p. m. tomorrow. The league's committee on efficiency in government will have charge. Most of the committees of the Council on Metropolitan Government, which is co-operating with Prof. Reed, include representatives of the league.

RARE GIFTS FOR CITY ART MUSEUM

Two Books Dating From Fifteenth Century Presented by F. W. Lehmann.

The City Art Museum has been presented with two rare books, printed in the fifteenth century, not long after the invention of movable type. They were the gift of Frederick W. Lehmann, of Benton place, former Solicitor-General of the United States.

A cashmere shawl presented by Mrs. N. A. McMillan and a piece of decorated silk from the island of Bali, the gift of Mrs. George O. Carpenter, also have been accepted by the Museum.

The books are Josephus' "De Antiquitate Judaica et de Bello Judaico" and Columella's "De Re Rustica Poliphili." Both are in excellent condition, having been rebound with tooled leather covers within the last century.

Josephus' book, a history of the Jews, was printed by J. Schussler at Augsburg in 1470, 14 years after the celebrated Gutenberg Bible. Schussler printed only nine other books. The volume at the Museum is a large folio printed with black letter type designed to simulate the appearance of manuscript books.

Columella's book is better known and has been termed the perfect example of the joint work of printer and illustrators. It contains 172 woodcuts, which have been attributed to many of the great Venetian artists of the time. It was printed by Aldus Mantius at Venice in 1493.

The book is an archaeological romance, written by Francesco Columella, a Dominican friar, at a time when interest in all things Greek and Roman had been revived by the renaissance.

collaborate orderly marketing, it had organized national corporations, to be owned and operated by farmers' co-operatives, and those corporations would engage in all the ordinary activities of marketing farm products. That is, they would construct physical facilities for storing, processing and shipping, and they would purchase grain from their co-operative stockholders, and sell it to millers and other buyers. Also, since the law required it, loans had been made, and would continue to be made, to the co-operatives.

Private Ties Stopped On.

Notwithstanding the chairman's soothing words, it was obvious that many of the functions contemplated by the board were functions that previously had been discharged by private concerns—for a nice profit. Now the board was making loans. As is known, that function usually is reserved for banks. What rate of interest was the board charging? Was it lower than the commercial rate?

Chairman Legge said he believed, now that his attention had been called, that it was slightly lower. In fact, there was no doubt about it. But, he again reminded his interrogators, that also was something fixed by law. The board had no discretion as to the rate. Surely nobody could object to the action of the board in complying with the law.

All the board was preparing to do was to put the grain speculators, the cotton speculators and the livestock speculators out of business, and supply farm co-operatives with credit at cut rates. That was all and Chairman Legge simply could not understand what the fuss was about. In fact, he suggested that there wasn't any fuss—that the reporters had simply invented it to "make a headline."

Unfortunately, it was impossible to maintain this amusing and amused pose very long. From the stately conference rooms of the United States Chamber of Commerce there presently issued a document, signed by the "Agricultural Service Committee," which, in guarded but understandable language, pointed out the "vital importance" to "private investment" of avoiding "unnecessary duplication of facilities by the use of Government capital." It also expressed the deepest concern that there be no discrimination in favor of farmer members of co-operatives as against farmers that were not members. It conceded that co-operative marketing was a good thing as long as it did not "discriminate against private enterprises." The rest was in the same tone.

Notice already had been taken of the fact that one of the most important figures in the grain trade is Julius H. Barnes, intimate friend of President Hoover, and chosen by him to direct the "Hoover prosperity drive."

The circumstances became more interesting with the issuance of the chairman's document, because Barnes is chairman of that organization. So the Senate Lobby Committee summoned him to tell whether he had endeavored to obstruct the farm board's program, and what he thought about it.

Barnes said he had not mentioned the subject to President Hoover. He said he did regard some of the board's policies as "unfair to private business enterprises," and that he had arranged a conference between Chairman Legge, on the one side, and certain grain men on the other, to talk it over.

It is a point in speech, and something in his testimony and manner conveyed the impression that Legge had promised in future to submit the board's policies to the Chamber before putting them into execution. There was even a suggestion—although certainly very vague—that the board had modified its policies as a result of the conference. At least, many drew that inference.

The chairman, who had spoken so softly—and carried such a big stick—could speak softly no longer. He announced emphatically that the board had not modified its program, and would not. He declared that he was willing to talk at any time with anybody who had any information to give, but that he had not promised to submit the board's policies to anyone, and would not submit them. If anybody wanted to know what they were, he would tell them.

What he was about, he took occasion to review the document issued by the Chamber of Commerce. He said its advice to the farm board on the marketing problem amounted to saying: "Hang your clothes on a hickory limb, but don't go near the water." He reminded the Chamber that the board was proceeding, not according to its own vagrant desires, but under the explicit directions of the farm marketing act, and he added, "In the whole 2000 words of the Chamber's document there is not one constructive suggestion."

Letter to Butterworth.

To President Butterworth of the Chamber of Commerce, once a rival of Legge in the manufacture of farm implements, he dispatched a letter which has since become a favorite text of Senators and Congressmen from the so-called "backward states." It contained, among numerous choice bits, the suggestion that the Chamber's economic theories respecting agriculture dated from the horse-and-buggy era, and would be more respectable if brought up to date.

Chairman Caraway of the Senate Lobby Committee, for some reason construing Legge's utterances as a confession of retreat from the board's former position, inaugurated a correspondence marked by great heat on his side and a conspicuous absence of it on Legge's side. It seemed certain during the holidays that Legge would be called before the committee, but his disclaimer any intention of appearing voluntarily, and tersely explained:

"Senator Caraway and I are in perfect agreement—each of us believes that nothing could be gained by talking to the other."

Full of Salty Phrases.

He is full of salty phrases. He invariably alludes to the grain speculators as "the pink slip boys," because trades in futures are recorded on pink slips on the Chicago Board of Trade. Of a certain persistent critic he said: "He is an Italian flea, wonderfully agile and able-bodied, but still a flea."

A trusted friend before whom Legge unburdened himself in unvarnished language on a subject pertaining to the farm board's work, asked: "Why don't you say that in public?"

"I can afford to lose my temper before my friends, but never before my enemies," was the reply.

"The farm bloc says we are too slow, and the grain men say we are red radicals—so I guess we can't be far wrong," he remarked once.

And on another occasion: "The greatest surplus we have to contend with is the surplus of farm leaders and farm relief plans—all bad."

There has been a fortunate thing for the United States and in addition it has had an important effect in stimulating world trade and making for more prosperous conditions throughout the world."

"The amazing thing about this country is the rapidity with which it has left the war and its effects behind. Of course we were not so hard hit as some of the other countries. Nevertheless, the burden imposed by the war was not insupportable and would have become more serious if the American people had not started promptly and with determination to get their house in order. The money cost of the war alone to this country amounted to more than $27,500,000,000 on June 30, last. Our public debt, which was slightly over a billion dollars in 1916, had jumped, at its highest point, to more than $26,000,000,000 three years later. It had been reduced to less than $16,500,000,000 on Dec. 31, last, and we are proceeding to whittle it down each year at a rate which, in a reasonable number of years, if the present debt reduction program is continued, will substantially eliminate this enormous drain on our revenues."

"Along with the debt reduction this country has followed a balanced policy of tax reduction. Taxes have been steadily lowered from the fantastic levels which they reached during the war. In the last 10 years there have been five major reductions in taxes, with the result that the burden of taxation has been greatly lightened, as regards both individuals and business, and many taxpayers in the lower brackets have been relieved entirely of any liability for Federal income taxes."

"Austerity Full of Hope."

"You made a statement once in one of your annual reports to Congress I think—that the large proportion of the Government's revenues goes for the payment of past and future wars. To what extent is that still true?"

"That statement still holds true. My last report to Congress shows that for the current fiscal year approximately two-thirds of all government expenditures, exclusive of postal expenditures, go for national defense, for military pensions, retirement pay, annuities, world war allowances, life insurance claims and for payment of interest and principal of the public debt. All of these expenditures have to do either with the liquidation of past wars or with the prevention of future ones. I used the word 'prevention' advisedly, for it is obvious to any man that such preparations as we feel obliged to make for national defense are made with a view to that end or for the prevention of future wars."

"It is true, nevertheless, that war is still responsible for the major part of our expenditures; and it is in the light of these facts that we must give our whole-hearted support to all intelligent and honest efforts on the part of the various nations to bring about a reduction in the heavy burden of armaments to the lowest point consistent with the safety and peace of the world."

"It is an augury full of hope that in the new decade which is just opening we should be concerned not so much with the efforts being made at London to make peace more sure by coming to an agreement regarding naval armaments."

TO DROP CHARGE OF FRAUD AGAINST RADIO, AUTO DEALER

$2300 He Was Accused of Obtaining in Belleville Repaid by Relative.

A charge of fraud against William E. Schmissauer, Belleville radio and automobile dealer, who was arrested Thursday night on a warrant issued by State's Attorney Lindauer of Belleville, will be dismissed at a preliminary hearing tomorrow morning, according to Lindauer, who said yesterday he had been informed that the $2300 which Schmissauer was charged with obtaining from the Belleville Finance Co., had been repaid by Schmissauer's relatives.

Schmissauer's arrest Thursday followed his disappearance in Belleville after he had been away since Jan. 2. Explaining the finding of his abandoned automobile near East St. Louis the day after his disappearance with three bullet holes in the door, Lindauer said that he had fired the shots in order to make his wife believe he had been kidnapped and killed.

The money cost of the war alone to this country amounted to more than $27,500,000,000 on June 30, last. Our public debt, which was slightly over a billion dollars in 1916, had jumped, at its highest point, to more than $26,000,000,000 three years later. It had been reduced to less than $16,500,000,000 on Dec. 31, last, and we are proceeding to whittle it down each year at a rate which, in a reasonable number of years, if the present debt reduction program is continued, will substantially eliminate this enormous drain on our revenues."

"Along with the debt reduction this country has followed a balanced policy of tax reduction. Taxes have been steadily lowered from the fantastic levels which they reached during the war. In the last 10 years there have been five major reductions in taxes, with the result that the burden of taxation has been greatly lightened, as regards both individuals and business, and many taxpayers in the lower brackets have been relieved entirely of any liability for Federal income taxes."

"Austerity Full of Hope."

"You made a statement once in one of your annual reports to Congress I think—that the large proportion of the Government's revenues goes for the payment of past and future wars. To what extent is that still true?"

"That statement still holds true. My last report to Congress shows that for the current fiscal year approximately two-thirds of all government expenditures, exclusive of postal expenditures, go for national defense, for military pensions, retirement pay, annuities, world war allowances, life insurance claims and for payment of interest and principal of the public debt. All of these expenditures have to do either with the liquidation of past wars or with the prevention of future ones. I used the word 'prevention' advisedly, for it is obvious to any man that such preparations as we feel obliged to make for national defense are made with a view to that end or for the prevention of future wars."

"It is true, nevertheless, that war is still responsible for the major part of our expenditures; and it is in the light of these facts that we must give our whole-hearted support to all intelligent and honest efforts on the part of the various nations to bring about a reduction in the heavy burden of armaments to the lowest point consistent with the safety and peace of the world."

"It is an augury full of hope that in the new decade which is just opening we should be concerned not so much with the efforts being made at London to make peace more sure by coming to an agreement regarding naval armaments."

$2300 He Was Accused of Obtaining in Belleville Repaid by Relative.

A charge of fraud against William E. Schmissauer, Belleville radio and automobile dealer, who was arrested Thursday night on a warrant issued by State's Attorney Lindauer of Belleville, will be dismissed at a preliminary hearing tomorrow morning, according to Lindauer, who said yesterday he had been informed that the $2300 which Schmissauer was charged with obtaining from the Belleville Finance Co., had been repaid by Schmissauer's relatives.

Schmissauer's arrest Thursday followed his disappearance in Belleville after he had been away since Jan. 2. Explaining the finding of his abandoned automobile near East St. Louis the day after his disappearance with three bullet holes in the door, Lindauer said that he had fired the shots in order to make his wife believe he had been kidnapped and killed.

How Mellon Looks at Plan To Cut Navies

There has been a fortunate thing for the United States and in addition it has had an important effect in stimulating world trade and making for more prosperous conditions throughout the world."

"The amazing thing about this country is the rapidity with which it has left the war and its effects behind. Of course we were not so hard hit as some of the other countries. Nevertheless, the burden imposed by the war was not insupportable and would have become more serious if the American people had not started promptly and with determination to get their house in order. Oscar Straus, Composer, on KSD Tonight

Famous Viennese to Conduct Orchestra in Excerpts From His Own Operettas in Atwater Kent Hour — Albert Spalding, the Violinist, to Be Soloist on Same Program.

Oscar Straus, the famous Viennese composer, will broadcast for the first time in this country tonight during the Atwater Kent Hour over KSD and allied NBC stations. He is announced to conduct the orchestra in excerpts from his own "Chocolate Soldier" and "A Waltz Dream." He probably will speak briefly to the radio audience.

The soloist will be Albert Spalding, the internationally known American violinist.

Born in 1876, Oscar Straus became famous at an early age for his waltz music. For more than 29 years his operettas have been among the most popular by European composers. Several of them have won popularity in this country, especially "The Chocolate Soldier," which is to be revived in New York, beginning tomorrow. He is en route to Hollywood to write music for the talkies.

KSD's broadcast schedule for today follows:

"Spanish Dreams," recital at 12:30 p. m. Julian Oliver, tenor, soloist.

The overture to Weber's "Oberon," the "Nocturne," and Scherzo from Mendelssohn's musical transcription of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." List's "Liebestraum" and eight "Scenes de Ballet" by Glazounov, will be played by the Chicago orchestra.

The opera, "Oberon," is a vivid testimonial to the victory of strength of purpose and artistic inspiration over weaknesses of the body. Weber was dying when he wrote "Oberon." But the work shows none of the suffering and fatigue which was racking his body. Grimly he fought off death until he had finished. After its first production in the Covent Garden Theater in London, honors were showered upon the composer in full measure. But Weber's triumph was short lived. A few weeks afterward he died, alone, in a strange land.

The "Nocturne" and "Scherzo" were written by Mendelssohn at the express request of the King of

Robot to Direct Traffic Actuated by Radio, and Instructions Broadcast to Student Pilots When Flying Solo

Device for controlling traffic by radio. Detectors are wired to the robot and placed in the surface of highways. Autos, passing over them, send messages to the robot's "brain," which manipulates the warning lights. The heavier the traffic the longer time it is allowed to pass, while that from other directions is held up.

An expert pilot in this tower at the Heston Aerodrome, London, constantly broadcasts instructions to a student on his first solo flight in the plane shown.

Capt. V. H. Baker, chief pilot at the Heston Aerodrome, London, instructing a woman student for her first pilot flight. Using radio, he will continue to instruct her as she flies. Note earphones clamped to her ears under her helmet. The device is especially helpful as a student approaches the ground to land, a stage at which novices are likely to blunder.

"Broadness" of Three Stations Causes Complaints

WSM and KTHS-KRLD Interfere With Reception, Listeners in St. Louis Area Say.

WSM, Nashville, and KTHS, Hot Springs, Ark., and KRLD, Dallas, Tex., which share the 1140 kc. channel, continue to be among the worst offenders in broadness of transmission. There is general complaint in this region that WSM "blankets" KFI, and that reception of KNX, Hollywood, is virtually impossible when either KTHS or KRLD is on the air.

Using a superheterodyne receiver so selective that it is tuned in Wednesday night he tuned in WBT, which is on the 1080 kc. channel next above KMOX and between that station and WTAM, and listened to WBT without a trace of "wash" from KMOX or WTAM. The writer had to tune with utmost care and patience to pick up KFI at 9:30 and "bring it in" without interference from WSM. When it came to tuning in KNX at 10 p. m., without "wash" from the station on 1140 kc., the task was twice as difficult as that of separating KFI and WSM. The same set cut through between WTLW and WGN and got WOR clearly and without any "fiddling" with the dials, at 10:15 p. m., when WTLW and WGN were broadcast.

Radio Board Is Disappointed

Engineers' Able to Help Little in Lessening Interference—Say Synchronization and New Station Transmission System May Be of Some Avail.

Results of the conference between the Federal Radio Commission and a number of leading engineers, held recently at Washington, appear to have been disappointing so far as the board was concerned.

As the conference opened, Gen. Saltzman remarked on the position in which the commission finds itself because of complaints of interference with reception, demands of broadcasters for better channels and more time, and congested condition of the air. He indicated that the commission hoped relief was near through engineering cooperation, especially through use of a new station antenna system and of synchronization.

But the engineers were not encouraging, agreeing that little could be expected at present in the way of relieving interference, though two methods were suggested by which broadcasting might be improved—synchronization of two or more stations on a channel, and adoption of a station transmitting method to increase the strength of a local signal and at the same time minimize the signal sent to a distance or to achieve exactly the opposite effect.

Westinghouse engineers described the proposed new antenna system as making it possible for a powerful cleared channel station to broadcast without blanketing reception locally. The system can also be used so that a local station can send out a strong signal in its own territory without interfering with distant stations.

Synchronization, as used by Westinghouse in Boston and Chicago, makes it possible to increase the service area of a program furnished identically to two or more stations without increasing the number of channels. It also reduces fading. A third advantage is that a small booster station can be erected to give service in a "dead spot" area where a station is not received.

When it is desired to have a station send out a strong local signal without distance transmission, the antenna is built so that it radiates a powerful wave along the ground but does not send one into the air to be deflected to distant areas by the Heaviside layer. If the station is on a cleared channel, it can be

Issuance of Auto Licenses

Will Commence Next Saturday at St. Louis Bureau's New Location, 1902 Pine Street—More Space, Better Parking Facilities.

Sale of 1930 State and city automobile license tags will begin next Saturday at 1902 Pine street, the new location of the auto license office here. The new licenses must be placed on all commercial and passenger cars by March 1.

Twice as much space is available at the new location as at the city hall, where licenses have been issued in previous years, according to O. P. Caulfield, Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicle Licenses.

Instead of one entrance, as formerly, there are now four entrances to accommodate the crowds. Permits entering at the nineteenth street doors may pass through the office, obtain their license plates and leave by the Pine street doors, thereby reducing congestion.

A force of 50 clerks will be ready to take care of the initial rush, Caulfield stated. In the large room opening off nineteenth street, motorists will be assisted with their applications. In the next room, certification of title and the applications themselves will be examined. The applicant will then pay his fee to the cashier and receive his plates, leaving the building at Pine street.

License tags are already coming in from the manufacturer, according to Caulfield, who declared his office is at work on firm orders for the 1930 plates. Such orders, totaling 20 or more license applications, are prepared in advance and the plates issued on the first day. Caulfield pointed out that in firm orders separate checks are not needed for each application, but that each class of application, whether pleasure car or truck, may be covered by one check.

Automobile dealers, whose practice it is to obtain their customers' plates, will be given unusually good service this year, he said. A separate counter has been set aside for dealers. The parking problem, which was bothersome at the City Hall in other years, will be much less acute at the Pine street location. The street in front of the office will be kept cleared of all-day parkers for the convenience of applicants. In addition, two privately operated parking lots nearby will provide space for more than 400 cars, at a nominal charge.

Issuance of reserved numbers that is, numbers from 1 to 1000, took place in the period from Dec. 15 to Jan. 2 at Jefferson City, and from Jan. 2 to 20 in St. Louis. Persons having few numbers may retain them from year to year by applying to the State Motor Vehicle License Commission's office.

Aircraft Show To Have Record List of Exhibits

Many Planes Made Here to be Shown, Technical Meets Held.

Airplanes, aircraft engines, equipment and accessories will be displayed in profusion at the International Aircraft Exposition at the Arena, Feb. 15 to 23, under the auspices of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America. Space has been engaged to date for 84 planes, representing 40 makes, with engine, equipment and accessory displays occupying approximately 200 booths in the Arena and the two adjoining wings. The exhibits will be colorfully decorated at considerable expense to the various manufacturers and distributors.

Among the more prominent exhibits will be those of the Curtiss-Wright organization, displaying 16 planes and accessories; Detroit Aircraft Corporation, including the St. Louis-made Ryan brougham, and the speedy Lockheed-Vega, Fokker, Fairchild, Stinson, Ford, Bellanca and other well-known manufacturers. Curtiss products will include the giant Condor, 15-passenger transport; the Kingbird, a recent development in twin-engine craft; the Carrier-Pigeon, a mail plane; the Robin, Fledgling and Hawk in standard models; and the Tanager, winner of the $100,000 Guizendheim safety prize. Features of the Tanager, which has the stock Challenger engine, are floating ailerons on the lower wing, and slots on

St. Louis Automobile Show Opens Next Week

Scene of Twenty-Third Exhibit Shifts From Union Market to Arena—Passenger Car Salon and Display of Old-time Cars Will Be Features—Seats for 13,700 Spectators.

By ROBERT L. BRADLEY, Automobile Editor.

The scene of St. Louis' annual automobile show shifts this year from the Union Market, Broadway and Morgan street, to the Arena, where a mammoth display of passenger and commercial cars, heavy-duty trucks, accessories and shop equipment will be thrown open to the public Feb. 3, lasting throughout next week.

It will be the twenty-third time the auto show will have been held here, and indications are that it will surpass those of other years, both in the number of exhibits and in the changes that have been made in the various models.

For the first time, a salon of de luxe cars will be presented in connection with the show to include one passenger car of every line sold in St. Louis.

It will be the first automobile show at which seats will be available for spectators. There will be 13,700 seats in the salon, where the onlookers may rest, listen to the musical programs and view the de luxe cars.

An innovation will be a group of old-time cars, relics of the industry's beginnings. And for the first time St. Louisans will enjoy adequate parking facilities, indoors and outdoors.

Choice positions will be given commercial cars and heavy-duty trucks.

More than $10,000 has been spent in decorating the Arena and the Exhibit B building, flanking the main building on the west. The structures will take on the appearance of a huge garden and the visitors will pass through bowers of roses, smilax and verdant shrubbery as they parade the aisles.

The de luxe cars will be shown in spaces 20 by 30 feet in size. Light, slender trellises, twined with green smilax shipped from Louisiana and Florida, will separate the booths. The splendor of the setting will be set off by hundreds of flood lights suspended from the balcony. Six huge Japanese chandeliers, 20 feet tall and six feet wide, will be hung from the vaulted roof of the auditorium, which itself is the equivalent of 13 stories in height.

Mr. Robert E. Lee, who has managed each of the previous 22 automobile displays, and who is president of the National Association of Automobile Show Managers, conceived the chandelier idea.

Among the salon displays will be the M. G. Midget sports roadster, Great Britain's popular product, which is of the four-cylinder, overhead valve type, with a fuel consumption of 49 miles to the gallon, piston displacement of 84.5 cubic inches and an asserted high speed of 65 miles an hour. At the southern terminus of the salon will be the display of antique cars, including a 1903 Franklin, formerly the property of Dr. Scamuel A. Pease of St. Louis; a 1904 Cadillac, a 1909 Oakland, a 1909 Hupmobile, showing what one of the first four-door phantoms looked

Germany Tackles Crossing Problem

A VIEW of one of the new light signals which have been erected in an effort to eliminate accidents at railway crossings. Inefficiency of the old type of signal cost many hundreds of lives in Germany last year. When a train draws near this signal, which ordinarily is white, it flashes red as a warning to motorists.

Bureau Gives Tour Data

THE Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch is able, through an arrangement recently entered into, to furnish the latest information as to road conditions in all parts of the United States. Telegraphic reports are received by the bureau as conditions change, and routings for winter tours are made up with these reports used as a foundation.

Of particular interest at this time of the year is information relating to California and Florida motor trips. The facilities of the bureau are available to any reader of the Post-Dispatch desiring to take such trips.

In addition, the comprehensive map service is offered at a nominal cost. The maps not only provide data as to roads but as to mileage between major points and other important items.

Old Cars a Stimulant

The old-car problem has been solved in Hawaii. The pineapple requires its iron every day as a stimulant. So to make it soluble of iron oxide, parts of old cars are melted in a bath of acid and the oxide thus obtained used as a spray for the tropical fruit.

Remove Ticks From Roads

Boy Scouts of Douglas, Ariz., do their daily good deeds by removing ticks and other pests from the roads. They also remove ticks from highways and city streets.

City Loses Tax.
Because owners find it cheaper for them to raze the buildings and rent the ground to individuals or companies for operation as open air parking stands than to pay taxes upon both the land and the building, Philadelphia, Pa., will lose about $100,000 this year. Approximately $10,000,000 worth of real estate in the center of the city is being used at the present time for open air parking spaces.

There will be lunch service provided for those on duty at the show and for those who come early in the evening and there will be ample rest room facilities in both the Arena and B building.

It is asserted by the show committee that never before has there been such unlimited free parking space. The entire 57 acres of cinder area in the rear and immediately east of the exhibition buildings will be used for free parking for more than 5000 cars. There

Auto Show Attracts Many.
In addition to a daily attendance of 35,000 during the National Automobile Show held recently in New York City, more than 2800 dealers from all parts of the United States visited the exhibition. There was also a considerable delegation from Canada and more than 140 representatives from 35 other countries.

New Speedster Line With Five Models Offered

Speed; Many New Features.

Packard has brought out a new line of special built cars designed to give the maximum in performance. They are known as the Packard speedsters. Five different body types are included, two runabouts, a phaeton, victoria, and sedan.

They are frankly built for those who desire something more in speed and performance than is offered by anything but specially built cars. At the same time they are so designed that details are kept standard wherever possible to make service work easy.

The engines have special exhaust and intake manifolding, special cylinder blocks and special camshafts. In many other respects they are the same as the motors of the regular Packard custom and deluxe models. They develop 125 to 145 horsepower on the dynamometer, depending on the compression ratio.

Each car is tested on the two and one-half mile concrete speedway at the Packard proving grounds so thoroughly that it is ready for maximum performance at any time. Packard, in talking of the new cars, gives the warning that caution must be exercised in using the speedsters' maximum power only under the most favorable highway conditions.

One of the speedster runabouts has a perfectly streamlined body and a low, racy appearance. This car has staggered seats, the driver's seat being placed slightly forward of the passenger's seat, as in a racing car, to insure the driver against any interference when traveling at high speed. The other runabout has a straight across front seat with a rumble seat in the rear deck to accommodate two extra passengers.

The phaeton provides seating capacity for four persons and, like the runabout, is low and sleek in appearance. The victoria is a four-passenger, close coupled enclosed car with a single wide door on each side. The sedan is roomy although the body is set low and will seat five persons.

All five cars have custom built bodies with unlimited choice of colors and a wide variety of upholstery choices. Each has a wheel base of 124 inches and special attention has been given to acceleration and stopping because of the great possibilities possessed by the cars in acceleration and speed.

One Automobile To 4.5 Persons In United States

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The per capita ownership of automobiles in the United States, at the end of the present year, was approximately one to every 4.5 persons.

The net increase in automobile registrations during 1929 was 1,188,000 vehicles. During the same period a total of $8,594 miles was added to the network of Federal and state highway systems.

These figures are the result of a survey by the American Motorists Association, showing the trend of motorism in the United States during the past 15 months.

Comparing the number of cars in use to the number of miles of available highways, the survey shows that there are approximately eight automobiles for each mile of road in the United States, compared with 7.8 automobiles for each mile of highway as of January, 1929.

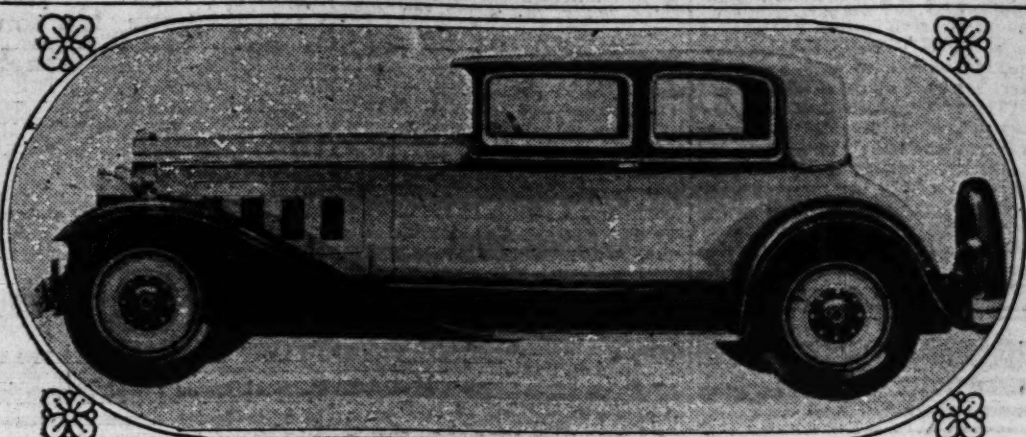

Motor vehicle fatalities, according to estimates, last year approximated 27,000 deaths. Of these, about 5000 deaths occurred in the 18 largest cities of the country. Reduced to a ratio, the motor vehicle death rate the past year was 22.5 per 100,000 population, as compared with 22.5 per 100,000 in 1928, or an increase of 15 per cent during 1929, the A. M. A. survey shows.

During the past year 20 states passed laws providing for higher gasoline taxes. Massachusetts on Jan. 1, 1929, and New York on May 1, were the last two to enact such laws. In Illinois on Aug. 1, a new gasoline tax law became effective, the former law being held unconstitutional in 1927. Motorists last year paid an average gasoline tax of $17 per motor vehicle.

"Pointer" Type Of Speedometer Is Announced

A NEW "pointer" type speedometer has been introduced by the AC Spark Plug Co.

Indication of speed is obtained by means of the pointer, which moves around a full circle scale, similar to that of a clock.

At 60 miles an hour, for instance, the pointer would be in the 12 o'clock position of the hands on a clock. Thus speed may also be known simply by the position of the pointer.

The new instrument contains many engineering refinements, it is said.

Power, Comfort And Flexibility Mark Two Models

Power, economy of operation, comfort and flexibility mark the new eight-cylinder and six introduced by Dodge Brothers in St. Louis last week.

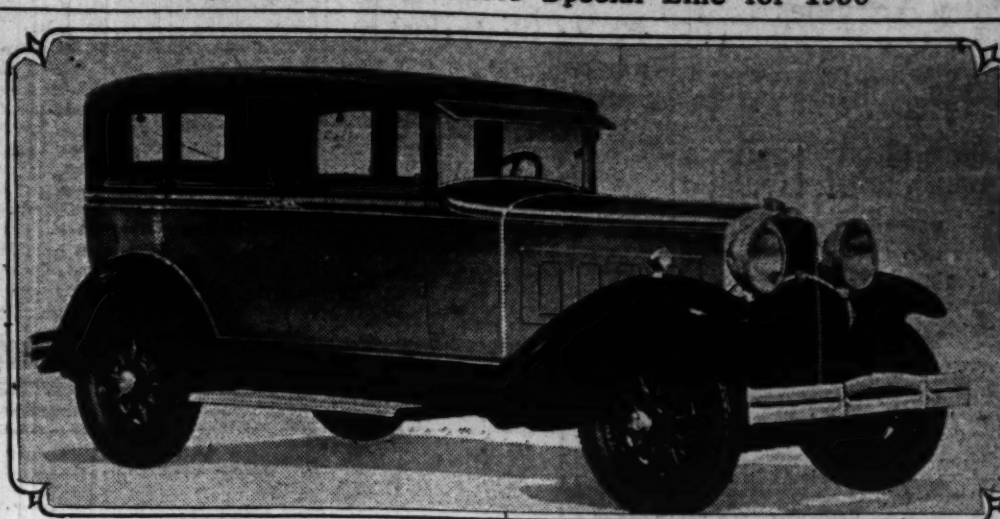

A demonstration in cars furnished by the Milestrad Motor Co., local Dodge distributor, last week was proof of the company's contention that the new cars are easily handled and are possessed of excellent hill-climbing and acceleration qualities.

The tests were made in Forest Park on a day when the roads were covered with ice and snow. On steep hills, both the six and the eight showed no hesitation in making the ascent at less than seven miles an hour in high, although neither had been driven more than 100 miles.

Of particular interest to the writer was the transmission in both models, which permits of smooth, easy gear-shifting with little or no grinding or friction.

Due to the fact neither car had been broken in, no effort was made to determine their high speeds. It was said, however, that the six will do better than 60 and the eight better than 80.

Auto Radios to Be Marketed by Battery Company

A merchandising arrangement had been effected between the Automobile Radio Corporation and Willard service stations, whereby this nation-wide sales and service organization would be available to motorists for the sale, installation and service of transistors, the automobile radio.

The merchandising arrangement will mean that Transistone automobile radios may be bought, installed and serviced at any of the network of 42,000 Willard service stations in the United States, according to C. W. Lockhart, St. Louis Willard manager.

This move is said to be the result of the growth in popularity which radio in motor cars has enjoyed in the past year.

MORE POWERFUL... THAN ANY OTHER 6-CYLINDER ENGINE OF ITS SIZE

New 87 horsepower motor—Lines and colors of an entirely different style conception—Interiors that presage a new art in fine car upholstery and appointment

In the new Willys-Knight Great Six, the patented double sleeve-valve engine sweeps to further heights of power, smoothness and efficiency. America has no record of any six-cylinder engine of comparable size which develops as much torque and power as the masterful engine of the 1930 Great Six—a car now even faster and livelier than ever before.

This engine is clothed in a setting of regal beauty—lines and colors, coachwork and finish, interior upholstery and details different from those of any other fine car.

In the 1930 Willys-Knight "70-B," the superiorities of the sleeve-valve engine and the beauties of modern design interpreted by master artists, are available at a record low price for so large and powerful a car.

Dependable performance, low operating costs, simplicity of engine design and construction, make the 1930 Willys-Knights decidedly economical to own and drive. Come in and see the new Willys-Knights, and arrange for a demonstration.

Boy and Girl Scout Activities

BOY SCOUTS TO BEGIN

Educational Director Puffer Announces Requirements for Parts 3 and 4.

Troop participation in Boy Scout Anniversary Week, Feb. 7 to 13, and an active part in the annual Scout Circus, Feb. 23 to March 1, will be the requirements for Parts 3 and 4 of the St. Louis Boy Scout Achievement Roundup being conducted by the local scout organization, according to William Puffer, educational director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. Parts 3 and 4 form the final half of the roundup, which started Dec. 1.

The different parts of the Achievement Roundup, which was designed to stimulate progress of local scouts in preparation for the circus, were kept secret until time for the troops to start working on them. Part 1 covered the recruiting of new members, each troop being assigned a quota Dec. 1, an attempt being made to reach this quota by Dec. 31. Part 2, which is still in progress, set goals of advancement in rank for individual scouts.

Under Part 3, points will be awarded to every troop accomplishing certain objectives during Anniversary Week. Twenty-five points will be awarded for attendance of 50 per cent of the troop at church on Sunday, Feb. 9; 25 points will be given for a neighborhood or institutional good turn participated in by 50 per cent of the troop, and inspection by the troop committee and representation at the annual scout leaders' meeting at the Hotel Chase Feb. 10 will each score 25 points.

A special award of 15 points will be given for every 12-year-old boy recruited as a Scout during this week. The registering of these Scouts, however, must be done on a special blank. Badges will be presented to these special Scouts at a separate ceremony at the circus.

To meet the requirements of part 3, a troop must score 100 points, obtained in any combination of the events. Those who make their score will be given a streamer at the circus, and will also be counted as passing one more requirement for winning a gold streamer.

Part 4 of the roundup will require active participation of at least eight troop members in one of the circus events, the grand entry of all Scouts not being counted as an event. In addition a troop must sell at least 60 per cent of its quota of tickets to the circus, and have made a cash settlement for this many tickets before 5 o'clock on the evening of Feb. 28.

The gold streamer will be awarded to all troops meeting their requirements in the four parts of the roundup.

Headquarters Notes.
The last opportunity for local Boy Scouts to obtain instruction in signaling, before the Scout Circus, will be given next Saturday afternoon, according to William Puffer, educational director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. Instruction classes in this subject will be held at the Rose Fanning School, the Ben B. Smith Junior High School and the Farragut School in the city. A class in first-class signaling will be conducted at the Webster Groves Trust Co., and one in second-class signaling will be held at the First National Bank of Webster Groves, for Suburban District scouts.

The next sessions of the Boy Scout Boards of Review, to examine applicants for advancement in scout rank, will be held in each of the four districts the week of Feb. 17, according to Educational Director Puffer. These boards will come immediately before the Scout Circus, and will be the last opportunity for scouts to qualify for advancement during the present achievement roundup.

A warning that scouts wishing to attend the swimming classes being conducted at the Beaumont and Roosevelt school pools Thursday evenings must be in the pool by 7:30 o'clock has been issued by local scout headquarters. According to the agreement with the school authorities, no scout will be admitted after 7:30 o'clock.

The training classes in leadership conducted by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council this winter are drawing to a close, according to Educational Director Puffer. The elementary training course was completed yesterday afternoon with a hike to Troop 180's cabin, the twelfth and final meeting of the first aid class will be held at the Washington University Medical School Wednesday evening, and the next to the last meeting of the advanced training course will be held at the Stix School tomorrow evening.

Col. H. D. McBride, Scout Commissioner of St. Louis, will talk at this meeting on "The Measure of a Good Troop," while another discussion will be on "The Measure of a Good Scoutmaster."

A new series of training courses is to be started in March.

North District.

The Wolf Patrol won the first contest of a new "king patrol" system introduced to Troop 1 of the Grace Holy Cross Church at the meeting last week, by besting out the Flying Eagles in a nature-

TO GIVE COURSES FOR GIRL SCOUT LEADERS

Council to Offer Nine Weeks' Training for Prospective Troop Heads.

Three training courses in Girl Scout leadership, for prospective Girl Scout troop heads and for other women interested in the movement, will be conducted by the local Girl Scout Council during the next nine weeks, according to Miss Ruth Sampson, director of the organization here.

A course will be conducted at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue, on Friday evenings, under the direction of Miss Eleanor Stevens, captain of Troop University City 1, and Miss Janice Fenton, captain of Troop 41. Another will be held at the Carpenter Branch Library, 3309 South Grand boulevard, on Wednesday evenings, under the leadership of Mrs. Charles Wiegand, captain of Troop 31, and Miss Ruth McCulley, captain of Troop 61. The third will be held at the First Congregational Church, Webster Groves, under Miss Dorothy Peterson, captain of Webster Groves 1, and Miss Helen Bishop, captain of Webster Groves 6.

The first meeting of the courses will deal with the aims and methods of the Girl Scout organization, and a discussion of the Girl Scout troop as managed through the patrol system and the Court of Honor. As a practical demonstration, the classes will be divided into patrols of six to eight members, just as though each class were a troop. Each patrol will elect its own patrol leader for the course. Games and songs, used extensively in the Girl Scout program, will also be employed in the training courses as methods of demonstrating points.

All of the girls and women directing the courses have attended training courses given by the national Girl Scout Council, as a preparation for conducting these local classes. Miss Fenton and Miss Bishop attended courses at Camp Edith Macy, the national Girl Scout leaders' training school in New York; Miss Peterson and Miss McCulley received instruction at the National Training School at Estes Park, Colo., and Miss Stevens and Mrs. Wiegand attended school at Camp Minnesota.

study project. The Bob White Patrol won inspection at the meeting.

South District.
Troop 34, of the Shenandoah School, was the first troop in the South District to make a definite report of tickets sold for the Scout Circus.

The duties of all troop officers were discussed Monday evening by Field Executive C. H. Laemmle at a meeting of the scoutmaster, senior patrol leader, patrol leaders, and members of the troop committee of Troop 39, with the pastor and president of the council of the Redeemer Lutheran Church, where the troop has headquarters. A brief review of the troop's history was given by the Rev. Mr. Buchelmer, pastor of the church, and by Committeeman William Voertmann. Plans were made for a special Scout Sunday church service, Feb. 9, with the troop attending church in a body.

Scoutmaster Metzger and 12 scouts of Troop 168, of St. Plus Church, conducted an investiture ceremony as a demonstration before the members of the scoutmasters' elementary training course at the Michael School Monday. Scouts Robert Bauman and Armando Todt were the recruits' invested with scout rank. Scoutmaster Metzger was scribe of the training course, and Assistant Scoutmaster Fei Dotto was a student.

West District.
Scout Charles Barnhart has been appointed patrol leader of the newly-reorganized sixth patrol of Troop 2, which meets at the Pilgrim Congregational Church. Scout Barnhart succeeds Scout Rouff, who has become senior patrol leader of the troop.

Five scouts of Troop 39 of the Y. M. H. A. have advanced to first-class rank, and two others have become second class. The new first-class scouts are George Gillerman, Abe Driseak, Harold Cohen, Jesse Wamersing and Sam Zabrock, while Sam Gollub and Harry Platt are the second class members.

Patrol Leader Fatkus and his Hawk patrol gave a demonstration in first aid at the meeting of Troop 49 at the First Presbyterian Church last week.

Suburban District.

Troop Kirkwood 4, which has been reorganized at the Kirkwood Presbyterian Church, held its first meeting, in its new form, at the church last Tuesday evening. Fifteen scouts were present. The new scoutmaster, J. T. Berger, and the new chairman of the troop committee, J. R. Rouff, took charge.

The first sales of tickets to the Scout Circus reported in the Suburban District were made by Troop Clayton 1, of the De Mun School.

Clinton-Romaker
Made Distributer
Of Bus, Truck Line

Will Handle Studebaker in St. Louis as Well as Little Rock, Ark.

The Studebaker Corporation of America, through R. L. Mowry, St. Louis branch manager, announces the appointment of the Clinton-Romaker Sales and Service Co. as distributor here for Studebaker buses, commercial and funeral cars. This company, newly organized, is a division of the Eighteenth Street Garage, 1723 Chestnut street, and will maintain sales and service quarters at the garage, where a complete line of parts for buses and commercial cars will be carried. The company will also have a sales and service branch for buses only at Little Rock, Ark.

both of the garage and of the sales company. Gus Caskey, service manager of the garage, will have charge of servicing the Studebaker units. C. S. Clinton, formerly associated with a local bus distributor, has been made sales manager. "The Clinton-Romaker company was selected to handle the Studebaker commercial line, because of its financial strength, capable personnel, favorable location and good reputation for service," Mowry declared.

The Studebaker commercial line consists of the following: Street car and parlor car type of eight-cylinder buses, heavy duty eight-cylinder chassis of 3 1/2, 5 and 3 1/2 ton capacity, 4, 1 1/4 ton and 4000-pound panel and screen delivery units and chassis, and funeral and ambulance cars, with six or eight-cylinder engine.

Funeral for Old Motors.
The City Council, Chamber of Commerce, Automobile Club and various dealers in Lincoln, Neb., recently held a bonfire of 200 old motor vehicles. Police guarded the ruins afterward to prevent youths from carrying off parts with which to repair collegiate flivvers.

Develop Product To Remove Carbon
From Motor Cheaply

For years automobile manufacturers have recognized that deposits of carbon in the motor of a car, causing a 30 per cent loss of power, constitute a great evil, but little has been done toward developing a process that would remove carbon cheaply and efficiently.

Now, however, according to J. M. Price, president of the Alemite

Co. of St. Louis, the Alemite Corporation has developed a product known as "Carbon-solver" which is said to solve the problem of removing carbon and eliminating sticky valves and piston rings.

On recent tests a car was driven 50,000 miles without a single valve grinding job, according to Price, and on being disassembled it was found to be free of carbon.

Clutch is Adjustable.

American "Eight"
Sets Four Speed
Marks in France

By maintaining an average speed of 56.36 miles per hour over a distance of 2072 miles, a straight eight Graham has set a new 24-hour international record on the Montlhery track near Paris, France.

Altogether, four new international class B records were made during the course of the trial, as follows: 2000 kilometers at 57.25 miles per hour; 3000 kilometers at 55.47 miles per hour; 2000 miles at 56.53 miles per hour, and 24 hours at 56.36 miles per hour.

These marks supersede the four records established some time ago by an American eight on the Atlantic City speedway, it is said. Marjand, a noted British racing motorist, owner of the Graham eight, with two relief drivers, took the Graham from London to Montlhery only to find that the track was covered with snow and ice. The attempt at the record was begun at 3 p. m., although it was raining heavily.

Before the end of the trial the drivers had to contend against extremely unfavorable weather conditions. Shortly after the start a dense fog descended and remained until about 1 o'clock the next morning. A torrential downpour partly cleared the fog, but was succeeded by a heavy gale.

Ivory Auto Co. to
Line of Automobiles

S. W. Gross Announces Firm Will Sell Grams and Paiges.

Appointment of the Ivory Auto Co., 1895 Ivory avenue, as a metropolitan dealer handling Graham passenger cars and Paige commercial cars, is announced by Sol W. Gross, president of the Ivory Motor Co., distributor.

Peter S. Haas, who is one of the youngest automobile dealers in St. Louis, yet who has a successful record, is president of the company, which, since October, 1925, has handled another line of cars. Arthur Sherman is sales manager.

The company will hold its formal opening next Tuesday, with a representative display of Graham sixes and eights and Paige commercial cars. In connection with the opening, motion pictures of the Graham-Paige factory will be shown. A fireworks display is also scheduled.

Haas became enthusiastic over the Graham-Paige line of motor cars following a recent visit to the factory, where he had no difficulty in obtaining a personal hearing with the three Graham brothers. Their ready accessibility and willingness to discuss problems with dealers and also with the public was a factor in deciding Haas to change his line of cars, according to Gross.

Declares Care of Battery Essential
In Winter Period

"Camel power" is being called to the aid of horsepower in many local garages these cold winter mornings, according to E. L. Meyer Jr. of the Meyer Tire Co., local distributors of Seiberling tires and batteries.

The double load imposed on the starter in cold weather as the result of cold, stiff oil and grease and slowly vaporizing gasoline demands a battery that will stand the toughest punishment," Meyer said. "You've got to have more than horsepower to get your car started on a cold morning."

"The Seiberling 'Camel' sensational new battery recently introduced by the Seiberling Rubber Co. is built to give service—and real service—at every temperature, summer and winter. It will supply plenty of 'juice' to start the most stubborn motor on the coldest day."

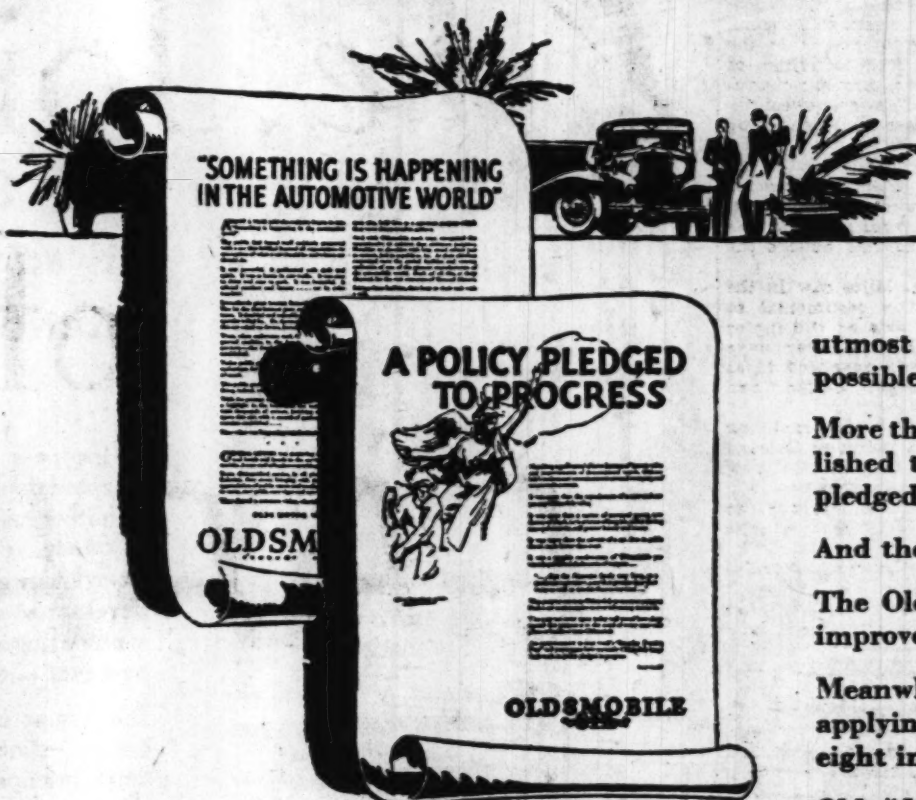

Factory Increases
1930 Production

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 25.—Closing the best year in its history, Olds Motor Works is entering 1930 with increasing production schedules for both the Oldsmobile six and Viking eight. It is expected that the production during January will exceed that of the same month a year ago.

utmost to provide these qualities at the lowest possible cost . . .

More than three years ago, Olds Motor Works published this declaration of purpose, and publicly pledged itself to this policy of progress.

And the promise has been fulfilled.

The Oldsmobile Six reflects this purpose in the improvements which have been made.

Meanwhile, the Viking Eight was introduced, applying the same principles to a 90-degree V-type eight in the great medium-price field.

Olds Motor Works recognizes four responsibilities in its policy pledged to progress . . . first, to engineer progressively . . . second, to manufacture faithfully . . . third, to sell honestly . . . and fourth, to support its dealers and join with them in the most equitable service policy in existence. Olds Motor Works' interest in every sale goes far beyond the time of purchase.

And now, at the beginning of this new year, Olds Motor Works renews its pledge and reaffirms its responsibilities in order that in 1930, as in years past, it shall retain the sincere friendship of every owner . . . and that every motorist may consider the purchase of either Oldsmobile or Viking with absolute confidence.

Co. of St. Louis, the Alomite Corporation has developed a product known as "Carbo-solve" which is said to solve the problem of removing carbon and eliminating sticky valves and piston rings.

On recent tests a car was driven 10,000 miles without a single valve grinding job, according to Frank and on being disassembled it was found to be free of carbon.

Clutch Is Adjustable.

American "Eight" Sets Four Speed Marks in France

By maintaining an average speed of 83.36 miles per hour over a distance of 207.4 miles, a straight eight Graham has set a new 24-hour international record on the Montlhery track near Paris, France.

Altogether, four new international class B records were made during the course of the trial, as follows: 2,000 kilometers at 87.25 miles per hour; 2,000 kilometers at 84.47 miles per hour; 2,000 miles at 86.69 miles per hour, and 24 hours at 83.36 miles per hour.

These marks supersede the four records established some time ago by an American eight on the Atlantic City speedway, it is said.

Marendaz, a noted British racing motorist, owner of the Graham eight, with two relief drivers, took the Graham from London to Montlhery only to find that the track was covered with snow and ice. The attempt at the record was begun at 3 p. m., although it was raining heavily.

Before the end of the trial the drivers had to contend against extremely unfavorable weather conditions. Shortly after the start a dense fog descended and remained until about 1 o'clock the next morning. A torrential downpour partly cleared the fog, but was succeeded by a heavy gale.

Ivory Auto Co. to Handle Different Line of Automobiles

S. W. Gross Announces Firm Will Sell Grams and Paiges.

Appointment of the Ivory Auto Co., 7805 Ivory avenue, as a metropolitan dealer handling Graham passenger cars and Paige commercial cars, is announced by S. W. Gross, president of the Gross Motor Co., distributor.

Peter S. Haas, who is one of the youngest automobile dealers in St. Louis, yet who has a successful record, is president of the company, which, since October, 1935, has handled another line of cars. Arthur Sherman is sales manager.

The company will hold its formal opening next Tuesday, with a representative display of Graham sixes and eights and Paige commercial cars. In connection with the opening, motion pictures of the Graham-Paige factory will be shown. A fireworks display is also scheduled.

Haas became enthusiastic over the Graham-Paige line of motor cars following a recent visit to the factory, where he had no difficulty in obtaining a personal hearing with the three Graham brothers. Their ready accessibility and willingness to discuss problems with dealers and also with the public was a factor in deciding Haas to change his line of cars, according to Gross.

Declares Care of Battery Essential in Winter Period

"Camel power" is being called to the aid of horsepower in many local garages these cold winter mornings, according to E. L. Meyer Jr. of the Meyer Tire Co., local distributors of Selberling tires and batteries.

"The double load imposed on the starter in cold weather as the result of cold, stiff oil and grease and slowly vaporizing gasoline demands a battery that will stand the toughest punishment," Meyer said. "You've got to have more than horsepower to get your car started on a cold morning."

"The Selberling 'Camel' sensational new battery recently introduced by the Selberling Rubber Co. is built to give service—and real service—at every temperature, summer and winter. It will supply plenty of 'juice' to start the most stubborn motor on the coldest day."

Factory Increases 1930 Production

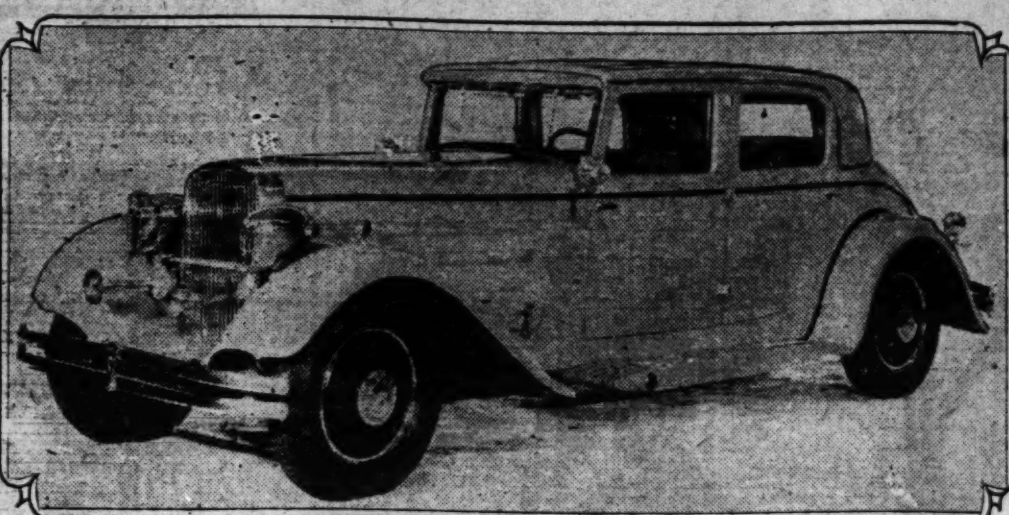

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 25.—Closing the best year in its history, Olds Motor Works is entering 1930 with increasing production schedules for both the Oldsmobile six and Viking eight. It is expected that the production during January will exceed that of the same month a year ago.

Baker Again Sets Speed Mark From New York to Miami

POWERED by its new air-cooled airplane engine, a stock Franklin sedan, with "Cannon Ball" Baker at the wheel, has added another to its list of road records by breaking all previous records over the 1451-mile route from New York to Miami, Fla.

Officially checked out of New York by Western Union timers, Baker was checked in at the finish line in Miami just 24 hours and 20 minutes later, clipping five hours and one minute off the previous record. The time was checked at the finish by Postal Telegraph officials.

The average for the run was 59.6 miles an hour. At times the Franklin maintained a speed of 80 miles an hour. Not once was the engine permitted to stop.

R. D. Paine Made Commercial Head Of Brake Concern

Announcement is made of the appointment of R. D. Paine as manager of the commercial sales department of Universal Brake Service. For 10 years he was a business associate of the owners of the company, when they had other connections.

Paine is well known in the brake service field and has considerable experience in the sale of brake service and brake lining in St. Louis.

The Universal Brake Service Co., which opened last September, specializes in brake service for passenger cars and truck of all makes. Leading brands of brake lining are sold by the company.

Cleaning Vacuum Tank.

Cleaning the vacuum tank is a task that many motorists set for themselves. It is not very difficult. Care should be taken to avoid damage to the gaskets, especially the one in the top of the tank. It must be absolutely airtight.

Chicago Auto Show Opens in Gala Setting

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Amid a setting of splendor the thirtieth annual Chicago automobile show opened here today at the Coliseum, unveiling alongside each other the eagerly awaited 1930 offerings of America's great motor car manufacturers as well as the newest developments in accessories and shop equipment.

That the big exposition is destined to prove a success was assured by the first day's attendance. Long before the hour of the show's opening a line formed outside the Coliseum doors.

Manager S. A. Miles saw in the public's interest a testimonial to the supreme efforts of the motor car builders who this year have brought out many advanced ideas in style, mechanical design and value.

In order to give visitors living within a 50-mile radius of Chicago an opportunity to view the new car creations, the exposition will be opened tomorrow, marking the first time in history that exhibits have been open on Sunday.

The huge Coliseum auditorium simulated "a bit of old England," with a great panorama depicting aesthetic and cultural spots famed in history.

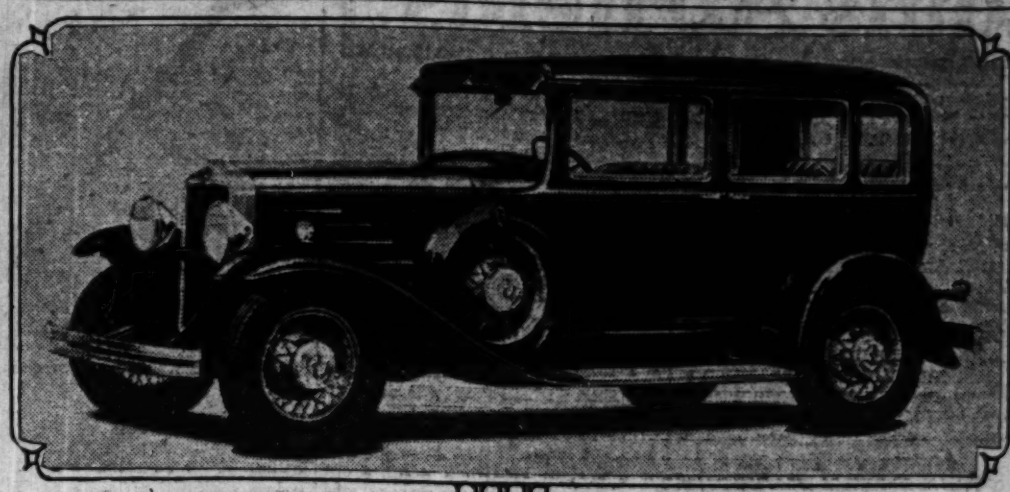

Forty-four makes of 1930 model motor cars and two of taxicabs occupy the main floor in the Coliseum as well as the north hall and south annex which adjoin. Exhibits in the accessory division, of which there are 125, are grouped about the Coliseum balcony and second floor of the south annex, while the 53 shop equipment displays are located on the second floor of the north hall.

The $5,000,000 automotive display reveals countless innovations. A number of former six-cylinder builders have added eights and several of them are concentrating on this type exclusively. For the first time in show history a 16-cylinder model has made its appearance. Another trend is toward four-speed transmissions, a type of design that made its debut two years ago and has since found increasing favor among manufacturers. The show also marks the first appearance of non-shatterable safety plate glass on cars of medium price, another interesting development being the showing of what are known as "all-adjustable" bodies wherein both front and rear seats may be shifted to suit the needs of individual motorists.

Develop Synthetic Tires.

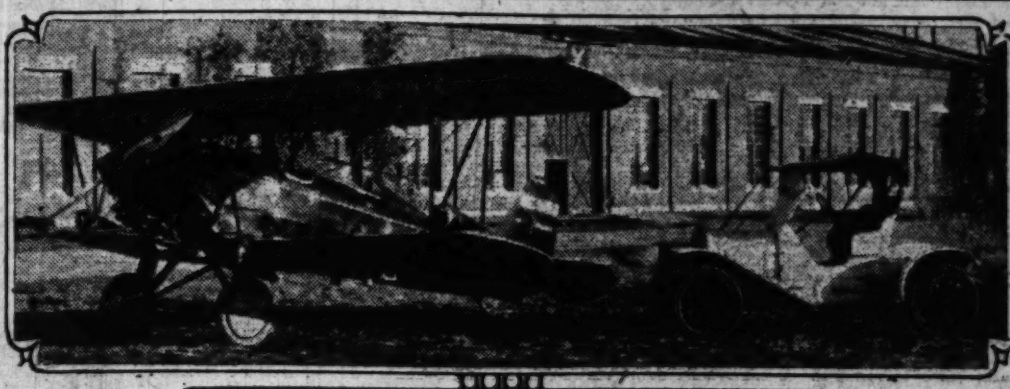

Soviet scientists in Moscow, Russia, have developed an automobile tire made of synthetic material said to have undergone successful tests of 10,000 miles.

One Manufacturer Raises Production Schedule by 33 Pct.

Output of "Eight" Is Also Increased .33 Pct. in January.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 25.—Substantial increases in production schedules for January are announced by Dodge Brothers. Orders placed by Dodge dealers at their recent convention in Detroit and the splendid reception the New Six and the New Eight received at the New York automobile show, have made necessary an increase of 33 per cent in the original production schedules of the low-priced six, and an 83 per cent increase in the original production schedule of the eight-cylinder models.

"These increased production schedules," said C. W. Matheson, general sales manager, "bring to light the interesting fact that American industry is returning to its normal stride more rapidly than was anticipated in appraisals made prior to Jan. 1, by business and industrial leaders in all parts of the country."

"In spite of these large increases the output for the month will still be insufficient to meet the demand."

The reception that has been accorded Dodge Brothers six and eight wherever they have been shown has been enthusiastic beyond all expectations. The fact that these pronounced increases in production had to be made before the new cars were universally announced and displayed affords ample proof of this statement.

Cars Utilize Copper.

Fifteen and one-half per cent of the total production of copper in the United States, or 145,000 tons, goes into the production of motor vehicles.

We Join the Ranks of GRAHAM dealers

VERY GOOD CARS AT LOW PRICES

TUESDAY we become dealers for Graham cars, and because of our knowledge of the Graham brothers and their product, we are deeply gratified to make this announcement.

We enter upon our connection with the Graham retail distributing organization with the feeling that it will enable us to render a distinct service by supplying this community with Graham cars.

They are indeed very good cars at low prices—to that we gladly testify out of our own experience and knowledge.

They are built to serve the individual, and serve him honestly and well, because they are built with the individual in mind, rather than the mass market as an objective.

We are ready now to have you call and inspect the latest Graham Sixes and Eights, and urge you to do so with the assurance of our belief that it will be well worth your time and effort to familiarize yourself with the Graham brothers' finest product.

We shall be especially glad to welcome our friends and customers in our new capacity of Graham dealers.

At St. Louis Airfields

AN anticipated action in accord with the general effort to reduce the operating expenses of air transportation companies took place last week with the announcement by Curtiss-Wright Flying Service that the base pay of 200 pilots in the organization had been reduced.

The new scale is $3600 a year for chief pilots, $3000 for grade A pilots, and $2000 for grade B men. Base pay previously varied from $3000 to $7500 a year. The two upper classes receive $3 an hour for day flying in single-engine ships and $4 an hour for multi-engine craft, with "double time" for night flying. Grade B men are paid $2 an hour for time in the air.

Carl Batta, local manager for Curtiss-Wright, said the base pay reduction is necessary if aviation is to create a volume of business through lower fares.

Universal Reduces Fare. Following the lead of other operators the Universal Aviation Corporation and other units of the Aviation Corporation have reduced fares to a level comparative with railroad fare with Pullman. The lines affected in addition to Universal are Colonial Air Transport, Embury-Riddle, and Southern Air Transport.

Fare reductions, started by Southwest Air Fast Express, and almost immediately adopted by T. A. T. Madoux, and Western Air Express, brought increased patronage on all lines, showing that the high fare and not fear of air travel stood in the way of a general use of air lines. Southwest Air Fast Express reports an increase of 300 per cent in passenger traffic under its rate of 5 cents a mile. T. A. T. Madoux and Western Air Express also announced a noticeable increase in the number of passengers. It is no longer unusual for every seat in the 13-passenger condor ships of T. A. T. to be occupied.

The new rate from St. Louis to Chicago over the Universal line is $14.74, as compared with $20, the previous charge. Tri-motored planes will again be used on the line to take care of the increased demand for the service.

Shell's Aviation Program. In preparation for an extensive aviation program to be launched next month by the Shell Oil Co., Lieut. James Doolittle, former army pilot, who has been placed in charge of the program, inspected several makes of commercial plane last week with a view to recommending purchases.

Lieut. Doolittle, who has flown military types for 12 years, visited Lambert-St. Louis Field and Parks Airport, flying Ryan, Lockheed, Parks and Cardinal planes. It is also expected that he will inspect the Curtiss-Robertson plane at Lambert Field this week. The Shell company is reported to have ordered a Travel-Air "Mystery S," the fastest commercial type, and will use a large fleet of ships to transport executives over 25 States and for the demonstration of Shell aviation products.

First Moth Plane Soon. The first Gipsy-Moth training plane will be produced at the Curtiss-Robertson plant at Lambert Field within a month, it was announced.

Production of the Moth was recently transferred from Lowell, Mass., to the local plant and the first shipment of machinery and material has arrived here. Moth and Robins will be produced at the rate of a plane a day this year, with the Thrush and Kingbird, new twin-engine plane, on a less frequent schedule.

Students Return to Stick. Rising temperatures and a cloudless sky Thursday was accompanied by general activity by flying students and their instructors. Processes sent up swirling blasts of snow and the roar of engines was constant throughout the day.

Dan Robertson in Mexico. Dan Robertson, former Lambert Field flyer, is piloting a passenger plane for the Pickwick Stage Co. in Mexico, according to word received here. Dan motored to Los Angeles last month and readily found a job, having had previous experience flying in Mexico.

What "Air Room" Means. The term "air room," has appeared recently in aeronautical publications. It applies to the practical flying space above an airport.

Junior Lindbergh Club. The Lindbergh Junior Aviation Club is being organized by Acting Field Manager Parks and his assistants. At Lambert-St. Louis Field it is planned to hold weekly classes in aeronautics at Lambert-St. Louis Field for boys and girls of high school age. Prizes for exceptional effort in the course will vary from sightseeing flights to a ground course at one of the local flying schools. The course will be conducted free of charge.

Three New Ryan Models. The Ryan Aircraft Corporation will offer three models this year. They are the standard B-5 biplane for five passengers and pilot, powered with Whirlwind engine; the B-7, also a six-place ship with the powerful Wasp engine; and a new four-place plane, the C-1 with Whirlwind engine, which will be introduced at the exposition next month. The Wasp Ryan sells for $14,900 and is designed for airline operators. The B-5 and the C-1 sell for $13,250 and $10,900 respectively and are favored by flying schools and private owners.

S. A. F. E. Buys Six Planes. Southwest Air Fast Express, operating between St. Louis and Dallas, Tex., became one of the largest users of Ryan planes last week with the purchase of six additional tri-motored ships, representing an investment of more than $300,000.

The additional equipment gives the airline 15 tri-motored transports and six single-engine planes. The additional equipment was required to take care of increased traffic under the new 5-cent-a-mile rate and for proposed extensions to the system. Eric Halliburton, president of S. A. F. E., has proposed a non-stop mail and passenger run between St. Louis and Dallas and has offered to carry mail at 60 cents a pound.

Avro Avian Plane Sold. The Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co. last week sold an Avro Avian equipped with wing slots, designed to avert "spins," to James Oldham of Danville, Ill.

Universal Basketball Schedule. Following their defeat by Western Military Academy at Alton last Wednesday the flying basketball team of the Universal School will meet the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service five Tuesday night at the Army, and the Service Department team at Scott Field Saturday.

John H. Mears Visits Airport. John Henry Mears, whose round-the-world travel record of 23 days, 15 hours was broken by the Graf Zeppelin, was a visitor at Parks Airport last week. Mears is planning another world girdling trip.

35 Ground School Graduates. Thirty-five students were graduated from the ground course of Curtiss-Wright Flying School Friday night. A new class will be enrolled tomorrow.

Natural Bridge Road Work Delayed. Reconstruction of Natural Bridge road, the main highway leading to Lambert-St. Louis Field, has been delayed by severe weather and some difficulty arising over condemnation proceedings involving land across which the road is to be laid. St. Louis County engineers originally announced plans for rapid construction of the highway, but present indications are that it will not be ready for use until mid-summer.

F-32 Giant Lacer Due Tuesday. The F-32, giant air liner, is scheduled to reach St. Louis Tuesday en route from New York to the Pacific Coast, where it will be put in service by Western Air Express. The ship has accommodations for 23 passengers and has four engines.

Spaniard at Air College. Narciso Basso of Barcelona, Spain, is a student at Parks Air College. His brother, Horatio, completed a flying course at the school last summer. The brothers are in the automobile business at Barcelona.

Altitude Flight Planned. Another attempt to break the world's altitude record for light planes will be made by Barney Zimmerman, test pilot for the Nicholas-Reasley Co., at St. Louis during the aircraft show next month. Zimmerman set an American record of 28,820 feet in a Barling NB-3 from Parks Airport last year.

Flying in Arctic Weather. Pilots flying out of Lambert-St. Louis Field have encountered "freak" conditions recently. The thermometer at the Government weather station at the field registered 19 below zero on Jan. 13, and 13 below last Wednesday.

Sales Territory Awarded. Sales territory in Central and Eastern Missouri and Southern and Central Illinois has been awarded to Curtiss-Wright Flying Service at St. Louis by the Curtiss-Wright Sales Corporation. Planes offered for sale will include Robin, Thrush, Moth, Kingbird, Travel-Air and Keystone amphibians.

Radio Executive Speaks. Eric F. Halliburton, president of the Southwest Air Fast Express, addressed the St. Louis Traffic Club last week, his subject being, "Air Transportation."

Halliburton declared air transportation will succeed only when the operator fills an obligation to the public to carry as cheaply and as safely as possible. He predicts that, because of the absence of right-of-way costs, that the airplane will become the cheapest means of public transportation.

Underwear by Air Mail. A shipment comprising 300 pounds of underwear was sent by air mail Thursday from St. Louis to Minneapolis, Minn., in order that the goods could be displayed at a special sale in a department store Friday. The underwear was made by the Well-Kalter Co. of Sparta, Ill., and was sent over the Universal system.

Lambert-St. Louis Field Visitors. Visitors to Lambert-St. Louis Field during the week included: Thomas Colby, Detroit, Mich.; E. M. Murphy, Houston, Tex.; Dudley Rider, Wichita Falls, Tex.; Peter Hill, Wichita, Kan.; and C. G. Dawson, Cincinnati.

Major Robertson Returns. Major William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Co., returned last week from a business trip to Florida and Cuba. A number of Moth planes will be shipped to the Curtiss organization in Cuba from St. Louis this week.

Two Universal Promotions. Two promotions were announced last week by the Universal Flying School. Arthur E. Nelson, former instructor at Hamden Trade School, who has been with Universal for the past year as a ground school instructor, was made assistant director of the institution, Walter Trefz, an instructor, became director of the mechanics school.

Obtains Complete Coverage of Auto Field This Year

Willis-Overland Has Four Lines of Passenger Cars, Two New Trucks.

Willis-Overland enters the 1930 automobile market with four lines of passenger cars, representing every major price class, and with trucks for every purpose.

In the quality field, Willis-Overland has the improved Willis Knight great six, which is presented in a wide range of models and colors and which embodies late engineering refinements.

The sleeve-valve motor is used also in the Willis-Knight "70 B," in the medium-price field. Improvements, including certain technical changes which increase the life of the engine, have been announced for this model.

In the low-priced six field is the Willis six, a new car with an engine that develops 65 horsepower and a high speed of 72 miles an hour in high and 48 miles an hour in second. This car is presented with a complete line of models, distinguished by beauty of design, color and appointments. Representation in the lowest price field is provided by the fast dependable Whipper four at new low prices.

Willis-Overland has gone into the commercial field thoroughly with the introduction of the new Willis six truck and a new truck powered by a Willis-Knight sleeve-valve engine in the 1½-ton class.

the leading edge of the upper wing The Keystone Patrician, Loring Amphibian, Moth and Travel Air "Mystery S," credited with being the fastest commercial ship, will be included in the Curtiss Wright exhibit. A feature of the exhibit will be a miniature lagoon, in which an amphibian will be floated.

The Detroit Aircraft group will include, in addition to the Ryan and Lockheed Vega models, Eastern flying boats and Parks trainers, the latter having been developed at Parks Airport.

The latest Bellanca models will have as a companion, the "Columbia," of trans-Atlantic fame.

Local products will include the aforementioned Robin, Thrush, Ryan and Moth, and the Cardinal, two-place cabin monoplane made by the St. Louis Car Co. Other exhibits of local interest will be the products of the Mono Aircraft Co., Moline, Ill., of which Sam Lambert, St. Louis automobile dealer, is the head, and the low-winged Barling NB-3, made at Marshall, Mo., by the Nicholas-Reasley Co. Production of the Moth was recently transferred from Lowell, Mass., to Lambert-St. Louis Field, while the Gipsy engine used in the Moth is made in the Wright Aeronautical Co.'s factory at Adelaide and McKimco avenues.

A feature of the show will be a highly theatrical performance on a specially constructed stage in the arena. The admission charge of 75 cents a person includes a seat at the performance, which will include "Pageant of Transportation," "Hall of the Elements," and a number of vaudeville acts. Meetings of various technical divisions of the Aeronautical Chamber will be held during the show period. Hundreds of persons connected with the industry will attend as representatives of the various exhibitors and as potential distributors and dealers.

50 horsepower six cylinder engine

Not until you drive the new Chevrolet Six can you appreciate what a wonderful improvement has been made in its famous six-cylinder valve-in-head engine. With its capacity increased to 50 horsepower, it has great reserve energy for sweeping up the steepest hills—for swift acceleration—and for sustained high speeds. Its power flows evenly and smoothly. And it is extremely flexible in traffic. In fact—it does everything you could possibly want a motor to do. Yet it is remarkably economical in its use of gasoline and oil. Come in today. Ten minutes at the wheel will prove a revelation!

MOX Is Fifth Station in Which CBS Has Interest

Acquisition by the Columbia Broadcasting System of an interest in KMOX, St. Louis, illustrates the policy of that network in supplying organizations of the National Broadcasting system with stations from which KSD and KWK chain features.

KMOX is the fifth important station in which the Columbia System has an interest. It is owned 10-50 by the prominent Famous Players-Lasky organization, and a group of the station's stockholders headed by William Paley, president, holds an interest. WCAU, Philadelphia, Pa., owned by men active in the Columbia System, the 35,000-watt Chicago station, and is related to be interested in WCCO, 10,000-watt station at Minneapolis, managed by former Radio Commissioner Henry Bell.

The National Broadcasting Co. operates WEAF, key station for its chain; WJZ, key for the Blue network, and WRC, key for a number of its programs from Washington. It also has taken over other stations and directed all of its programs, local as well as national, from these stations. It has control over KSD or KWK, not in a position to say what programs either of these St. Louis stations shall, or shall not broadcast. It merely supplies programs which are of such merit that the station affiliated with it are generally glad to broadcast.

KMOX for some time has held a permit to build a 50,000-watt station and has a site on the Baumgardner road, near its junction with Lemay Ferry road on which it proposed to erect the new transmitter. This site is 10 or 12 miles from the center of downtown St. Louis and not much farther from the residential center. Radio experts say that so powerful a station at that location probably will cause more reception troubles in St. Louis than does the present 100-watt KMOX transmitter in Skwood.

A start on the new KMOX plant, which is likely to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000, has been delayed from time to time. It is understood that negotiations with the Columbia System have been under way for weeks in an effort to get the CBS to assist in financing the super-power station project.

Anyway, Nelson R. Darragh, president of the Voice of St. Louis, which owns and operates KMOX, says now that construction of the 50,000-watt plant will begin the spring.

SEARS, ROEBUCK'S HOME FINANCING PLAN LAUNCHED

Ready Response Reported in St. Louis to Time-Payment Mortgage System of Building.

100,000,000 FUND MADE AVAILABLE

By Berry Moore.

The time-payment mortgage financing plan to be underwritten by Sears, Roebuck & Co. for home building and reconditioning of old homes, for which approximately $100,000,000 has been made available in St. Louis and in 47 other cities in the United States, has met with a ready response.

As announced by R. E. Wood, president of the company, its object is "to aid in meeting the demand for housing by providing a means of financing the construction and building materials supply."

J. E. Keltz, sales manager of the real estate division, said yesterday that more than 1500 prospective home builders had called at the offices of the company in the Arcade Building within the last week to inquire about the plan. Real estate men see this as an index to the potential number of home builders in St. Louis.

A majority of those who called today own lots and have building plans which were submitted for approval. Others are purchasing lots on the installment plan with a view of ultimately erecting homes, while some had selected lots for purchase as homesites, contingent upon the company's approval.

Plans ranging in cost from $4000 to $12,000 are contemplated. Manager Keltz denied a report that the company has under consideration a large tract in North St. Louis as a subdivision for homes to be financed by Sears, Roebuck & Co., or that the company would work exclusively with subdivision enterprise. Selection of lots will devolve entirely on the home builder who may build any part of the city or the suburban section sections excluded as undesirable.

100 Different Plans. While the company has 100 different plans to choose from, its architects, it is announced, will collaborate with the builder in incorporating his ideas in the home. The home builder may have his own architect.

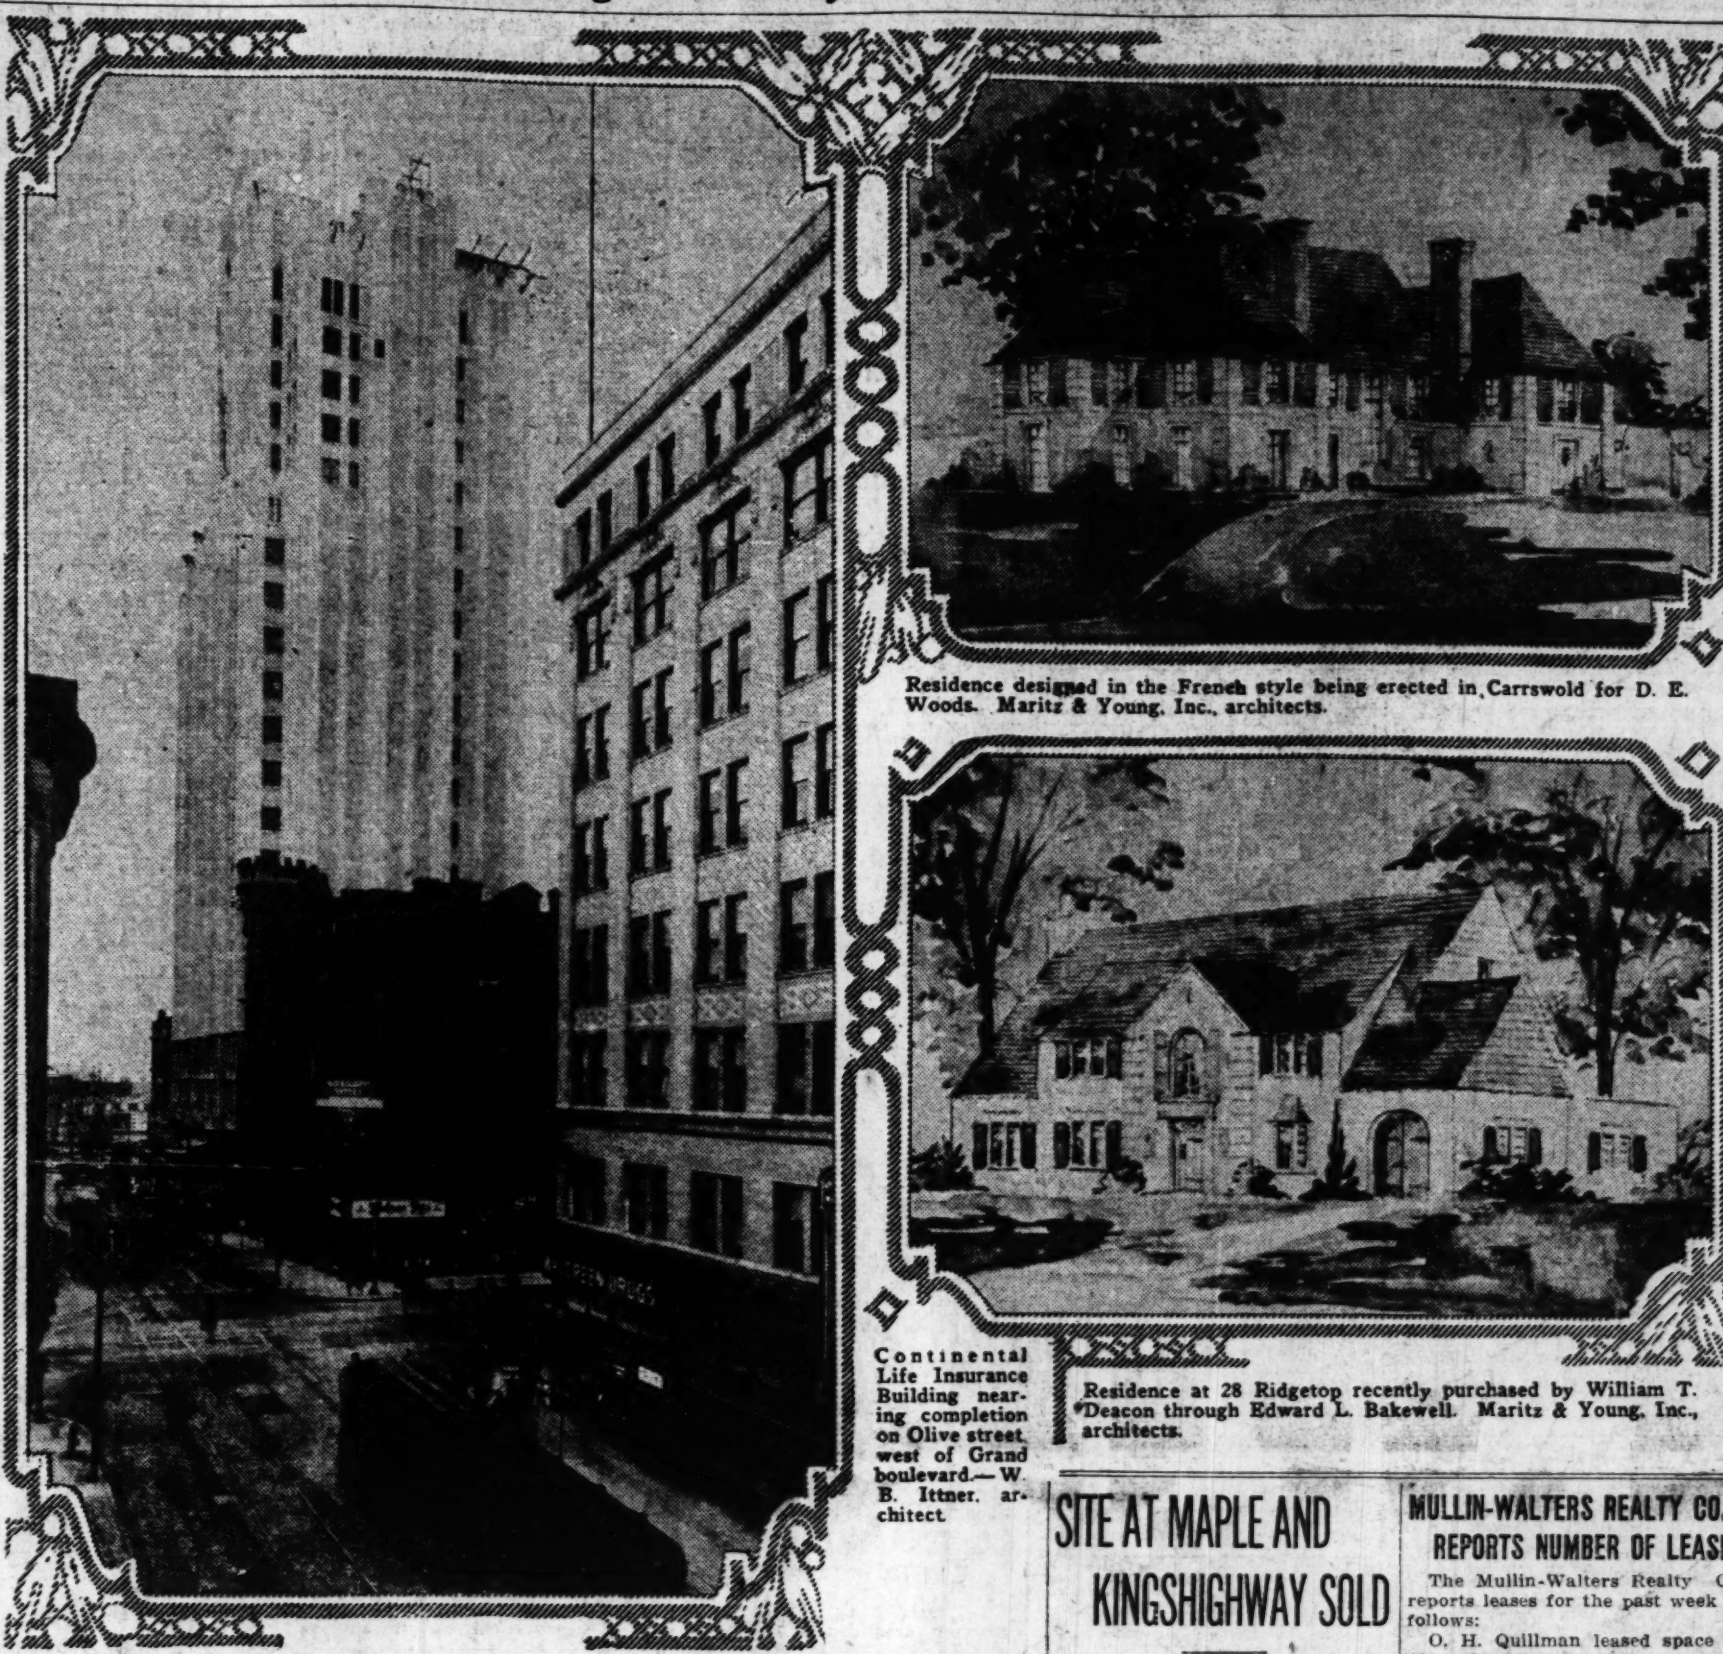

Nationally advertised and trademarked building materials will be used in the construction of the homes built and financed in St. Louis by Sears, Roebuck & Co., "containing Keltz. Exhibits and samples of many of the materials are already on hand, and we will welcome their inspection by prospective home builders."

"Photographs, architects' drawings and detailed blue prints of houses already built by Sears, Roebuck & Co. during the experimental stage of the campaign last year preparatory to the public announcement of the new construction and mortgage financing plan, is announced by Wood, are on display in the home division office, the new architectural plan book, illustrating in color and sepia, nearly 100 plans of homes as designed by our consulting architect, David S. Betone of Chicago, which Sears, Roebuck & Co. is prepared to build without delay, is being given free distribution from the office here.

"We are also ready to consult with any home builder who will submit to us his plans for a home. We will give estimates for the cost of construction at this time, and discuss our time payment mortgage financing plan under which one will be able to obtain a 10 per cent mortgage at 6 per cent interest, to be paid off in monthly installments like rent as low as $15 a month, over a period of 15 years, if desired. We are ready to start construction of any home as soon as weather conditions will permit."

Small Monthly Payments. The description given here to the home financing plan offered by

SITE AT MAPLE AND KINGSHIGHWAY SOLD

Property Occupied by Three Houses Said to Have Brought $50,000.

The property at the southwest corner of Maple avenue and Kingshighway, now occupied by three rock-front residences has been sold to J. E. Coffer, for a consideration reported to be $50,000. The site has a frontage of 137 feet on Kingshighway and 36 feet on Maple. It was owned by the Jacob Real Estate & Investment Co., which realized a handsome profit on its investment, according to the Jack Rosenblatt Realty Co., which handled the negotiations.

The residences occupying the site were not taken into consideration, the value being placed entirely on the ground which is regarded as a suitable site for a filling station or other business purposes.

Three New Salesmen at Trust Co. J. E. Crossman, R. E. Lefmann and Vincent Mueller have been added to the sales force at the University City Bank & Trust Co., Raymond M. Henley, real estate officer of the firm, has announced.

MULLIN-WALTERS REALTY CO. REPORTS NUMBER OF LEASES

The Mullin-Walters Realty Co. reports leases for the past week as follows: O. H. Quillman leased space at 1224 Washington avenue for a term of years to be occupied as an office and stockroom for the handling of knitwear. This lease was made for the account of the Gros-Freeman Dress Co. through the Mullin-Walters Realty Co.

The L. G. Waldman Printing Co. leased the first floor at 1625-24 Morgan street for a term of years to be occupied Feb. 1. Both parties were represented by Mullin-Walters Realty Co.

$6,000,000 DEAL CLOSED IN PARK-PLAZA PROJECT

Koplar Co. Receives Loan From Central States Insurance Co. for Completion of 29-Story Apartment.

The feature of the week in realty was a deal involving $6,000,000, closed between the Central States Life Insurance Co. and the Koplar Co.

The insurance company in this connection advanced $2,800,000, secured by a first deed of trust, for the completion of the 29-story Park-Plaza apartment building erected by the Koplar Co. at Kingshighway and Maryland avenue and the Koplar Co. acquired the holdings of the insurance company in a number of apartment buildings, at a valuation of $2,000,000. Commissions incident to the negotiations presumably account for the remaining $3,200,000.

The transaction was negotiated by the Franklin-American Trust Co. The Koplar Co. originally held a contract with the Greenbaum Sons Investment Co. for a $4,000,000 first mortgage loan on the building, made in 1928. It, however, did not avail itself of this loan, because of the building's location, being able to finance construction of the building until November, 1929, entirely from its own resources, according to the statement of the Franklin American Trust Co. The contract for this loan was canceled, due to low interest subsequently prevailing after an advantageous compromise with Greenbaum.

The apartments transferred include the Daniel Boone and the President, both on Lindell boulevard, the Adlon and four other smaller apartments. Title to these buildings will be taken by a new company to be organized by the Koplar Co. In addition to these apartments the Koplar Co. now controls the Park-Plaza, Congress Hotel, Senate Apartments and Embassy Apartments.

There has been a noteworthy decrease in the number of apartments in the Park-Plaza, which surpasses all other apartment projects in St. Louis, in size. It is understood that approximately 25 per cent of the space in the building is already under lease. There will be a garage in connection with the building, with accommodations for 300 cars. There also will be numerous shops on the ground floor and on the mezzanine floor. It is estimated that the completed project will cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

WILL COMPLETE DE SOTO HOTEL AS OFFICE BUILDING

Contractors Are Willing to Surrender Structure When Amounts of Liens Are Satisfied.

Plans were disclosed yesterday for completing the 16-story De Soto Hotel at the northeast corner of Eighth and Market streets as an office building, and for the erection of an additional building of the company, disposed of his stock of Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co., stock and bond concern, at 711 St. Charles street.

Financial arrangements have virtually been closed. It is understood, with Chicago investment bankers for the office building project, which is being handled by Harold Willson, president of the Willson Realty Co., together with Joseph W. Kopman.

The concrete frame of the De Soto Hotel has been completed to the height of six stories, but no work has been done on the structure for a year or more owing to lack of funds. The building was recently sold to satisfy liens of contractors. It is understood the contractors are ready to surrender the building to the office building promoters provided the amounts of the liens are satisfied.

The original building project was predicated on the possibilities of Market street, which is expected to be given augmented importance with the widening of the thoroughfare, as provided for in the bond issue.

Addition to Anderson Offices. Kopman was the contractor for the new 16-story Mark Twain Hotel, at the southeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets, which construction by the Claridge Hotel Co., of which Charles F. Levy is president. He also built the Tramor Castle apartments on Lindell boulevard. Willson has promoted a number of large apartment building projects, including the Versailles at the southeast corner of Skinker road and Rosebury avenue, and the Pierre Chouteau apartments in course of construction on Lindell boulevard east of Taylor.

Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co., of which Arthur C. Hilmer is president, purchased the ground to the east of the company's present building on St. Charles street several years ago with plans for the addition which will give the concern twice the floor space of the present structure. The new addition will have the height of the present building with which it will conform. The two buildings will be occupied entirely by the brokerage concern. The firm, which is a member of the New York, Chicago, Boston and St. Louis stock exchanges, ranks with the largest stock and bond houses in the country.

The present building, a four-story fireproof structure, with a red granite facade, was erected by the late Lorenzo E. Anderson, founder of Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co., from plans by the T. P. Barrett Co., architects. It is opposite the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. building.

Oliver J. Anderson, who succeeded his father as the head of the company, disposed of his stock several years ago to Hilmer, who was its vice president, and formed the stock and bond concern of Oliver J. Anderson & Co., which has quarters in the National City Bank at 215 Locust street. Anderson recently purchased the nine-story Columbia building at the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets, with plans for occupying the ground floor and several upper floors as quarters for Oliver J. Anderson & Co.

The A. G. Edwards & Sons recently acquired a long lease for space in the Victoria Building for new quarters on a large scale. This concern, one of the oldest in the city, now occupies quarters on the ground floor in the Merchants-Laclede Building at Fourth and Olive streets.

Noteworthy during the week was the sale of the Marquette Hotel property at the southeast corner of Washington avenue and Eighteenth street under a deed of trust in which Lewis Sturgis Day of the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co. was trustee. The only bidder was the Marquette Investment Co., holding a $1,000,000 mortgage, which took over the property for the nominal price of $400,000.

Erected 20 Years Ago. Negotiations, it is understood, are under way for the sale of the Marquette Hotel building and site to new interests, but the considerations involved and prospective purchasers are being withheld. The negotiations are being conducted through the Fletcher R. Harris company.

The property, consisting of a 10-story building and a site 150x160 feet, was owned by the George T. Thompson Hotel Co. Thompson, a former manager of the Hotel Chase, bought it 19 months ago from Sam Leavitt, assuming the mortgage and paying approximately $200,000 in cash.

The hotel was erected about 20 years ago by a syndicate promoted by Fletcher R. Harris, then of the former firm of McNair & Harris Real Estate Co.

DOUBLEDAY, DORAN BOOK SHOP AT 310 NORTH EIGHTH STREET After 10 years in the Arcade Building, the Doubleday, Doran Book Shops, Inc., now occupy a new location at 310 North Eighth street, between Olive and Locust streets.

The new shop is greatly enlarged and handsomely appointed. Considerable space is devoted to children's books, and a rare book room for fine books and leather bindings, attractively paneled in walnut.

At the American Theatre will end its subscription sale for "Marco Millions," and at the Shubert two dramas of widely different sort will be seen in "The Kingdom of the Blind" on Tuesday and Wednesday evening. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday she will appear in "The Love Machine," down at the Orpheum Theatre the second, and last week, of the comedy which may, or may not, be a success.

At all events, elsewhere on this week, in no uncertain words, she will present herself to the uncomplaisant theatrical people.

Szell as the Soloist With The Symphony

Leader Will Conduct and Also Appear as Pianist With the Orchestra Friday and Saturday.

GEORGE SZELL, whose American debut, as guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, was a distinguished success, will appear in the role of pianist, as well as conductor, in the next two orchestral concerts at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

That, of course, was Szell's original role in music. He first crossed the musical firmament as a "youngster" at 11. He was known as a brilliant pianist and had toured Europe with success. Then, as now, he was devoted to the music of Mozart—and for his debut in the soloist's role at this week's concert he has selected to play the A major concerto of that composer, conducting from the piano.

The concert is also notable for two first performances in St. Louis of works by contemporary composers—Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the "Hazy Jany's" suite of Zoltan Kodaly. Ravel is familiar to St. Louis music lovers. Kodaly is a Hungarian, and shares with Bela Bartok the distinction of having brought to the world's attention the authentic Magyar note in music.

Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" was conceived in the course of the summer before the outbreak of the World War. It was not, however, finished then. Ravel joined the French colors served and was invalided home. That was in 1917. He at once went to work upon his "Le Tombeau de Couperin," the separate movements of which are respectively dedicated to French comrades of the composer. The Mozart, a major concerto in which Szell makes his pianistic debut was composed for a series of concerts which Mozart gave in Vienna in 1788. Four years before he had been kicked out of the service of the Archbishop of Salzburg and by the same gesture kicked as it were into the favor of Vienna. For the Archbishop's principal grudge against the youthful composer lay in the fact that the Viennese music-lovers appreciated and esteemed Mozart's genius and extended him honor, while his ecclesiastical patron sought to keep the musician in his place as a sort of household lackey. Immediately Mozart was taken up by the Viennese and arranged series of concerts which were popular beyond any precedent for those days. He had to provide himself, as pianist, with a repertoire of new things in the course of the succeeding series and this concerto is one of them.

With these works Szell, as conductor, will also present the "All Baba" overture of Cherubini—the opening number of the concert, and one which has been rarely heard by St. Louisans.

writers have taken quarters in rented bungalows on side streets north of Hollywood boulevard. Already they are congregating in an exclusive section and their practice thumpings of leased pianos is adding an alarming din to Hollywood's peaceful night life.

It is estimated that there are no less than 350 "hit" composers in the film city. About 50 per cent of these are under yearly contracts to the major producing units.

JOHN HYAMS, who plays the role of "Larkin Bunch" in the musical add talking and singing production, "Cameo Kirby," has a background of stage experience, rich in training and reminiscences. "Cameo Kirby" is showing at the Fox Theater this week.

Born in Syracuse, N. Y., Hyams' family removed to Troy, when he was quite young. As soon as he was old enough, he began to hunt theaters of the town. With the theatrical germ in his blood, Hyams ran away to New York and joined Barlow Brothers Minstrels. He signed on for $10 a week and "Larkin Bunch" meaning food and board. He was given a hall to sing and demanded a $2 raise, which was cheerfully accorded him. The only trouble with the arrangement was that he didn't get a dime or any food, either. The glory of being a $12-a-week actor faded as rapidly as his savings, and he joined the Gauman Brothers Minstrels, for some real cash, although less of it than his former employers had promised.

The Hyams went into a musical comedy, "The Beauty and the Beast," which became a great hit on Broadway. Lella McIntyre was featured in the show, and Hyams promptly fell in love with her. After the show closed, he and Miss McIntyre were married. She was starred in "Mother Goose," but quit the show to prepare for the arrival of a youngster in the family. Hyams was featured in another musical comedy, when the baby was born, and he quit his role to rush to New York to see the child. It was a girl and was named for his mother, Lella. Lella Hyams now is a featured leading woman with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and still the same object of worshipful devotion by her parents. With their daughter safely launched on her career, the parents decided to retire to their estate on Long Island and take things easy. Enthusiastic letters from Lella, however, took them to California. And now the old-time team of Hyams, McIntyre and Hyams, is together again, this time in talking pictures.

On his return from New York the other day, Charley Skouras announced that the Ambassador will soon augment its stage shows with a series of personal appearances of the talking screen's most talented vaudeville entertainers. The first of these is the croon-

Another Movie Cinderella in Frances Daye Blossoms in the Studios

BEHIND THE SCREEN S OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

Bob Armstrong Has Spent A Lot of Time Acting As A Punching Bag.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 25. FILMLAND is acclaiming another "movie Cinderella" in Frances Daye (formerly Dade), an unknown who has been selected over others tested for a choice cinematic throne—the position of leading lady to Ronald Colman.

Yet Frances Daye has twice before been on the verge of movie opportunity, only to have it snatched away by tricks of fate. A few years ago, in her early teens, she was under study to the star in a stock company offering "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" here. Nothing happened to the star, and Frances did not get a chance to act. But she took advantage of the trip to try crashing the movies.

She was tested, with scores of others, for a role opposite the late Rudolph Valentino. And was rejected. Her opportunity came, however, when Fox undertook "The Cradle-Snatchers." She was tested and signed on contract. Then came the first freak of fate. On her way to the studio in a taxi she was injured, and was so long in ing troubador, Nick Lucas, who clicked so handsomely in "Gold Diggers of Broadway," and later in "Show of Shows."

Lucas, armed with his guitar, will sing his ballads from the Ambassador stage the week starting Feb. 14, as a special feature of the Ed Lowry unit of that week. Nick will do his four a day, which may be something of an experience since he graduated to the big money.

It is also known that the Skouras boys are interested in Winnie Lightner making a flying trip here for a week's visit. Helen Kane and her hoop-choop-a-doop business is welcome.

"Prometheus Bound" To Be Read Tonight

THE Playhouse Club of St. Louis University will give a circle reading tonight at 8:15, in the Administration Building, 221 N. Grand. The play chosen is "Prometheus Bound" by Aeschylus, the first of the great ancient Greek writers. Rev. Thomas S. Redburn, S. J., president of the Classical Club of St. Louis, has invited the members of that organization to attend the reading, and William Korfmeier, president of the St. Louis University Classical Club, has invited the members of his club to attend.

Milton McGovern will introduce the speakers and will give a brief sketch of the life of Aeschylus and the significance of his works. Miss Madeline Madden will be the beautiful but ill-fated Iphigeneia. Kritz will take the part of the heroic Prometheus. Others in the cast will be: Thomas Tyrrell, Thomas Mannion, Paul Crowley, Edward Walsh and Donald Gunn.

recovering that her contract expired before she could face a camera.

She returned at length to stock. She was playing in Philadelphia when she received a call to New York for another movie test. Valentino again was seeking a leading lady. She went. Valentino liked her test. Prospects were bright. Then Rudy suddenly fell sick—his last illness. He was never to make the picture.

And now Frances Daye comes to Hollywood in state!

SAMUEL GOLDWYN in selecting her, by the way, pursues his penchant for signing blond stars, sitting enough for the dark Mr. Colman.

Vilma Banky, Lily Damita, Joan Bennett and Anna Harding, in the order named, all have played opposite Colman; all are fair.

So is Evelyn Laye, now on Broadway but scheduled to make pictures later. Frances Daye now carries on the Goldwyn tradition.

WHILE many silent picture successes are being rejuvenated as talkies, stars undertaking the task are faced always with the prospect of "competing with a memory."

Years ago the fans saw and liked a picture, and that good impression remains for comparisons with the new effort.

score by Franz Lehár, of "Merry Widow" fame.

THE nine "old-timers" gathered together by M-G-M for a review of the gay nineties, to be called "The March of Time," have scattered again. Joe Weber and wife have gone to whale-land. Mr. and Mrs. Lew Fields returned to New York where Fields is to do a musical version of "Huckleberry Finn," the shadow of Mark Twain permitting. DeWolf Hopper and his helpmate are visiting in Oakland, while Maria Dressler remains on the job. Hollywood couldn't do without that girl. She compares herself to a brook—not that she's haggling—but says she fears she must go on forever. And it's O K with the fans!

PRIME example of the movie business' insatiable habit of "typing" its puppets is Robert Armstrong who has spent about a third of his cinematic career being punched by someone in a roped arena for the sake of the purses and the gal.

Bob Armstrong never has fought for a living in real life. Yet it was not for the quaint sport of pugilism, it is doubtful if he would be known to half the fans he now has. His whole picture career has been brightened by the ever-changing lights of the fight stage.

It was James Gleason's play, "Is Zat So?" which brought Armstrong to the movies. Bob left college three months before graduation because a vaudeville sketch of his in Portland succeeded.

He was signed to take the act to New York and that decided him to be an actor and let who would have the diploma. After war service he joined a stock company in which Jimmy Gleason was the comedian. Gleason wrote "Is Zat So?" and gave the fighter's role to Bob. The play went to New York and was a sensation.

It led to Cecil DeMille's signing him for movies—and his first role was that of the prizefighter in "The Main Event." Since then he has fought in "Celebrity" and in "The Tourist," the Fannie Brice talkie, and he will fight again in his next, "Dumbells in Ermine."

In pictures alone, he estimates, he has "won purses" totaling around $175,000 and in "Is Zat So?" on the stage he "earned" $20,000 a performance for some 1500 shows.

ARMSTRONG, of course, has played other roles, yet there can be no doubt the movie makers like him in the ring. The studio which cast him in "Dumbells in Ermine" changed his character in order to get him there.

The play "Weak Sisters," basis of the talkie, has for its central character an author. The studio makes him a prizefighter—even "Angel."

WHENEVER Edward Hughes, whose money has been poured into his pet film endeavor, could spare Jimmy from "Hell's Angels," he was turned out to some other company.

He went to United Artists for "This Is Heaven," came back to "Hell's Angels," was shipped out to First National for "Smiling Irish Eyes," and what with one thing and another he began to feel rather fortunate when a chance came to play again at Paramount, which has him under contract.

Between times, especially after Hughes decided to remake his picture as an all-talker, he was always up in the air with the "Angel."

and Sylvia Field, the Princess Kukachin, Henry Travers, Harry Mehlner, Sydney Greenstreet, Helen Tilden, Albert Van DeKee, Theresa Guerin, Vincent Sherman, Louis Veda, Frederick Roland, Sanford Melner and many others complete the cast.

THE Casey Players have had a big week with "The Royal Family" at the Orpheum, where the playing of Henrietta Crossman, the visiting star, Mary Hart and the other members of the company has delighted the large audience of followers of the stock organization.

Next Sunday night the Casey company will present "The Front Page," the hilarious farce of newspaper life. Written by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur and staged by George S. Kaufman, all newspaper men of wide experience and prominent writers in other fields, its success was evident from the start.

"The Front Page" is peopled with authentic newspaper men and genuine newspaper atmosphere and has for its setting the pressroom of the Criminal Courts Building in Chicago. Of the original "Front Page" cast, Allen Jenkins of both the New York and Chicago companies, will play his role of Murphy, hard-boiled reporter; John Carmody will appear as McCue, and John Lewis as Bensinger.

GETTING back to Miss Barrymore, it may be said that she, as the Arliss, the Skinner and one or two others of the First Families of the Stage, manage to keep the "road" alive. She has, perhaps, appeared in a more varied list of roles than any other leading actress now before the American public, she has ranged from the plays of Shakespeare and Sheridan to those of Galsworthy, Ibsen, Pinero, Wilde, Somerset Maugham, Hauptmann, Edna Ferber and other major and minor dramatists of the American and foreign stages. Her present two plays are the beginning of a repertory which is to include a Greek comedy, a Shakespearean comedy and such native works as Daniel A. Rice's dramatization of Julia Peterkin's "Scarlet Sister Mary," a story of the Gullah Negroes.

Louis Calhern is leading man for Miss Barrymore. Calhern made his debut in a stock company in New York, but shortly afterward his family moved to St. Louis and he came here to live. He worked as an artist on one of the St. Louis newspapers and acted with the old Delmar Garden Road Company. When he had accumulated enough money to do so, he migrated to Los Angeles, where various film and stock work and service in the army during the war, he occupied his time until his New York return as leading man for various actresses including Doris Keane, Olga Petrova and Judith Anderson.

Miss Barrymore's company numbers 23 players. All 22 and others have often played in her support. Among these are Mary Leane, George Drew Mendum, George Allison, William Keith, Anita Rolfe, Harry Pinnister, Sherry Stuart, Gertrude, Mildred, James Neighan, Olive Oliver, Wilson Thompson, Diane Van Hommel, Ernestine Galvez, Malcolm Soltau, Marcel Dill, Joan Carvel, Eleanor Powers, Charles Powers, Liotti Smith, Edward Tette and Gregory Dames.

A WEEK from tomorrow night, at the American Theater, the Stratford-on-Avon Festival Company, which occupies a unique and distinguished position in the world of the theater, will begin a engagement of one week, presenting a series of Shakespearean plays. The arrangement of the repertory is as follows: Monday, "The Wives of Windsor;" Tuesday, "Hamlet;" Wednesday, "Twelfth Night;" Thursday, "Much Ado About Nothing;" Friday, "Romeo and Juliet;" Saturday, "A Midsummer Night's Dream;" Sunday, "Julius Caesar;" Saturday evening, "The Taming of the Shrew."

On the previous night—that is, a week from this evening—Sylvia Field and the production of "New Moon" opens at the Shubert. With an enviable record of 541 performances in New York, a triumph, and a production in production in Los Angeles, the producers are sending here in the production that has enjoyed all-season run in Chicago. A triumph of New Orleans and a triumph of the production in the Colonial days preceding the Revolution.

Yiddish Players at Odeon on Thursday. One of the best known Yiddish players, Leon Baskin, assisted by the well known women, Betty Frank, together with Ben Adler, David Modell, Chaim Natanson, Jacob Sargel, Goldstein, Tillie Robinson, Gold Shapiro, Nadia Dravner, Miriam Krasin, on Thursday evening, will appear at the Odeon.

"A Father's Daughter," which had a six months' run in New York, will be produced on that evening. In addition to the play there will be many musical numbers.

The productions are under the management of Sol Goldman.

Fisk Jubilee Singers Here Thursday Night. The Fisk Jubilee Singers will appear in a concert of Negro spirituals and plantation melodies on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, the Union M. E. SOCIETIES ASKED TO WORK TO RETAIN 85-CENT SCHOOL TAX Organizations Invited to Supply Speakers and to Assist in Election Campaigns.

Thomas N. Dymart, chairman of the Citizens' School Tax Campaign Committee, has sent approximately 1000 letters to men's and women's organizations in the city asking them to assist in an effort to retain the school tax rate of 85 cents on the $100 so the St. Louis public schools may maintain their high standing.

Accompanying the letter was an information blank which asks the organization for the name of the president, who is invited to serve on the Advisory Committee, and for the appointment of members of the organization to the Speakers Bureau and for permission to send a speaker to the next meeting of the respective organizations; also asking the organization to pass a resolution endorsing the continuance of the present school tax rate for the next four years.

Citizens will vote on the school tax rate March 25.

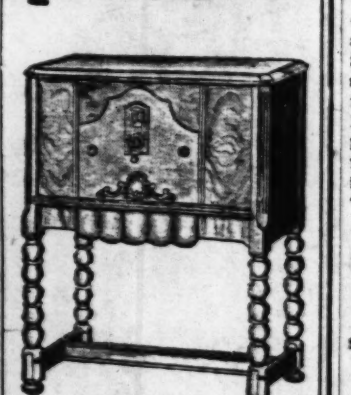

Corns
 Put them to Sleep Instantly, then Lift them Off!

Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, and the foot callouses, without soreness or irritation.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.

RESTAURANT serving a 42 dinner offers a 75-cent dinner for midguts. But the head waiter told me they had never served one.

A cynic writes in that the greatest boon of the radio is that with a tiny turn of the wrist you can shut off a jazz band.

An uptown vaudeville theater recently featured Jack Dempsey, and on the bill was James J. Corbett—a pugilistic combination that packed them in. Dempsey incidentally is acquiring stage poise. His boyish nervousness is vanishing.

King George and Queen Mary recently paid a personal call on a married couple who had not been separated a single night in 10 years. The writer of this column has not been anywhere without his wife a single evening—save for two Dutch treat club dinners—in more than six years. So any day now he is expecting President and Mrs. Hoover to pay their respects.

About 20 years ago two young reporters' paths crossed on the porch of a boarding house in Dayton, O. On a lonely summer evening they discussed journalistic hopes. Neither learned the name of the other until one day recently by a freakish coincidence. Both remembered the incident clearly. One was Robert Quillen, the syndicated paragrapher of Fountain, N. C., and the other was a fellow named O. O. McIntyre.

A movie producer declares no one knows what will make an audience laugh. He is right. A recent movie, for instance, gets its biggest laugh when a kidnapper is called a "kiddnapper."

On the night Police Lieut. Becker was to die in the electric chair, he was. It has been revealed he spent the entire night walking along a deserted country road.

Personal opinion: So long as talkies can produce entertainment such as that afforded by "Diarrhea" they need not worry about the future of the business.

Short shavings: George Jessel now occupies a penthouse. . . . Peaches Browning is no longer a stage attraction. . . . Eddie Darling, long a vaudeville executive, is now in Hollywood. . . . At 10:30 opened his around-the-world tour in El Paso, Tex. . . . The Wall Street crash revealed that many New York ladies had dress-making bills of $5,000 and more.

Charles G. Norris, after resting a year, is writing another novel. . . . Jack Buchanan, London's Jimmy Walker sartorially, wears three evening studs close together. . . . Eddie Dowling cries at his own pictures. . . . George Jean Nathan has visited 71 doctors for a neuralgic pain in his eyeball. . . . And still has the pain. . . . A noted surgeon says that when a patient asks for a manicure, all danger from the operation has passed. . . . Jack Barrymore was once a newspaper artist in New York.

Ope Read, nearing 80, is writing his autobiography. In his day he was a best seller, although his comfortable fortune was made as a Chautauqua lecturer. His most famous novel, "The Jucklins," was sold outright for $700. It made a fortune in book and play form. Mr. Read used the $700 to pay poker debt. The author was once fond of spirituous liquor, but gave it up many years ago. He found a "cure" in the game of golf.

11 MEN TO JAIL FOR SUPPLYING LIQUOR AT LEGION CONVENTION

Six Convicted at Los Angeles of Plot; Five Others Had Pled Guilty.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 25.—Eleven men, accused of conspiracy to violate the Federal prohibition law by supplying liquor to delegates to the State American Legion convention here last spring, have received jail sentences.

Those convicted and their sentences are: Clive Wayland, William Perley, A. P. Desmureaux and Logan E. Ruggles, local Legion men, 20 days each; George Drake and Peter Nyblom, 30 days each. Five pleaded guilty and were sentenced as follows: Charles Mulock, six months and $1000 fine; William E. Benita, John Stafford and L. W. Nettman and J. N. Dawson 40 days each.

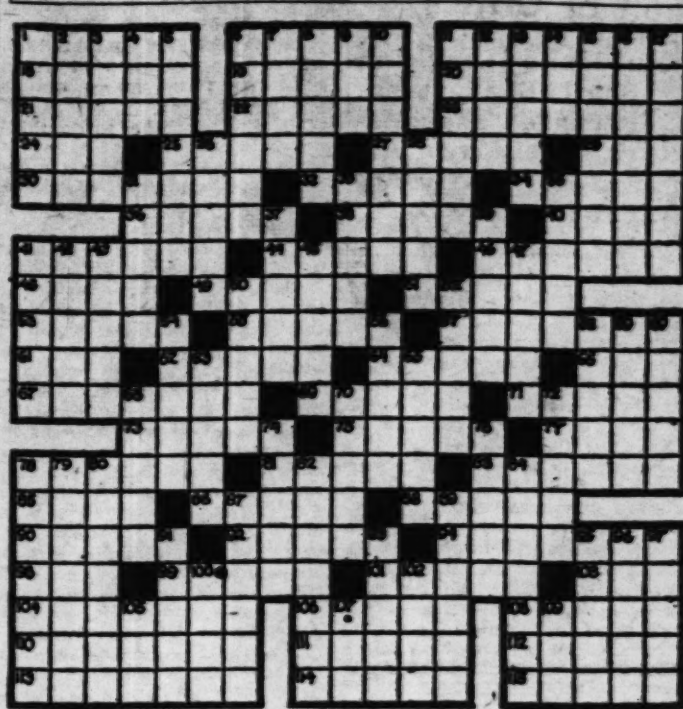

NEGRO WOMAN, ILL IN BED, KILLED WHEN HOME BURNS

Overheated Stove Thought to Have Caused Blaze South of East St. Louis.

Lena Alexander, 50 years old, a Negro, confined to her bed by illness, was burned to death at 8:30 o'clock last night when her two-room frame house at 1649 Booker avenue, Rush City, a Negro settlement south of East St. Louis, was destroyed by fire thought to have been caused by an overheated stove.

She was alone in the house.

Chief Damage at Driemeler Storage Co., 3615 North Twentieth Street, Is to Garage.

Fire thought to have been caused by crossed wires caused damage estimated at $20,000 to the August Driemeler Storage and Moving Co., 3615 North Twentieth street, early last night. The fire, which was partly burned, firemen managed to keep the flames away from two buried 500-gallon gasoline tanks.

The second floor of the building, which extends only part way back, and which contains living quarters, escaped damage from flames or smoke, as did the company offices below. Only a small quantity of household goods was burned or water-soaked, as most of the goods held by the company in storage are in the main storage warehouse, three blocks away.

principal damage was to five of eight large moving trucks stored in the building.

Three of the trucks were driven out with their tops only slightly scorched; others, however, were partly burned. Firemen managed to keep the flames away from two buried 500-gallon gasoline tanks.

$378,750 IN FORFEITED BONDS STILL UNPAID

Circuit Attorney Miller's Report Also Shows $19,000 Not Reduced to Judgment.

A total of 199 bond forfeitures, amounting to $378,750, reduced to judgment and remaining unpaid at the end of 1929, is shown in Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller's first annual report on forfeitures in the three criminal divisions of the Circuit Court.

There were 18 additional forfeitures totaling $119,000, declared, but not yet reduced to judgment and not set aside.

The Circuit Attorney's seven-page typewritten report on the criminal bond situation was made public yesterday, without comment, in accordance with his campaign promises to inform the public concerning his administration. A detailed report on criminal convictions and discharges was published last Wednesday.

Most of the bond forfeitures were reduced to judgments during the administration of Howard Sidener, who, under an existing agreement, is entitled to collect the judgments and retain commissions thereon, the net proceeds going to the public school system.

Sidener was Circuit Attorney from Jan. 1, 1921, to Dec. 31, 1923. The other forfeitures were entered during the term of Sidener's predecessor, Lawrence McDaniel. From Jan. 1, 1917, to Dec. 31, 1920, and during Miller's term, beginning Jan. 1, 1929, it has been found difficult to levy on assets of defaulting bondsmen, especially in the older forfeitures.

The name of Sam Arky, barred bondsman, appears on the Circuit Attorney's list with eight unsatisfied forfeitures totaling $3800. His wife, Hannah, has a $500 forfeiture against her, but not yet reduced to judgment.

State Senator Joseph Mogler, murdered at his Moxter Theater last month, had a $5000 forfeiture pending, constituting a lien against his estate.

HANFORD CRAWFORD FUNERAL TO BE HELD IN NEW YORK

Body of Former President of Scruggs to Remain in St. Louis a Few Hours.

Funeral services for Hanford Crawford, a former president of the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co., and a prominent layman in the Methodist Episcopal Church, who died Friday in Los Angeles, will be held at the Madison Avenue Methodist Church in New York, with burial at Pepperell, Mass. The time of the funeral has not been announced. The body will be brought through St. Louis en route to New York, and will remain here for a few hours.

Mr. Crawford, who was about 75 years old, had been in failing health for several years. He was spending a vacation in Los Angeles with his wife when his death occurred from heart disease. He retired from active business here in 1913, but continued to regard himself as a St. Louisan and spent part of each year in this city.

Mr. Crawford was a native of Ossining, N. Y. He came to St. Louis in 1886 and purchased an interest in the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney store, serving as president from 1905 to 1913. Officials of the company said he was heavily interested in the store at the time of his death. He was a member of numerous business and social organizations in St. Louis and was a director of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Smith Crawford, and a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Crawford Mitchell of Pittsburgh, Pa.

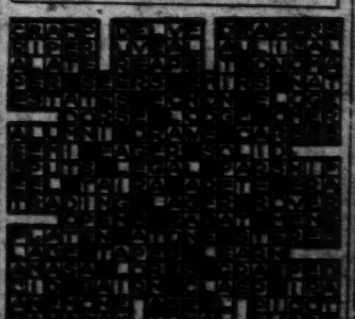

W. M. MOORE, ST. LOUIS NEGRO, PLANS TO RUN FOR CONGRESS

Has Served Four Terms in State Legislature; Dyer Represents District Now.

Waltham M. Moore, Negro Republican member of the Missouri House of Representatives, plans to run for Congress in the next election, he announced last night.

Moore, who is serving his fourth term as Representative of the Third St. Louis District, plans to be a candidate for the nomination in the Twelfth Congressional District, now represented by L. C. Dyer, who is serving his eighth term. Moore is 48 years old, married and lives at 3540 Lawton avenue. He is a clerk in the State motor license department at city hall, and was the first Negro in the Missouri Legislature. The primary election will be next Aug. 5.

From a SLAUGHTER HOUSE to the PARIS SALON

Batk, by Milovich, which won a first prize at the Artists' Guild exhibit.

Tanasko Milovich's Desperate Struggle to Establish Himself as an Artist—

By GUY FORSHEY

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

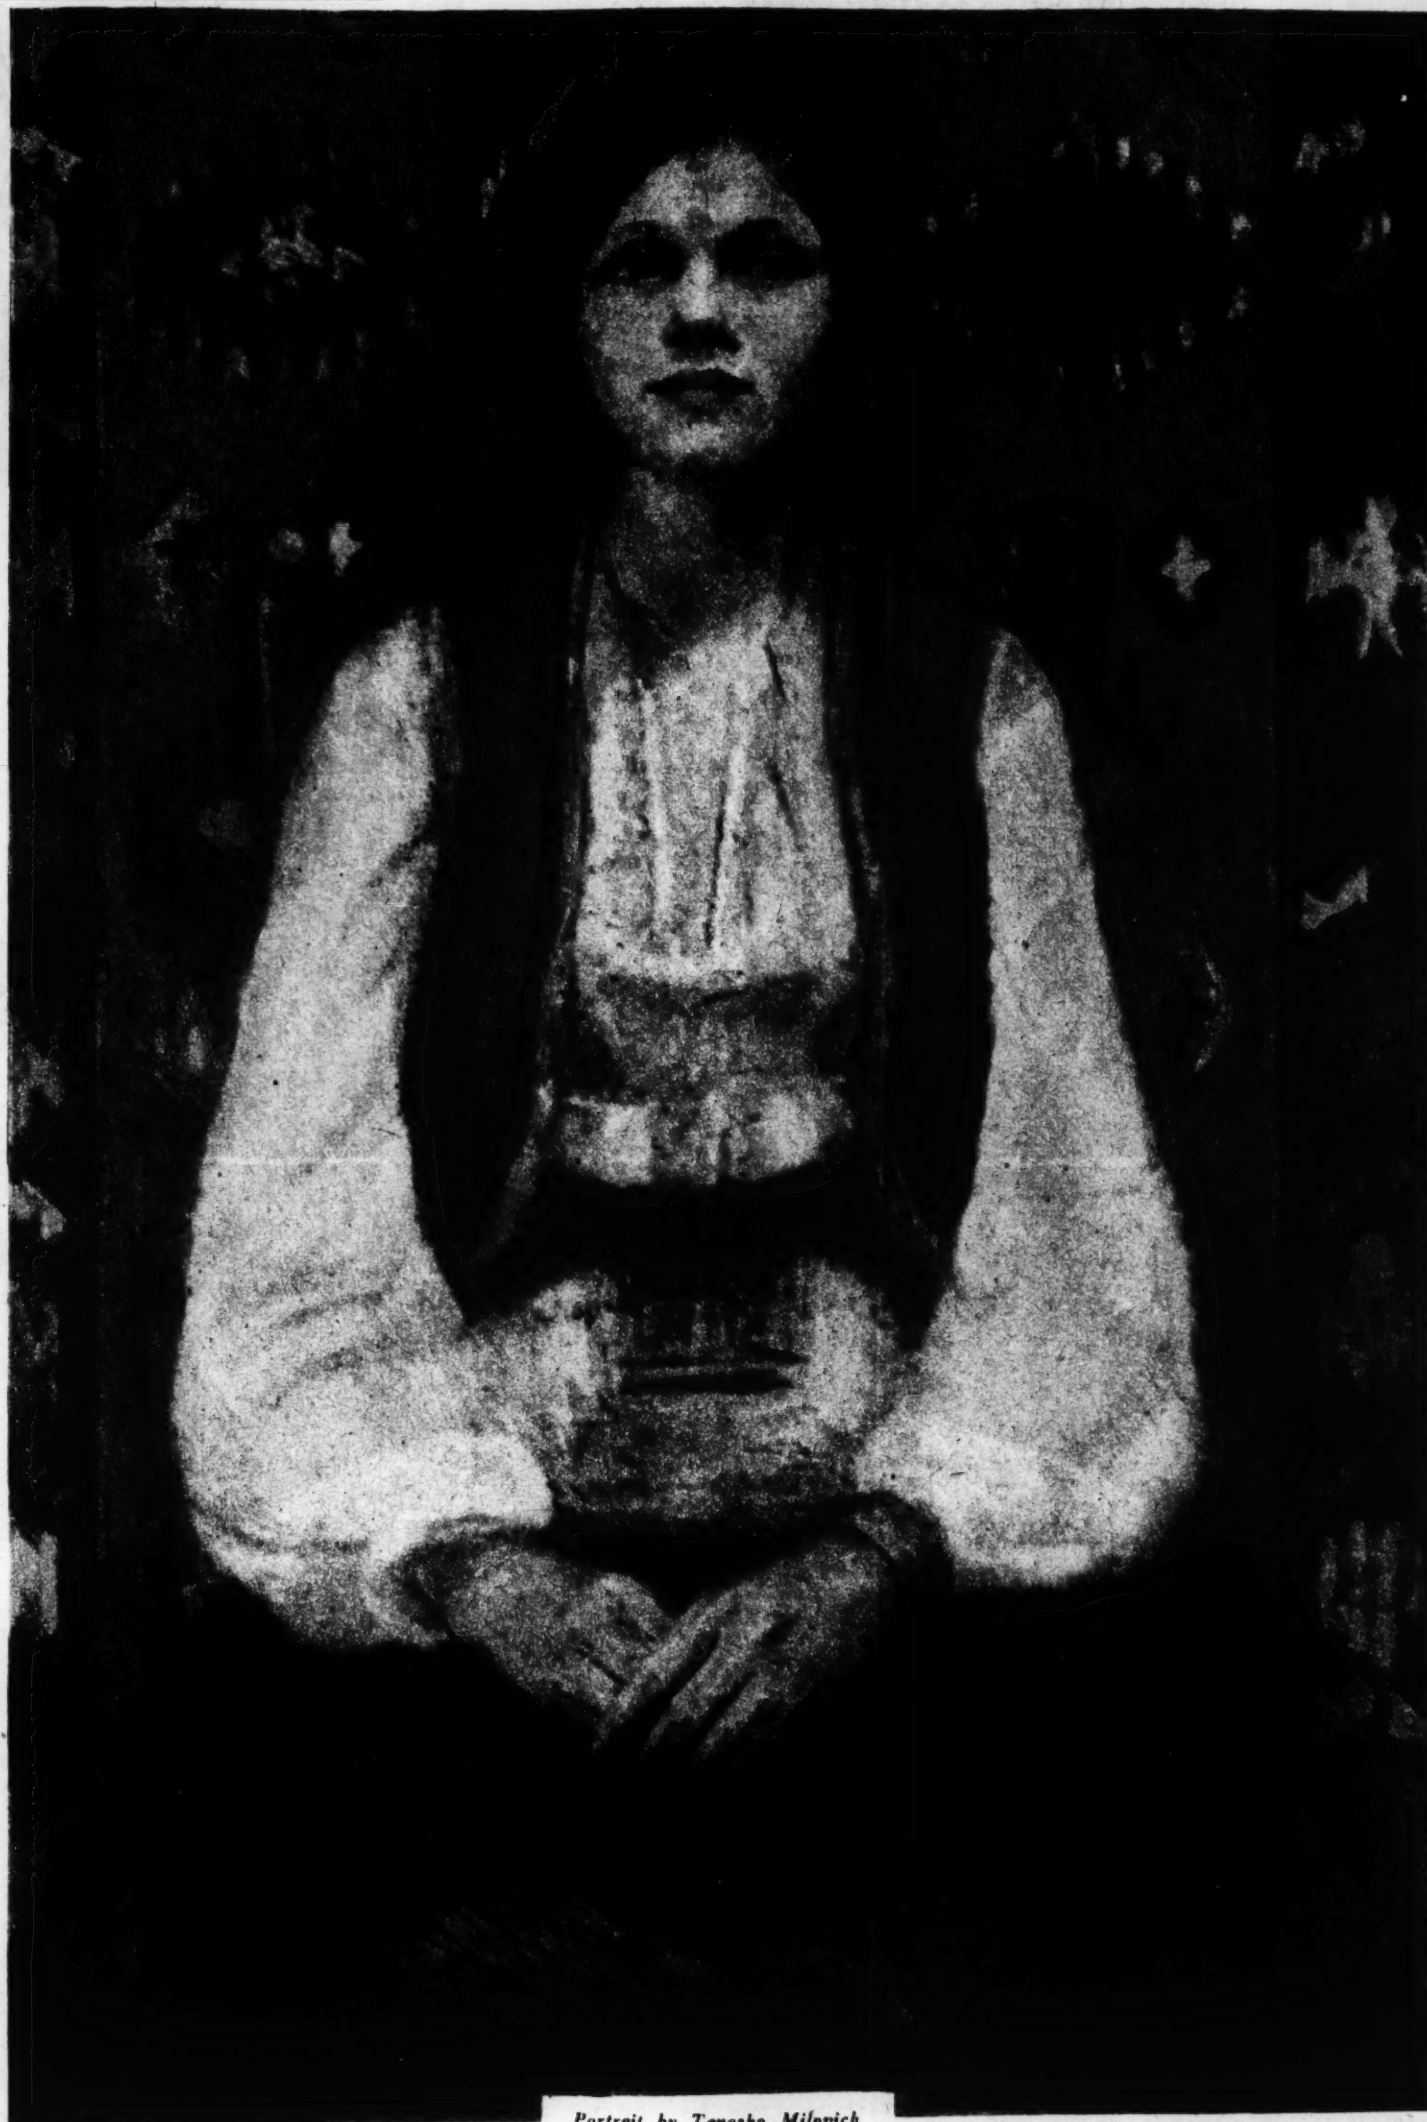

IT MAY have been the memory of the snow-capped mountains of his native Serbia that rose before his mind's eye and saved Tanasko Milovich from esthetic starvation in those dismal days of 1914-16. He thinks now upon reflection it must have been that, though it's not easy to say just what it was. Anyway, that picture of mountain vistas carried from his childhood home in Herzegovina came to his rescue in times of desolation. It supplied a certain spiritual need for beauty when in his environment, his daily work, his perspective of America and of life there was no beauty. It was at times his only means of escape from the carnage and loathsomeness of his first American job—the job of fat-stripper on the slaughtering floor of a packing house.

A homesick lad was Tanasko Milovich in those depressing days, a disappointed one, a savagely disillusioned youth. At 14 disillusionment is bitter. A pang attends the fall of idols and the dissolution of insubstantial dream worlds. Tanasko, a sensitive boy of artistic bent, had dreamed of America with the extravagant dream-pipe of childhood. Through the enchanting haze of distance which obscures detail he had visualized a land of towering and beautiful cities; blue hills, wide, flowering prairies, woodland lakes, a place where everybody had all he wanted of everything he wanted—even candy—and where children could go to school because they were children. He wanted to go to school. Not to study languages and mathematics, of course. He hated them. He wanted to draw pictures. He came in quest of this fairy land and found—for him—squalor, poverty, loneliness and a job cutting fat from the viscera of hogs.

Hogs passed him all day long, carcasses of hogs hanging by their feet from a moving chain. He looked the other way and saw still more hogs, live hogs, swinging head down from another moving chain. They were carried past a man who stood ankle-deep in gore and wielded a long knife. The man would make a quick and dextrous thrust with the knife, and the hog, kicking and squealing, would be carried on, to be plunged, scarcely dead, into a vat of boiling water. Sickened at the spectacle, young Tanasko would look beyond, only to gaze upon steaming, soot-grimed windows. If he looked beyond these he saw the smoke of railroad yards and the squalor of the neighborhood around Chouteau and Vandeventer avenues. To his bewilderment and grief, this was America!

IT WAS 16 years ago, just after the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand at Sarajevo—a short distance from Tanasko's native village—and just before the outbreak of the great war, that the boy came to America as a lonely immigrant to join an older brother in the Serbian colony of St. Louis. Perspectives have changed since then. Those 16 years have been busy years for Milovich, and fruitful ones. At 30 he sees America from another vantage point. America is home. St. Louis is home. No longer is it necessary to stand all day in the greasy water and wish vainly for the price of a pair of rubber boots. He has worked himself out of the physical slush and the spiritual mire of the slaughter floor. He has found his medium of self-expression. He has been to school—art school. He has learned to draw pictures, and paint them. He has even been to Paris to study under the French painter, Marchand.

But he has done a bit more than that. It isn't his portrait painting that now gives him highest claim to distinction. First and foremost, he is a batik artist. Prof. E. H. Wuerpel, head of the Washington University School of Fine Arts, where Milovich first studied painting, places him among the outstanding batik artists of America. He digressed from painting to pursue batik-making as a hobby and, working without personal instruction, mastered the difficult art sufficiently to win acceptance of his works at the Paris Salon in three successive exhibitions. And at one of these exhibitions—the spring salon of 1928—he was accorded honorable mention among the great batik artists of the world. Twice—in 1926 and 1929—he has won the $100 decorations prize with his batiks at the St.

Portrait by Tanasko Milovich of a Serbian girl living in St. Louis.

Louis Artists' Guild exhibitions. Also, in 1926 he brought home a blue ribbon from the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia. It may be that art awards at the fair are of somewhat less significance than awards for prize pumpkins and mules, but the record stands for what it is worth. Soon he will exhibit his batiks at Wanamaker's, in Philadelphia, at a special showing sponsored by the Ladies' Home Journal. Next month he will hold his first exhibition of paintings in St. Louis.

Out His Artistic

Fellow workers in the packing house used to laugh when Tanasko would say he wished he could go to art school and learn to paint pictures. Tanasko painting pictures! Ho ho! He'd better forget such foolishness. It costs money to go to school. He'd do well if he made a living. "Better work hard," they told him, "and maybe you will get a job in the shipping department."

"That was one of the hardest things to bear," Milovich told me as he pushed aside a half-finished portrait and became the gracious host in his newly-established studio at 3522 Franklin avenue. "Nobody could understand why it was more desirable to paint pictures than to work in a slaughter house. I couldn't talk to Americans at first because I didn't know the language. And I couldn't talk to my own countrymen about the things I wanted to talk about because most of the Serbians among whom I lived were laboring people, uneducated people, struggling to make a living. They had no time for school or for art, and very little interest in it. They couldn't understand why anybody would be so foolish as to spend his hard-earned money trying to learn how to draw pictures.

THOSE first few years were discouraging and bitter. I was lonesome and homesick. The war was on and it was impossible to hear from my family—only the reports in the newspapers, and these were anything but pleasant. The papers said my home country was in ruins, with people starving and living conditions horrible. I gave my family up as dead. Then, with bridges burned behind me, I found only disappointment in America. You know the ideas schoolgirls get of Hawaii from hearing Hawaiian music. My childhood ideas of America were about as distorted. I may have heard how hard it was for immigrants to get along, but I hadn't listened to that. I had listened only to the stories of what a rich and beautiful country it was. I had never dreamed there could be in America such conditions as those under which I was forced to live."

It was because of the prospect of war and ensuing years of chaos that the family Milovich, in a mountain village of Herzegovina, determined to send young Tanasko to America. Two of Tanasko's older brothers were in America already—one in St. Louis and one in California. Tanasko, it was planned, should join the brother Vladimir in St. Louis. It cost less to get to St. Louis and, besides, there were many Serbians in St. Louis. Young Tanasko would not be lonely there, and maybe he would get a good job in an office. He had been a good student in commercial school and had worked some in his father's grocery. Maybe he would get a job in a store and soon be a rich American merchant.

Accordingly, 14-year-old Tanasko bundled up his luggage and sailed from Trieste. To cut down expenses, he took passage on a slow trading ship, which visited half a dozen Adriatic and Mediterranean ports before it finally set off across the Atlantic to New York. A month was consumed in passage, but it was better to travel slowly than not at all. As it happened, this boat was one of the last to leave the Adriatic ports. The war clouds gathered rapidly and it was almost on the day Tanasko set foot on American soil that war was declared.

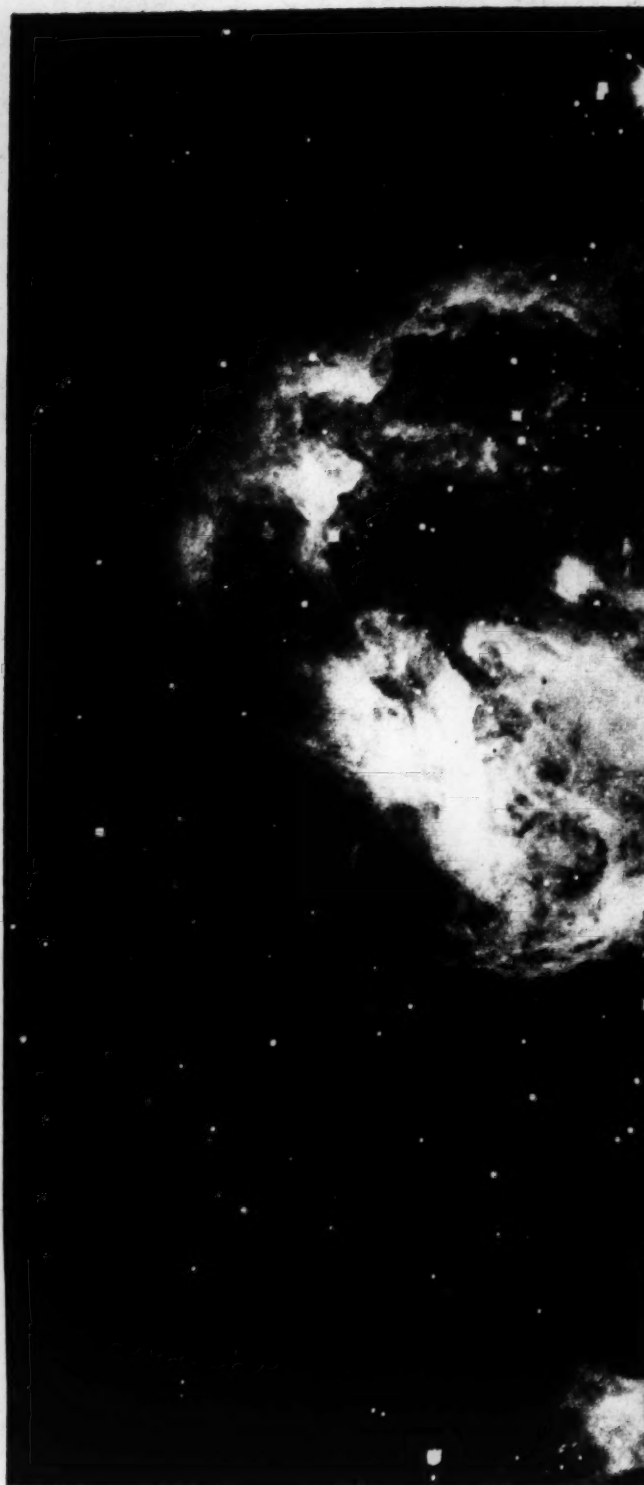

EVEN the thrill which immigrants are said to experience upon sighting the Statue of Liberty was denied to the Serbian boy. His boat came in after dark and landed him with several other immigrants at Ellis Island. The next day was dark and foggy. He saw nothing of the statue and little of the sky line of New York. Late that evening a harbor boat carried him to the mainland at a Hoboken pier, so Tanasko also missed New York. He took a night train out for St. Louis. Until he was well into the interior of the country the only impressions he had gained of America were those of a chilly, drizzly, dark Hoboken water front and of being herded like an ox or hog by rough, uncouth harbor men.

In St. Louis, Brother Vladimir got Tanasko his first American job in the packing house. Vladimir was working there, too. Tanasko was small for his age. Until he was 16, he says, he could have passed for 12. He couldn't get a man's job, but the packing company was willing to give him a place as a fat stripper. Later he worked in the

Dr. Harlow Shapley, of Harvard, Divides All Matter Into Seventeen Parts in Which Our Planetary System Is Scarcely More Than a Dot of Light.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

FOR the first time man has got the universe in which he has his being down on a map. All material things are given rank in this stupendous picture. And in this cosmic plan man has assigned to himself a sub-division of a sub-division. He stands as a minute pin point, one of many "crustal phenomena" in a system so vast that it can scarcely be comprehended.

Like Mark Twain's Captain Stormfield, the dweller on earth would encounter some difficulty in showing the inhabitants of another planetary system where he came from on the cosmic map. Captain Stormfield on his visit to Heaven, it will be recalled, was asked about the planet of which he was a native. He told them it was the Earth, a good sizeable body. But a first search failed to show it on the map at all. Finally a little dot was found way down in the corner of the map. "That must be it," they said. "We thought it was a fly-speck at first."

It now is shown that the whole planetary system of which the earth is a part appears, in relation to the whole cosmos, as a dot of light, a faint blur.

THE individual most responsible for the completed map of the universe is Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory here.

Astronomers all over the world have, of course, made contributions to the picture through many years of industrious searching of the sky. In Dr. Shapley's scheme there are 17 major divisions of matter, ranging from the tiniest particles that cannot be seen under even the most powerful of microscopes to the gigantic celestial systems at the very edge of the boundaries of visible space.

Dr. Shapley has discovered, after many years of patient work, that our earth, sun and all the visible stars are merely part of a "local" star cloud or galaxy. The star cloud in which the earth is one very small factor is estimated to be about 1,200,000,000,000,000 miles across. There are a million or so other star clouds, or galaxies, like this one.

These "local" star clouds in turn form larger star clouds, super-galaxies, combinations of many universes. Our Milky Way is such a combination, about 200,000 light years in diameter. The local star clouds revolve in a system about a gravitational center to form these super-galaxies. And Dr. Shapley says that now there is reason to believe that these super-galaxies themselves revolve about a gravitational center which, with the present state of astronomical knowledge, has not yet been located.

AND yet Dr. Shapley gives man his due. Speaking of this possibility of cosmic rotation, he says:

"In addition to the galactic rotation we have obtained evidence through recent investigations, that our super-galaxy is rotating in relation to outside super-systems, indicating that there may be a single unified cosmos."

"Whether this is a movement with respect to some gravitational center is beyond our present powers to discern. But it is a natural inference that all the galaxies and super-galaxies that come within range of our telescopic vision are members of a higher order—a unit material universe that obeys the same natural laws that control material affairs of galaxies, star clusters, planetary systems and the planets themselves."

"A common subservience to gravitational law throughout creation as well as a common chemical composition seems to be characteristic of the material cosmos—including galaxies, stars, the gravel on the face of the earth, the flowers and the animals and man himself. "Man's station in the scheme of creation is not too flattering. He is an animal among many, precariously situated on the crust of a planetary fragment that obeys the gravitational impulses of one of the millions of dwarf stars that wander in the remote parts of one of many galactic systems. His place in the universe, from the standpoint of dimensions, duration or physical influence, is unimpressive; and his importance in some non-material way is a subject not suited to scientific research or speculation."

"But man's role as an investigator and would-be interpreter of the universe is surpassingly fascinating and science has added to the grandeur of the human being as a comprehending individual."

As a matter of fact, science has revealed that the sun, the moon, and the planets, together with hundreds of millions of minor stars, are members of a "small" star cloud whose center is situated in the constellation Carina, about 800 light years from our globe. Some idea of this distance can be grasped when it is considered that the light-year unit represents the distance that would be traveled by light in a year. And light travels, it is estimated with what is believed to be a high degree of accuracy, at the rate of 186,300 miles a second.

In Dr. Shapley's system there are two major divisions. The first deals with infinitesimal particles that must be observed under the microscope, called the microcosmos. The second has to do with the telescopic domain, or the macrocosmos.

Electrons and protons, the fundamental basis of matter, make up the first division of the microcosmos. Atoms, which are electrons and protons knitted together, make up the second, running from hydrogen, made of one electron and one proton, to uranium, with a compact core of 92 positive particles.

Then come families of atoms, forming important organizations called molecules, which also join together to form a superior organization, the molecular aggregate.

The fifth and last division of the microcosmos is the most interesting to man, for here somewhere we may find mankind, though it is not easy to see just where or how by glancing casually at Dr. Shapley's plan, which reads:

- Inorganic substances (minerals, meteorites, clouds).
- Organic substances (organisms, colonies).

Man is an incidental entry in sub-division b. He belongs to the same family as other animals, plants, clouds and minerals. Dr. Shapley says:

Drawn by Albert H. Bumstead

but incidental phase of the cosmic process, but that need not detract from his importance as a comprehending individual. Our studies of the universe show the uniformity of its chemical structure and generally of its physical laws. We are colloids. Our very bodies consist of the same chemical elements found in most distant nebulae and our activities are guided by the same universal rules.

"The recent analyses of the chemical constitution of man, beast, rock and star have brought to light the remarkable uniformity of all chemical composition. Little as we human beings are, so temporary in time and space, yet the chemical elements of which we are composed are also the predominant elements in the crust of the earth and are prominent components in the structure of the fiery and gaseous stars."

"We are, chemically, made of nothing unusual or exotic. We are a part of the general scheme of a splendid universe. We would ask for no higher immortality than to be, as we seem to be, made of the same undying stuff as the rest of creation."

ONE of the most astonishing facts disclosed by Dr. Shapley is that the earth moves in seven different directions at the same time. It has long been known, of course, that the earth rotates on its axis, making a complete revolution every day. Then it participates in a latitude variation and it moves with the moon in the earth-moon orbit. At a greater rate of speed—about 2,000,000 miles a day—the earth speeds about the sun, taking one year to finish a complete revolution. As its fifth movement the earth is engaged in a movement which has just been discovered. With the sun and all of the neighboring stars it is moving around the center of our local star cloud in the constellation

The Nebula of Andromeda.

With a sweeping movement, whose incomparable grandeur it is hard for us to conceive, our star cloud in turn rotates with all its millions of giant luminaries about the center of our super-galaxy or Milky Way in the nebulous region of the constellation Sagittarius at a speed of 12,000 miles a minute.

THE seventh movement is a fitting climax to the stupendous drama of the heavens. It involves the rotation of our entire super-galaxy, with its 30,000,000,000 stars. Our celestial organization, with a diameter of 300,000,000,000,000 miles, appears to be rotating in relation to the other super-galaxies outside the Milky Way, some of which are 170,000,000 light years away, or so far that if our gigantic super-galaxy were suddenly to die its extinction would be noted only millions of years later by any inhabitants of the cosmos in that region, and then only by the sudden flickering out of a faintly luminous spot seen through a telescope.

The star cloud of which the earth is a minute part is between 2000 and 3000 light years in diameter and all of the familiar stars in the heavens, including the Great Dipper, Orion and less familiar groups are members of the family. Our planetary system is only a speck in this organization, Dr. Shapley shows, about 200 light years from its center.

Next conceive of this star cloud as part of a super-galaxy or combination of hundreds of universes. The Milky Way, an example of such an organization, has its gravitational and geometrical center in the mysterious, nebulous region of the constellation Sagittarius, 50,000 light years or 500,000,000,000,000 miles from the earth.

Outside the luminous band of our Milky Way lie the outside galaxies of spiral nebulae, so named because their shape is reminiscent of Fourth of July pinwheels. These whirling masses of stars are also organized in super-organizations, super-galaxies. More than 50 of these giant celestial groups, the most colossal entry in the survey of the cosmos, have been discovered. (Continued on Page 9.)

They swing out, at a 45-foot altitude, over the Pacific Ocean, a Lockheed monoplane containing a pilot and stunt man, trailed by two larger Stinson monoplanes, five feet to each cabin—a director, assistant directors, cameramen, assistant cameramen and so on.

As the stunt man in the leading plane signals he is ready to make his parachute jump, the pilots of the camera planes jockey for position. THIS gentleman's figures are interesting. They show that there have been 33 major disasters in Hollywood's 28 years of motion-picture production and that more than half of these have occurred in the past decade, seven of the latter have happened in the photographing of air-plane scenes. In the past four and a half years 24 performers have been killed, 50 permanently injured and 144 more or less permanently injured, as the report puts it.

This is not to state that the motion-picture industry is unusually hazardous for the average employee, for nine-tenths of the fatalities have occurred in the "suicide division," the group of senseless young fellows who ride motorcycles off cliffs in place of the leading man, who shivers in the water below, ready to clamber bravely to the beach in purview of the lens battery, a hero. The daily stint of these is to step out of cabin doors at 4000 feet, run rapids in canoes and on occasion to send planes into whirling spins and crash them.

An idea of the average life span of the stunt men may be gained from the fact that of nine who spun and crashed in the gently-named film, "Lilac Time," less than three years ago, only three are alive today. And, of course, still "washing up" planes. This is so that Cousin Elmer can laugh at Iner's shudders and say: "Ah, they take all that stuff."

A joke's a joke and nobody will deny Elmer his, but it is only fair to record that the stunt men actually do these foolhardy things and get surprisingly small pay for it.

Dick Grace is the best known of the tribe. He has crashed so many planes in the past five years that he has forgotten the number. He gave up a profitable law business for his present job.

IN THE filming of "Wings," Grace completely demolished three planes, cracking up two in a field pitted with shell holes and landing a third upside down in a river. His only injury was a fractured collar bone. On the same day as the recent Santa Monica tragedy Grace went aloft in an early-model Spad, a primitive war-time ship, and drove it head first into the bank of a creek for the benefit of an aviation film which may be hooted at by the critics. In this stunt Grace suffered a bruised chest and a scratched cheek. The plane was a "washout." To date he has escaped the danger of being incinerated in his wrecks.

Airplanes figured in three fatal accidents in the film colony in the year just ended. A girl member of the "suicide division," doubling for Ruth Elder, intrepid trans-Atlantic flight passenger, made what was intended for a parachute jump—but the parachute did not open.

"Hell's Angels" took the life of Phil Jones, an airplane mechanic. A German Gotha bombing plane had been imported for the film at a publicity department figure and Jones rode in it with Al H. Wilson, stunt pilot. Just a week before Wilson had had the unusual experience of seeing his propeller fly loose from the motor at 3000 feet.

He probably didn't realize that a comparable mishap would soon befall him. Wilson sent the plane into a simulation of a helpless descent while several two-seaters plunged in his wake, the cameramen hanging out the

Without warning, one of the Gotha's wings crumpled under the strain and the huge bomber flopped over on its back. After frantic efforts to bring the ship under some sort of control, Wilson abandoned the stick and jumped, shouting a warning to Jones. But Jones had been stunned as his head hit the edge of the cockpit when the plane turned over and died in the crash. Wilson himself was almost killed when heavy gloves interfered with his efforts to grab the rip-cord ring of his chute, but he finally opened it when a few hundred feet from the ground.

M. P. KNECHTEL, wealthy flying enthusiast, who liked to work in the hazardous movie stunts, and William Hauber, stunt man, were killed in July in a crash in the San Fernando Valley. "The Aviator," featuring Edward Everett Horton and Patsy Ruth Miller, was being filmed and Knechtel and Hauber were looking for a new "location." Knechtel had suffered a nervous breakdown previously, and to this was attributed his fainting and falling on the controls. The plane made 12 crazy loops before smashing to bits in the valley. Both men wore parachutes, but it is believed that the whirling motion of the plane prevented them from jumping free.

While Dick Grace was crashing three ships in the filming of "Wings," without serious injury, a flying cadet from Kelly Field, one of the Army school's best men, cracked up once and was killed.

The cameras were all set to film which violent convectional currents were at work. The moisture froze on Robinson's goggles and cut off his view of the instrument board. Even had he been able to see the dials, he could not have determined whether he was falling upside down or right-side up. So he let the huge bomber flap blindly downward at will.

The cloud bank was surprisingly extensive and as his goggles cleared in the warmer atmosphere of the lower altitudes, Robinson looked at his altimeter with alarm. Then he remembered that his landing would be in mountainous country, with peaks rising 1500 feet above the ground.

The indicator pointed to 2000 feet and the pilot shouted to two grim cameramen to get ready to leave ship in parachutes. But just as all hands were ready to hop off the plane broke through the clouds 800 feet above a peaceful-looking valley, to the eternal discredit of the altimeter.

The valley itself was surrounded on all sides by mountains whose peaks were lost to sight in the clouds. A mile in either direction and the bomber would undoubtedly have crashed against a peak.

BUT aviation pictures do not cause all the fatalities. "Old Ironsides," filmed in 1926, caused one death and numerous injuries. The three-masted sailing vessel which passed for the historic U. S. S. Constitution struck heavy swells 25 miles off California which snapped the mainmast in the middle and hurled it down upon a deck-load of sailor extras. Several men were knocked overboard and later rescued, and 21 injured. Later, in the filming of a battle scene, a charge of dynamite planted midway up one of the masts exploded prematurely, killing a seaman and seriously injuring four others.

It was the queer fate of Martha Mansfield, character actress, to meet her death in a situation which might have happened in her own kitchen. While "on location" in Texas in 1933 her fluffy, trailing dress became ignited as she passed a small bonfire and she was enveloped in flames before members of the company could reach her.

A stunt girl, whose name has not been handed down, lost her life in 1927 while Dorothy Dawn, for whom she was "doubling," looked on helplessly. Her canoe capsized while she was running the rapids of the Merced River during the production of a Tom Mix film. Mix leaped in and swam to midstream in an effort to rescue the girl, but she was battered to death on the jagged rocks before he could reach her.

the course of Cadet Charles M. Wisely as he sent his pursuit ship low over the trenches—in Texas. Wisely was to appear over the brow of a hill and "strafe" the men in the trenches. While making a turn at low altitude on the far side of the hill, Wisely's plane fell off sharply and into a partial spin. Wisely pulled out all right, but had to dive to pick up flying speed and in so doing struck the top of the hill. He was instantly killed.

"Cadet Wisely was one of the best flyers in the service," said the Army report, "and the fact that motion pictures were to be made of the maneuver in no way affected the situation."

THE filming of "Wings," which was the forerunner of many of the same type, almost caused another tragedy, which only blind luck averted. The scenario called for a sequence featuring Buddy Rogers and Richard Arlen in their pursuit planes (both are pilots). As the script required a scene with a cloud bank background, Arlen and Rogers climbed to 8500 feet, followed by a bombing plane carrying Lieut. E. H. Robinson as pilot and two cameramen. The setting was ideal here, but

Arlen and Rogers missed the signals of the cameramen and kept climbing until they hit 11,000 feet, which was the "ceiling," or highest altitude attainable, of the bomber. Here, just after the scenes had been filmed, one of the bomber's motors cut out and the plane began to fall. Almost immediately the motor started firing again, but by this time Lieutenant Robinson found himself lost in a cloud bank. It was a cumulus storm cloud, in

What the Plans of Richard F. Smith Will Mean to the Future of Ship-Building,
If the Tests Are Successful.

REVOLUTION and further evolution of the shipbuilding art of the world is imminent if the plans of a young welder by the name of Smith carry through successfully at forthcoming tests in the waters of the Atlantic near this famous old seaport.

A rivetless ship of steel has been completed here. Not a rivet, bolt nor angle from stem to stern or from keel to bulwarks! Lighter and more efficient than the conventional riveted boats and not nearly so expensive! In the past few weeks the United States Navy Department, the War Department, a great Eastern shipbuilding corporation, a large railroad company and foreign shipbuilding interests have had representatives here to inspect the rivetless ship. In every case a favorable report has been made on the unique method of construction and on the probable results of coming tests.

Richard F. Smith, now little more than 30 years of age, literally has been brought up building ships and is by profession an expert electric welder and inventor and designer of ships. During the World War he served with the U. S. Shipping Board.

For years Smith dreamed of and planned an all-welded ship. Finally he perfected a system of combining welding and riveting. A little later he eliminated the rivets from his method of construction and built one of the few all-welded barges in the country.

Nearly two years ago Smith worked out the details of an all-welded system of dove-tailed, lock-notched plates for building self-propelled vessels. This he patented, and then began what was at first a discouraging search for someone to back him in the construction of the ship, which he is confident will pass every test.

Charles V. Boykin, vice president and general manager of the Charleston Dry Dock and Machine Company, early in 1929 had employed Smith to lay the lines for some lightships his company was to build and while Smith was working on the lightships Boykin heard of the plans for his all-welded vessel. Despite skepticism on every hand, Boykin expressed his faith in the potential possibilities of the plan and agreed to give Smith's theory a trial.

AND so a 2500-barrel capacity oil tanker, 120 feet long, 23 feet wide and with a 10-foot draft, has been constructed in the shipbuilding yards of the Charleston Dry Dock and Machine Company and the method of its construction bids fair to revolutionize the shipbuilding industry of the world.

The oil tanker, the keel of which was laid on June 1, last year, has been made ready for its first test, which probably will occur on February 8. Officers of the Navy, Army and Light-house Service, State and city officials and prominent shipbuilding experts from far and near are expected to be present.

M. L. Clark of the Texas Oil Company at Elizabeth City, North Carolina, a friend and employer of Smith for years, was given by the inventor the first opportunity to buy this unique vessel, the first all-welded ship in maritime history, and his order has now been a matter of record for months. If the tests are successfully passed and the required rating given, the new tanker immediately will go into service for the Texas Oil Company.

For the first few months, the boat's construction was carried on in secrecy, but when patent rights for the R. F. Smith lock-notch welded system were made secure in this and foreign countries the word began to spread. Patent rights are now controlled internationally by the inventor, the Charleston Dry Dock and Machine Company and Robert Curr of New York.

"We are building a craft similar to riveted ships already constructed here construction was begun that under his system a saving of 20 per cent in weight and 25 per cent in construction cost could be accomplished as compared to rivet ships. Smith's estimates have been proven correct. Mr. Boykin announced, and due to the absence of rivets, bolts and angles it has been further discovered that the welded ship will have a substantially greater cargo capacity than a riveted ship of the same dimensions.

FROM the time the keel was laid for this unusual vessel up to the time of launching an average of only nine workmen was used on the construction, and the equipment consisted of one acetylene cutting torch and one electric welding machine. Only 5000 pounds of electric welding wire were required, as compared to the 85,000 pounds of rivets necessary to build a riveted ship of the same size.

"It is simply the evolution of shipbuilding," said Smith, "and the reception my ideas received is but history repeated."

recently in order that we might accurately compare the costs," said Mr. Boykin in announcing details of the rivetless construction. "We know what a riveted tanker of 100,000 gallons' capacity would cost." Smith estimated before ing itself. When the iron vessel succeeded the wooden hull those who advocated the use of iron were laughed to scorn until they proved their ories. People told them it was common knowledge that wood floated but iron sank.

"Rivets were deemed impracticable for years, and it is natural that this unconventional method of mine should have taken time to gain favor. I believe beyond the shadow of doubt, however, that welded ships are the ships of the future. I believe, too, that this evolution will mean another revolution in shipbuilding methods."

A CHARM SCHOOL FEATURING the "REBIRTH of FEMININITY"

More Than 200 Girls Enroll for Course at Evanston, Illinois.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch
Sunday Magazine Staff
CHICAGO.

THEY have organized a school out in Evanston, Chicago's ultra-respectable suburb, to teach girls how to be charming. And by charm the organizers of the school mean feminine charm. They have observed the reaction against the mannish, shingled flapper of day before yesterday, and they believe that now is the time to restore all the outmoded feminine graces.

The school has been organized by Miss Muriel Stolt, director of religious education for Covenant Methodist Church in Evanston. Miss Stolt has had the active co-operation of Mrs. Florence J. Robnett, dean of women at Northwestern University. To date more than 200 girls have enrolled for the course.

In its first phase the charm school is to consist of a series of six lectures. Later Miss Stolt plans to give practical instruction in the difficult business of being charming.

"What has pleased us most," she says, "is the striking response to the first announcement of the charm school. We had expected an enrollment of perhaps a hundred at the most. Particularly since we had limited the course to girls of high school and university age. We drew a great many girls from Northwestern University."

This response indicates, in Miss Stolt's belief, a definite need for the charm school. She contends that girls now in high school and university will have to learn to do a great many things that their mothers and grandmothers did almost by instinct. For example, they will have to learn to walk gracefully in the new long dresses. "Imagine a girl with a mannish stride in a long, bouffant dress," says Miss Stolt.

Men, in Miss Stolt's opinion, already have come to prefer the feminine type of woman. She recently conducted a survey and she believes that though the masculine mind still wavers on this subject, another year will decide the issue in favor of old-fashioned charm.

Mrs. Robnett, who sees in the course of her daily routine hundreds of girls, holds the same view. The ideal has entirely changed in favor of the womanly woman, she maintains. A committee of leading club women has been formed to aid in the organization of the charm school. The members of this committee voted to bar all mothers from the lectures.

"I believe it is true," says Miss Stolt, "that many girls today are unable to discuss their most important problems with their mothers. I have had girls tell me this in the course of my work."

"We want the girls who are attending this course to have entire confidence to say whatever they want to. Insofar as possible the whole movement has originated with the girls."

"And we believe that from them will also come the impetus for the more practical phases of the charm school. In the six lectures the subject of charm will scarcely be touched. But discussion will be stimulated and questions will be raised that can be answered in the 'laboratory' courses that we hope to organize."

Dean Robnett delivered the first lecture in the series, on "What Constitutes Charm." This was followed by a lecture on "Charm and Personal Hygiene" by Dr. Lena Sadler. Others in the series are "Tastes in Music," "Tastes in Literature," "Choice of Vocations," and last, but certainly not least, "Charm and Men, or the Charming Girl From the Man's Point of View." This final lecture will be given by Francis Bacon, principal of the Evanston High School.

By way of being quite impartial, it is Miss Stolt's plan to start a similar school for boys and young men. "Just the other day," she says, "a young man said to me, 'Well, now, you've surely got to do something for us, since you've undertaken to increase the ratio of charming girls. Or otherwise we will be left quite defenseless.' I assured him we had in mind keeping the balance even."

An earlier portrait of Mrs. Gellhorn.

By a Special Correspondent of the Sunday Magazine

THE venerable Dr. Anna Howard Shaw stepped forward, read a few words from a telegraph blank and promptly the 2000 or more persons who filled the Odeon burst into wild cheering.

If you had been there on that night when, by coincidence, the State Legislature in Jefferson City gave women in Missouri the vote at the same time that the National Suffrage Association was meeting in St. Louis, you could scarcely have escaped seeing Mrs. George Gellhorn.

A tall, straight figure, her hair coiled in a braid about her head, she stood there on the stage beside Dr. Shaw and looked out over the tumultuous audience. It was to her a moment of supreme triumph. It was a symbol of attainment of the thing she had wanted most, had struggled for, worked for, fought for, even back in the days when suffragettes were supposed to be women who wore stiff collars and pince-nez and led their husbands around by the ear.

She had played a part in every suffrage battle in the State. Even as she sat on the stage at the Odeon on that memorable night she knew that the final struggle was in progress. She knew that the hands of the clock in the Senate chamber at Jefferson City had been set back in order that a special train might carry an absent Senator to the capital in time to cast the one assenting vote that was needed. She knew that it was a matter of minutes, that failure meant the beginning of another struggle.

"THE vote," that rallying cry that meant so much 20 years ago, has now become to most women—even to many of those engaged in the suffrage struggle—a commonplace. But not to Mrs. Gellhorn. She is as ardently concerned with the struggle for civic equality for women as ever. Names and titles have changed—it is the League of Women Voters instead of the Equal Suffrage Association—but Mrs. Gellhorn works on.

She has divided her energies between this work and her family. And, her friends say, it has not been really a division at all. For she has not hesitated to draft the services of her family for her work nor to carry "the cause" (whichever one of a number of causes it may have happened to be) into her home.

To begin with, Mrs. Gellhorn was most fortunate in having Dr. and Mrs. Washington E. Fischel for parents. It was a home in which a great deal of intellectual life was centered. struction was begun that under system a saving of 20 per cent in light and 25 per cent in construction could be accomplished as compared to rivet ships. Smith's estimates have been proven correct, Mr.
Kin announced, and due to the absence of rivets, bolts and angles it has further discovered that the weld-ship will have a substantially greater capacity than a riveted ship of the same dimensions.

FROM the time the keel was laid for this unusual vessel up to the time of launching an average of nine workmen was used on the construction, and the equipment consisted of one acetylene cutting torch and one electric welding machine.
By 8000 pounds of electric welding were required, as compared to 85,000 pounds of rivets necessary to build a riveted ship of the same size.

"It is simply the evolution of shipbuilding," said Smith, "and the reception my ideas received in but history repeating itself. When the iron vessel succeeded the wooden hull those who advocated the use of iron were laughed to scorn until they proved their theories. People told them it was common knowledge that wood floated but iron sank.

"Rivets were deemed impracticable for years, and it is natural that this unconventional method of mine should have taken time to gain favor. I believe beyond the shadow of doubt,

INTERESTING ST. LOUISANS

Mrs. George Gellhorn

Woman Citizen, Who Name to the National Roll of Honor Beside Thos. Susan B. Anthony and Chapman Catt

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
Sunday Magazine

THE venerable Dr. Anna Howard Shaw stepped forward, read a few words from a telegraph blank and promptly the 2000 or more persons who filled the Odeon burst into wild cheering.

If you had been there on that night when, by coincidence, the State Legislature in Jefferson City gave women in Missouri the vote at the same time that the National Suffrage Association was meeting in St. Louis, you could scarcely have escaped seeing Mrs. George Gellhorn.

A tall, straight figure, her hair rolled in a braid about her head, she stood there on the stage beside Dr. Shaw and looked over the tumultuous audience. It was to her a moment of supreme triumph. It was a symbol of attainment of the thing she had wanted most, had struggled for, worked for, fought for, even back in the days when suffragettes were supposed to be women who wore stiff collars and pince-nez and led their husbands around by the ear.

She had played a part in every suffrage battle in the State. Even as she sat on the stage at the Odeon on that memorable night she knew that the final struggle was in progress. She knew that the hands of the clock in the Senate chamber at Jefferson City had been set back in order that a special train might carry an absent Senator to the capital in time to cast the one assenting vote that was needed. She knew that it was a matter of minutes, that failure meant the beginning of another struggle.

"THE vote," that rallying cry that meant so much 20 years ago, has now become to most women—even to many of those engaged in the suffrage struggle—a commonplace. But not to Mrs. Gellhorn. She is as ardently concerned with the struggle for civic equality for women as ever. Names and titles have changed—it is the League of Women Voters instead of the Equal Suffrage Association—but Mrs. Gellhorn works on.

She has divided her energies between this work and her family. And her friends say, it has not been really a division at all. For she has not hesitated to draft the services of her family for her work nor to carry "the cause" (whichever one of a number of causes it may have happened to be) into her home.

To begin with, Mrs. Gellhorn was most fortunate in having Dr. and Mrs. Washington E. Fischel for parents. It was a home in which a great deal of intellectual life was centered. Dr. and Mrs. Fischel were among the leaders of the Ethical Culture movement in St. Louis. They frequently entertained distinguished visitors to the city. And the children were not sent to bed when company came. under the title "Men, Women and Civilization" that was, in effect at least, a scathing denunciation of the whole feminist movement. "Modern woman," he said, "has forfeited man's respect and love. She is no longer an inspiration to artists. Can you imagine a bobbed-haired Madonna? Horrible thought!"

THE audience grew restive, but at last the speaker finished and sat down amid a calm that was punctuated by a few polite handclaps. Then Mrs. Gellhorn arose. Without preface or apology she launched into a verbal lashing that fairly withered the gentleman. He squirmed in visible discomfort at the head table. "Several times during the course of the speaker's address," said Mrs. Gellhorn, fixing her gaze on the offending male, "I was tempted to let down my long hair and strangle him." A storm of laughter greeted this remark, under cover of which the speaker of the evening beat a retreat. Later his friends explained that his speech had been intended as subtle satire. But, whatever his intentions, the response he provoked from Mrs. Gellhorn proved highly effective. The fund to be raised was oversubscribed.

She found time to satisfy almost every civic demand made upon her time. Long before the advent of the Community Fund and the Volstead act she was asked to aid in a fête at Delmar Garden for the benefit of a local hospital.

Mrs. Gellhorn's money-raising concession was the Katzenjammer House, where mild electric shocks were to be dispensed at 10 cents a shock. On either side were more attractive forms of diversion—a sandwich stand to the left and ice-cold beer to the right. Clearly, the Katzenjammer House was to be nothing but an annoying interruption.

There was a circus in town. She succeeded in borrowing seven full-grown elephants and a baby. Next she persuaded her brother, Dr. Ellis E. Fischel, to escort this herd to Delmar Garden behind his buggy, which was placarded, "We're on our way to the Katzenjammer House." En route the herd became separated and only the Martin Johnsons can excel Dr. Fischel's account of an elephant hunt. He was quite exhausted when he finally reached the scene of the fête and didn't remain to see the crowd that followed his safari and poured un-thousand dollars was a Republican. It was generally conceded that the efforts of the league were largely instrumental in defeating the three Judges.

BEHIND all of Mrs. Gellhorn's public endeavor there has been a fundamental faith in democracy. It goes deeper than this—it is a faith in the individual. It is this underlying principle on which she has reared her family.

Her children, three sons and a daughter, have gone their own way, more or less independently. The daughter, Martha Gellhorn, is just 31. She elected, instead of returning to Bryn Mawr to finish her senior year, to take a position in New York on the New Republic, liberal weekly. After six months of this she decided she wanted a job on a newspaper, with a wider range of experience. She could find nothing in New York, so she gave up her attractive apartment there and went to Albany, where she found the kind of newspaper job she was looking for—on a salary that entails living in a $9-a-week room.

Martha's mother relates an incident that illustrates the influence of the family environment. In the course of her work Martha was sent out to cover the meeting of a mother's club. The discussion was on a certain phase of child welfare. She listened in silence in her role of reporter as long as she could. But finally she couldn't resist taking a part in the discussion. "But you're wrong about that," she said. "It's this way." And Martha gave them a talk on child psychology, a subject long familiar from discussions in the Gellhorn household. The club voted to make her a member.

An invaluable part of the household is Christine Peters, who has been with the Gellhorns ever since she came from Germany 23 years ago. She has served innumerable luncheons in causes ranging from the World Court to non-patented street paving. Her famous whipped-cream meringues have helped to conclude many a heated controversy on a peaceful note.

With the victory for suffrage won, the nature of Mrs. Gellhorn's work changed. She at once became a leading spirit and organizer of the League of Women Voters, the successor to the old Equal Suffrage Association. She became chiefly interested in bringing women to an appreciation of the responsibility they had assumed.

But she took part in some sharp political battles of a non-partisan nature, too. There was the fight to defeat the three Republican Judges, grouped as the "three K's," Kimmel, Krueger and Killoren. The Republican machine charged that the League of Women Voters was playing partisan politics with the Democrats to defeat the local ticket and asserted in support of this contention that a prominent Democrat had given $1000 to the league. Mrs. Gellhorn countered by making public the entire list of contributors, showing that the only person who gave a discussion was on a certain phase of child welfare. She listened in silence in her role of reporter as long as she could. But finally she couldn't resist taking a part in the discussion. "But you're wrong about that," she said. "It's this way." And Martha gave them a talk on child psychology, a subject long familiar from discussions in the Gellhorn household. The club voted to make her a member.

"IT SEEMS inadequate," she says, "to say that the ninth grade discusses heroines and careers, but if I must find a phrase for the topic of our informal talks, I should say that it is a fairly appropriate one. Since government is the problem of human beings living together in organized society, we start in the seventh grade discussing human relations in terms of contacts the children understand, such as parent-child, sister-brother, and the problems of schoolmates. Then later we discuss current events in terms of behavior. In the senior class we proceed from a talk about the transportation regulations in effect at the school to the question of community transportation and the regulation of public utilities.

"And, of course, the girls are told about how their political liberty was won, so that they may prize their responsibility highly. There is so much that is challenging and inspiring to youth in the subject of politics and government that a rational and sympathetic approach should develop valuable citizens for tomorrow."

The cynicism of certain of the younger generation distresses her genuinely. It is difficult for her to understand. She would like to get at the cause. She frankly confesses that she has never been able to finish Ernest Hemingway's "The Sun Also Rises," that study in futility that has served as a kind of reference book for certain of the younger intellectuals. She is disturbed that young women of today do not respond more readily to the causes that have engaged her energies.

So she is working on the very youngest generation. And she is not in any way discouraged over the phenomenon of the post-war generation. As a matter of fact it would be difficult to imagine her really discouraged over anything. Perhaps that is why her name is added to the National Roll of Honor beside those of Dr. Shaw, Susan B. Anthony, Carrie Chapman Catt and others who have labored long and faithfully in the service of their fellow-women.

A DETROIT MILLIONAIRE'S ATTEMPT to RESTORE the HAND CRAFTS

Operating a hand loom in the Cranbrook Academy of Art.

By M. W. CHILDS
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

HERE in the very city that has done so much to mechanize the world there has come into being a school to restore the hand crafts, to impress upon all of America and Detroit in particular the importance of beautiful things made by hand. It represents part of George G. Booth's plan to dispose of his personal fortune before he dies. He has succeeded to date to the extent of nearly $15,000,000.

Booth is a man of ideas. It would probably be much easier for him to give away the fortune he has built up as publisher of the Detroit News, and a string of Michigan papers, if this were not true. He could do as so many other millionaires have done: pour it out indiscriminately for museums and charitable institutions. But he had these ideas; they had been growing in his mind for a long time.

They have already taken tangible form at Cranbrook, near Birmingham, a suburb of Detroit. All of Cranbrook was once part of the Booth estate. Today there are only a few acres left around the Booth home. The rest has gone to provide room for Booth's projects. There is the Cranbrook School for Boys, now nearly completed, the Cranbrook Academy of Art, the Bloomfield Hills School for Children, the Cranbrook Foundation and Christ Church, regarded as one of the most distinguished church buildings in the country.

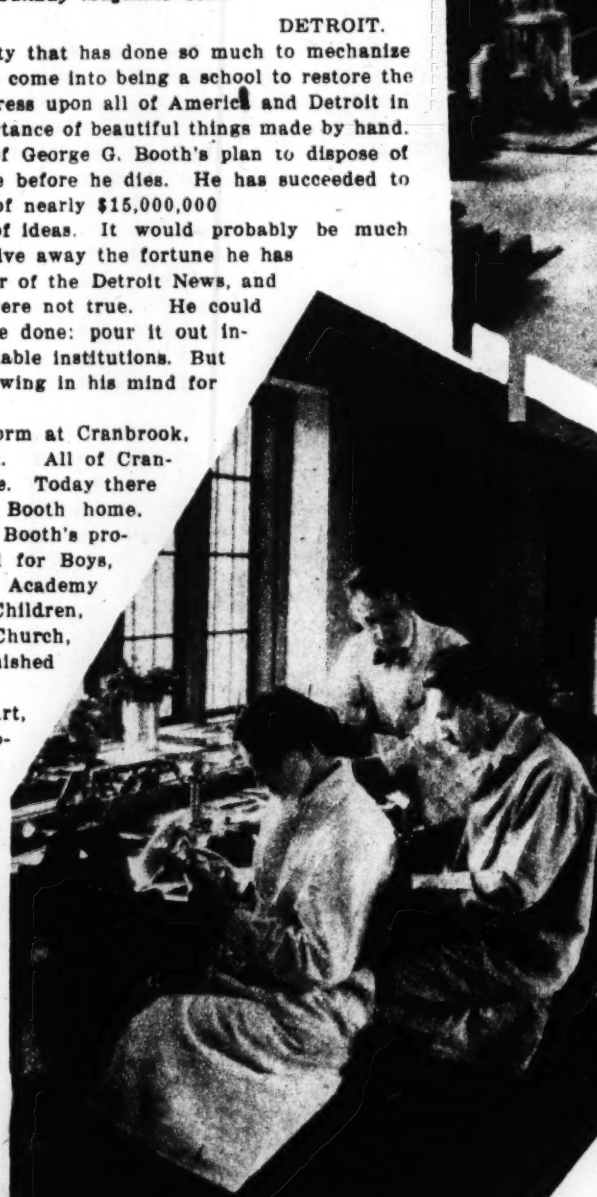

As a nucleus for the Academy of Art, Booth is now engaged in bringing together masters in every craft from all parts of the world. They will not give formal lessons. They will live at Cranbrook, have their studios there, do their work there for at least part of the year, quite independently. Booth has been compared to those men in the Renaissance, men such as Lorenzo de Medici, who sought to gather about their courts all the great artists and artists of the time.

But Booth's motive is different. It is not that he wants merely to add to his own art collection. His plan strikes much deeper. He has a social significance. He wants—to put it in the fewest possible words—to raise the standard of taste in America.

"I've been interested in the crafts for a long time," he explains. "I printed several books on my own hand-presses at my home. And the more I saw of museums the more I was impressed by the fact that they contained almost solely rare and beautiful things from the remote past. And it occurred to me that the mechanic, the average machine-worker, going into one of these museums, would think to himself, 'Yes, that's very nice. But we don't do anything like that today.' But the fact was that here and there in isolated parts of this country people were working in the crafts and doing very fine work. From time to time I acquired examples of it."

Out of Booth's reflections along this line came the idea for Cranbrook. It was to be a community in which the arts and crafts should play a very important part and in which the very environment should embody the highest taste. He began with the church, which was to serve as a center for the whole community.

He wanted to get the best architect he could find and so he called in the late Bertram Grosvenor Goodhue. Next he commissioned leading craftsmen to execute the metal work, the windows, the sculpture for the church. And lastly he acquired for it a set of chiming bells that were placed in the tower.

Booth's attitude toward the church is interesting.

"The response of the community to the church has pleased me very much," he says. "It is a liberal church. People of almost every sect attend. And it does serve as a social center for the community and, in a sense, as a cultural center. I feel this way about it. The church exists as an institution. Why not use it? Why not mold

Artists, Architects and Master Craftsmen From All Over the World Being Gathered Together at Cranbrook, Michigan, by George G. Booth.

It, adapt it, to present-day needs?"

The same principle was observed in the founding of Cranbrook School for Boys. Superficially it resembles the eastern type of preparatory school, such as Hotchkiss or Taft. But the resemblance is only superficial.

Again Booth called in one of the world's foremost architects. This time it was Eliel Saarinen, then a professor of architecture at the University of Michigan. It was arranged that he should stay at Cranbrook so long as there was any building to be done. And apparently that will be for many years to come.

Saarinens and Booth were agreed that everything about the school should be simple, beautiful, in the best possible taste. Otherwise Saarinen had a free hand. Booth had ideas about the school and he discussed them with Saarinen but he scrupulously avoided imposing his own theories. The buildings were completed about a year ago. They have been hailed as a noteworthy contribution to American architecture.

Saarinens employed craftsmen in metal, stone and wood who contributed their talents. The result is a perfect and finished whole, always in a simple key. No detail has been overlooked, from the chandeliers in the dormitories to the chairs in the dining hall. Thought and care have gone into everything. Stadium, gymnasium, swimming pool are, of course, part of the equipment.

The boys at Cranbrook School live in an environment of beauty. And that is half the battle, in the opinion of Dr. William O. Stevens, headmaster. There is no self-conscious attitude about art in the school, Dr. Stevens explains. The boys in the first two forms, corresponding to the eighth and ninth grades, are required to take six hours of arts and crafts—cabinet-making, silver work, weaving, sculpture, anything they may choose. In the third form they take four hours. After that they are not required to take work in this department. But a majority of the boys, according to Dr. Stevens, elect to spend a part of their spare time in the shops.

Booth believes that the influence of this school will radiate out in every direction. He explains: "Most of the boys in the school are from well-to-do or wealthy homes. Some are scholarship students.

"We might enroll the son of a furniture manufacturer, a Grand Rapids furniture manufacturer, say. That boy's standards of taste and feeling for design would be inevitably influenced here. He would eventually, let us say, return to take charge of his father's business. His standards would be imprinted on the output of his factories.

"That is an example of how the school may exert an influence. We believe that it will radiate out in every direction, that it can't help but do so.

YOU will recall that France at a certain period in its history imported a number of painters from Italy. The French painters of the generation following did not imitate the paintings of those Italians but they were influenced by them, stimulated by them. And then some of the Cranbrook boys who might otherwise become physicians or bankers may feel a strong enough urge to become cabinet-makers, say."

The Cranbrook Academy of Art is a separate institution. It adjoins the school. Already two of the buildings in the plan have been erected and several of the departments are functioning with master craftsmen at work. The school has been in operation only a very short time and the plan of organization is not yet clearly defined. But it will eventually operate and is in part operating in this way:

Saarinens, for example, is in charge of the department of architecture. Young students, in most instances those who have completed an architectural course, will come to Cranbrook where they will be able to study and work under Saarinen's direction. There will be no formal classes, no credits, no graduations, no degrees. And the student may stay six months, a year, two years. In fact, as long as he likes, or as long as those in charge feel that he is progressing. So it will be in the other branches.

The weaving department is in operation. The looms are in a long room with a sloping ceiling of wood, painted with a design in pastel colors. It is a pleasant workshop. Miss Maja Andersson-Wirde is in charge. She came to Cranbrook at Booth's invitation from Stockholm, Sweden. She is well known in Europe as a designer of textiles and rugs. Another designer in this department is Mrs. Saarinen. And Miss Andersson-Wirde brought with her two assistants from Sweden.

BEYOND the weaving room is the silversmith's shop, in charge of Arthur Neville Kirk of London, England. Here work is going forward under Kirk's direction on a superb silver and enamel chalice, which is to be ornamented with precious and semi-precious stones. Kirk's reputation has already attracted several adult students. Kirk explains that as soon as he has taught them certain fundamental processes they are able to contribute to the work on the chalice.

And beyond this is the cabinet-maker's shop. Here is the fresh smell of wood and much activity, lathes, workbenches. A cabinet maker from Sweden is in charge. There is the model for the chairs that Saarinen has designed for his dining room.

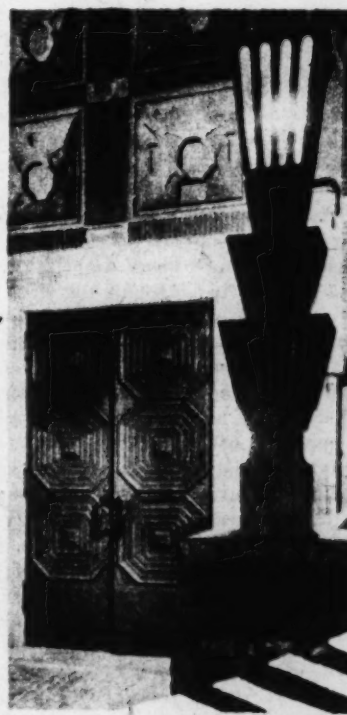

Jean Eachman, a master craftsman, formerly of Zurich, Switzerland, directs the bookbinding and the printing. Eventually new type faces will be designed, according to present plans. And it will be possible to experiment in various ways with old type faces.

In addition to these master craftsmen, working in their respective fields with the students and craftsmen at work, there will be outstanding representatives of the arts. A start has already been made in this direction.

David Evans, young English sculptor, Prix de Rome winner and associate of the Royal Academy, has recently come to Cranbrook. He will be there for a greater part of each year, entirely free to execute any commissions he chooses. On the day that I visited his studio he was at work on a bas-relief to go in the arch above a doorway in Cranbrook Church. Nearby on an easel was the model for a bas-relief panel of football players to go in a wall facing the stadium. Evans explained that he was learning things from the Cranbrook boys. They frequently visit his studio and one of the boys explained that Evans' football players were not exactly accurate. In his original model he had shown one player tackling another by the DUSSELDORF, Germany.

HE happy Rhinish life which pulsates in this city," says the travel folder, "is incomparable." And so it is, ordinarily. Dusseldorf, with its parks and gardens, is much like Washington, a city of more than half a million people, unmarred by factories and studded with the administrative offices of industries in nearby cities. Of these industries Dusseldorf is the place of exhibition, of trade fairs, of festivals, of art exhibitions and grand concerts.

But lately this spirit has withdrawn into temporary seclusion and after nightfall the Koenigsallee, with its luxurious shops and cafes, usually an avenue of crowded sidewalks, has been virtually deserted and the swans in the Hofgarten lagoons paddle about and strike attitudes to empty benches.

A killer is at large in the city, and his unnatural crimes have frightened the populace indoors after dark. Nineteen persons were victims of his work during the past year, almost exclusively girls and women.

Obviously a depraved type of maniac, the terror has plunged his dagger, wielded his hammer and jerked his lariat in a most gruesome manner, and defied the police to apprehend him.

So far, all efforts to catch him have been futile. At first it was thought extra police vigilance might suffice, but as the crimes continued, Berlin criminologists were summoned and these paced the streets and pondered clues. For a time the situation was so acute that a constant watch was kept over the city by an airplane squad, but the steady rumble of the motors only served to heighten the fears of the citizens and the plan was abandoned.

AFTER a year the fear has etched itself into the faces of those who must be abroad at night, as the correspondent noted in a nocturnal stroll recently. The slit throats, crushed heads and punctured bodies of the criminal's pitiful victims are in the minds of all.

Clues seem to lead nowhere. Several persons have survived the attacks of the man with the long, thin knife, but have been so terror-stricken as to be utterly incapable of describing their assailant.

The reign of terror here started on February 3, last year, when a 55-year-old housewife was accosted by a man in a dimly-lighted street. She tried to brush him, but he knocked her down with a blow of his fist and pounced upon her. The hand holding the dagger rose and fell rapidly 18 times, and each time sheathed itself in the woman's flesh. She recovered, but was unable to describe her attacker.

The following week an 8-year-old schoolgirl failed to return home and her partially charred body, pierced many times by a sharp instrument, was found behind a fence on a vacant lot. A young man was found two days later, his lifeless body stuck like a pincushion.

Excitement broke out after the third attack and the residents scurried to their homes, sending their children to and from school under escort. Windows were locked and doors barred and hardly was the soul who walked the streets at night. Except for the lights the city seemed ready for a wartime air raid. The maniacal murderer left the city in shuddering peace for several months before he broke out again.

This time his first invasion was in a rooming-house district and his victim a young cabaret performer, who, apparently, had been lassoed and yanked into a dark doorway. Added to the usual stab wounds in the body were marks on the throat, which were classified as teeth marks. This led to the supposition that the murderer was a doorway in Cranbrook Church. Nearly on an easel was the model for a bas-relief panel of football players to go in a wall facing the stadium. Evans explained that he was learning things from the Cranbrook boys. They frequently visit his studio and one of the boys explained that Evans' football players were not exactly accurate. ALMOST PERFECT CRIMES

By JOSEPH GOLLOMB
Author of "Master Man Hunters," "Master Spies," Etc.

II.—The BERNAYS MURDER

IN THE annals of crime designed and executed with the perfection of high artistry, a leading place must be given to the Bernays murder, for the qualities of patience, imagination and infinite skill that went into its execution. In Antwerp lived a successful and prominent attorney, William Bernays. One afternoon he told his wife that he was going on business to Brussels. He packed his bag, kissed his little boy goodby, but parted from his wife coldly, formally. This difference in farewells was expressive, of course, of the way he felt toward each; he adored his son, and he was barely on speaking terms with his wife.

For nine days his wife heard no word from him. She became uneasy at the silence. For while she did not expect any letters, he would be certain to write to his son, and still more sure to keep in touch with his office. When, therefore, no word came from him, she communicated her uneasiness to several high police officials, friends of the family.

The police made a quiet preliminary investigation. But when this brought no news of Bernays the incident became public and filled the newspapers. This did what the police had failed to accomplish. An acquaintance of Bernays came forward with the news that he had met the lawyer on the train to Brussels on the day he left his family. Bernays had spoken to this man of his trip:

"I am going to meet an American client whom I have never yet seen. This man has heard of me and has important business for me. He sent a letter asking me to come to Brussels to see him. And as a preliminary he has sent me a check for $150."

Thereupon the police instituted a minute search for either the letter or the check among Bernays's papers in the office and at home. They were unable to find any trace of either. The man continued to remain missing, and soon two theories prevailed in the excited discussions that took place. The two theories were interestingly in contrast to each other.

One was that, as he had recently become a Roman Catholic, he might have entered a monastery in some emotional revulsion against his worldly life. The other theory was that, so far from turning away from the fleshpots of life, he had, perhaps, run away on some unofficial honeymoon.

Let us see the outlines of the dominant situation in the life of William Bernays at the time he disappeared. Some six years before his disappearance, a marriage had been arranged between him and Julia, the daughter of a Belgian statesman.

She was beautiful, but her husband later described her as "cold as a statue." The marriage was a negotiated one, typical of middle and upper-class marriages in Europe, in which practical rather than emotional reasons prevail. But Bernays fell in love with his wife, probably because she was "cold as a statue."

THIS was not a promising basis for marital happiness and before a year had passed his love was chilled to death. As for the wife, she never felt any stir in her heart for her husband, unless it was the emotion of hatred in the later phase of their marriage. For even after their child was born the couple continued to drift apart with increasing bitterness.

Finally they had either to separate or come to some entirely different arrangement in their domestic life. Each was passionately attached to the child. For the boy's sake they had to maintain an outward aspect of harmony, and on this basis they came to an agreement. They were to live under the same roof, but in different parts of their ample house. Toward the rest of the world they were to present a pretense of marital union. But within their home each was to remain independent of the other.

Having so little to do with each other they arrived at comparative peace and perhaps would have endured their life together, had not the inevitable domestic triangle been formed.

Armond Peltzer, the older of two sons of a widow, was a brilliant engineer, and finding the Old World too limited for his talents went to America and prospered there. Leon, the younger son, remained behind to try to make a go of the commercial affairs that had supplied the Peltzers with comparative prosperity. But Leon had neither the business ability of his dead father nor the brilliance of his brother Armond. The result was that the once prosperous business came to the verge of bankruptcy and was even involved in fraud. Not only were the family fortunes in hazard but the family honor, which up to then had held high place in Brussels. In this extremity the Widow Peltzer said to her son:

"There is only one thing that can save us. We must send a cable to America telling Armond to return at once and rescue us."

So a cable was dispatched. Armond, with a loyalty to family and friends that was characteristic of him, wound up his affairs in America and made haste back to Antwerp. He found his mother's business so desperately involved that, in addition to his own brain, he had to find some brilliant legal mind. He asked for such a lawyer and was told:

"There is only one man for you, William Bernays."

To Bernays Armond went and engaged him as counsel and counselor in the task of rescuing the Peltzer business from bankruptcy and disgrace. Armond and Bernays, putting their minds together, proved equal to their tremendous task and saved the day. They became friends, each admiring the other's talents and qualities. Armond soon also became a frequent visitor at the Bernays home where, of course, he met Julia Bernays.

IT WAS not long before Armond became acquainted with the situation in the Bernays household. With the impulse of friendship, Armond tried to reconcile the man and his wife, but failed.

There is an old adage, "Between the bark and the tree do not thrust your finger." The truth of this Armond was soon to feel. He was already the best friend of William Bernays. Now in order to understand Julia, he saw much of her and became the friend of the wife, too. This news spread outside the home, but William Bernays tried to convince his friends that the friendship was purely platonic. And indeed, the husband, in his high admiration for Armond, believed it.

But one day an anonymous letter came to William Bernays in his office. It said that there was not a platonic relation between Julia and Armond, but love; that Armond was spending many hours with Julia while Bernays was at his office; and that spy gossip about the two was gaining momentum in various circles in the city. Bernays, it must be remembered, had found his beautiful wife "cold as a statue."

The thought that people were gossiping about her, whispering that the warmth of emotion she had denied her husband, she was now bestowing on another man, enraged Bernays.

For he believed in the anonymous letter. Forgetting all that bound him in admiration and friendship to Armond, he wrote him a letter, part of which read: "...and as your intimacy with my wife is causing gossip, I must ask you to give up coming to my house. Believe me, it hurts me to break up our friendship, but I am sure you will agree I am right..."

ARMOND seems to have had sterner qualities of friendship in him than Bernays. Letter in hand, he hastened to Bernays's office and with eloquent warmth presented his side of the matter. He convincingly pointed out the despicable character of people who would write such anonymous letters and exchange such gossip. He was so sincere that Bernays became ashamed of his letter and retracted everything he said.

But the damage had been done. The virus of jealous suspicion had entered Bernays's heart and mind, and he watched his wife and friend with morbid keenness. One evening at dinner he was convinced he had spied an understanding smile pass between them. He rose from his chair, white and furious. All the jealousy, anger and suspicion he had not voiced for months now poured forth in a fiery accusation. A violent scene occurred. Julia, who under her coldness toward her husband seemed to possess a fire of her own, seared Bernays with contempt and scorn and announced she would do as she pleased and see Armond as often as he wanted to see her. Whereupon Bernays turned on Armond, and, ordering him out of the house, forbade him ever to enter it again.

Armond, caught in the dilemma of this situation, made a striking picture. Tall, athletic in build, faultlessly attired in formal dress, he stood silent during the passionate recriminations between man and wife. Then when Bernays so humbly ordered him out of the house, Armond spoke for the first time.

"In your suspicion of me, in your accusation of treachery toward you, who were my best friend, and under whose roof I have been your guest, you have cast a slur not only on your wife's honor, but also on mine. I have not the right to resent the insult to her. But for your insult to me I insist that you meet me in a duel."

This seems to have brought uneasiness into the heart of Bernays, corroded though it was with hatred and jealousy. He had not the virtue courage of Armond, and the thought of having to face cold steel or a bullet made him quail. The following day he sent a letter of apologetic apology for his "unjust suspicion" of Armond.

But in his refusal to let Armond see his wife any more, Bernays remained firm. This brought matters to the point where Bernays took his trip to Brussels and vanished.

FOR days the police of all Belgium searched for traces of the missing attorney. Their best efforts came to nothing. They knew, of course, of the strained relations between Armond and Bernays and secretly tried to connect the domestic situation with the mystery. But so honorable was the record of the Peltzer family, so sterling seemed to be the character of Armond, and so completely did secret investigation of his movements apparently clear him of any connection with the disappearance of Bernays, that the police gave up looking in this direction. The mystery was daily increasing when one morning the following letter arrived at the office of the Chief of Police at Brussels:

"Sir—I was horrified to learn one of those crank letters which the police the world over receive in the wake of a mystery or crime the end of the findings.

"Your obedient servant, HENRY VAUGHN."

At first the police thought this was the work of a crank letter which the police the world over receive in the wake of a mystery or crime the end of the findings.

In an armchair before the desk was the body of William Bernays, huddled in death.

THIS is the second of a new and amazing series of five true stories of famous crimes that put murder in perfect form, written by a master of stories stranger than fiction.

you two letters—has not reached you. M. William Bernays, alas, did not disappear. He is dead. He was killed by accident in my Brussels office, No. 159 Rue de la Loi. The accident was entirely my fault—or rather the fault of my carelessness. He came to see me by appointment to talk over an important business matter. I had never met him, but even in America I heard that he was the man I would need for certain business of a highly technical legal character.

"I WROTE him asking him to meet me at my office in Brussels and sent a check for $150 for his traveling expenses. When he came into my office I had been examining a revolver. And foolishly I continued playing with it all through our interview. We had completed our first talk, and M. Bernays turned to leave the room, when the revolver went off, and to my intense horror M. Bernays fell dead at my feet. I thought, I hoped, he was only wounded. But soon, alas, I saw that he was dead—and dead by my hand!

"My first impulse was to send for the police. Then I remembered how very awkward and unpleasant would be my own position. Here I was, an American, without a single friend in Brussels. If I therefore made up my mind it was better to leave Belgium and communicate with the police from a distance. I did so. But my letters seem to have miscarried.

"I am, of course, terribly sorry that I have behaved so foolishly. Still, I think I shall be able to prove that all I say is true. And I beg you to tell the family of M. Bernays how deeply I sympathize with them and how dreadfully sorry I am to be the involuntary cause of his death. I am, sir, that figures largely in the newspapers. But since there was an address in the letter they went there.

"Your obedient servant, HENRY VAUGHN."

At first the police thought this was the work of a crank letter which the police the world over receive in the wake of a mystery or crime the end of the findings.

Yes, the superintendent of the business building at that address told them, there was a Henry Vaughn, an American business man, who had an office there. The police went upstairs and found the office locked. The door was broken in.

In an armchair before a desk was the body of William Bernays, huddled in death. On the desk lay a revolver with one of its chambers discharged. Everything in the office was in meticulous order. If there had been a struggle, certainly there were left no traces of it. But much blood was on the carpet.

Bernays's heavy overcoat and his hat hung on a clothes-tree near the door. In the dead man's pocket was a letter from Henry Vaughn summoning Bernays to Brussels and the check for $150.

THERE began a vigorous hunt for Vaughn. The check found in Bernays's pocket was on a Brussels bank in which a Henry Vaughn, an American business man, had a modest balance. Several business men in the shipping world had had transient dealings with him; what little they saw of him gave them a favorable impression. So far, therefore, the Vaughn confession to the police seemed genuine.

One circumstance cast suspicion on Vaughn's account. According to the letter, Bernays must have risen from his chair and turned to the door to leave when the revolver "went off." But there was his body placed back in the chair. That, however, might have been explained, as Vaughn had put it, by his hope that Bernays "was only wounded." In that case Vaughn would probably put the body in the chair, the better to help staunch the wound. The bullet had entered the back of the man's neck.

At this point the police reached the end of the findings.

But they heard nothing more from the man himself. The letter had come from Basle, Switzerland, and in that city some traces of Henry Vaughn were found; of a visit there at the time the letter was written and mailed. Then Vaughn seemed to have vanished into thin air.

The police now were baffled, and if the reader has any theory or guess as to the story of the death of M. Bernays, he is that much clearer in mind than were the police of Brussels and Antwerp.

JUST as they were about to confess themselves beaten there arrived an anonymous letter at Police Headquarters, both in Brussels and in Antwerp. It will be remembered that as an anonymous letter had already played a part in this story, the letter in which Armond Peltzer was accused of intimacy with M. Bernays. This time again Armond Peltzer was accused, but of a much more serious crime. The letter advised that the handwriting of "Henry Vaughn" be compared with that of Armond Peltzer.

The police lost no time in following up this clue, but they went about it very circumspectly. They saw, of course, that Armond was the only known man who would have any motive for killing Bernays, although the act was not quite in keeping with Armond's character. They also knew there would be danger of his taking flight. A letter of Armond's was secured and placed side by side with the letter written by Henry Vaughn. But not even handwriting experts could detect the slightest resemblance of the one handwriting to the other.

But once the police were on the trail of a theory, they were reluctant to leave it without further investigation. So that the cast about for some other clue in the same general direction. It happened that just about the time, and several weeks after the murder was discovered, Armond's rest was made. Leon, came back on a visit from America. The new trail scent became clearer, the situation was a dismal failure of the Bernays and have seen, a ment between Armond and Leon could not to existence w But William grant her a refused to native but the circumst was, but on moned. William moved. With th

REMOTE as was the possibility that he had had anything to do with the Bernays death, the police nevertheless took a look at his handwriting. To their utter amazement there was the closest possible resemblance between the handwriting of Leon Peltzer and that of "Henry Vaughn." On the strength of this discovery the police of Brussels decided to take a drastic step.

The Peltzer brothers were at dinner with their mother in their home. An imperious ring sounded at the front door. The maid answered the summons and was startled to see on the steps several policemen in uniform.

Without giving the maid a chance to announce them, the police quickly made their way to the dining room and flung open the door without knocking. The Peltzers turned in wonder. M. Peltzer was about to greet the police official as a guest, but a stern look on his face froze the words on his lips. At the sight of the policemen in uniform, the two Peltzer brothers slowly rose, to their feet. The official advanced sternly and placed his hand on Armond's shoulder.

"I am sorry, but tonight I am a policeman! I have come to arrest you, Armond and Leon, for the murder of William Bernays!" Armond bowed slightly. "There is, of course, nothing to do but to obey and go with you. As to your charge, that must await an answer at the proper time and place."

wrists, obviously a mistake. In the fall one of the most renowned sculptors in the world, Karl Milles, of Stockholm, will come to Cranbrook. Milles visited America for the first time recently. He came over at the invitation of a group of art patrons in Chicago who have acquired for the city the fountain group which Milles did for his own garden. The price paid was more than $100,000. Milles subsequently visited Dallas, Texas, where he was commissioned to do an important Civil War memorial.

BOOTH succeeded in persuading Milles to come to Cranbrook to spend from six to eight months each year. Saarinen is now designing his house and studio. Milles, like the others, will be quite free to work as he pleases. There are to be no restrictions. Saarinen is also designing studios and dormitories for the students. Under the plan as now contemplated, the more advanced artists, those who are working out their own individual problems, will be provided with a studio and living quarters free of charge.

brilliant engineer he was, Armond planned the big features and the minute details of the task of removing Bernays and at the same time escaping without punishment. In his brother Leon he found a devoted and ready helper.

WHEN Armond's plan reached Leon in America, by letter, the latter went to his employer.

"A friend of mine needs my help in Canada," he said. "At the same time it may be an opportunity for me to go in business with him. I'm sorry, but I must leave."

Instead of going to Canada, however, Leon set sail for Liverpool. He did this to throw any possible investigators off the trail at the very outset. He even changed his name again and went to another hotel. Then he went to a hairdresser and had a wig and false beard made for him. He explained he was going to a fancy-dress ball. On the "day of the ball" he went to the barber again and had himself "made up," even to acquiring an olive complexion.

FROM a blond Belgian the man had now become outwardly a dark South American. He then wrote the letter headed, "San Francisco, November tenth," which Armond in Antwerp showed to his friends. Leon also proceeded to the important step of buying arms and ammunition. To confuse possible investigation, he bought seven revolvers and three boxes of cartridges.

Going now to a third hotel, Leon destroyed everything of his wardrobe which had come with him from America and bought a complete new outfit down to underwear. This he marked "H. V." and as "Henry Vaughn," salesman for "Messrs. Murray & Co., Sydney, Australia," he now set out traveling over Europe to "help organize a steamship line between Bremen, Hamburg, Amsterdam and Australia."

He saw all kinds of business people, and "Henry Vaughn" became favorably known to substantial men in shipping circles in several of the capitals of Eu-

over. He saved some money, too. When, late in 1919, he found an opportunity to buy a half-interest in a small grocery he had enough money to swing the deal, though he admits he got a rare bargain. He went into business partnership with a cousin and they made a success of the store, which operated at Spring and Chouteau avenues under the name of Serbian Bros. Market.

The grocery venture proved to be a windfall. Had the youthful Tanasko chosen to continue in business, he thinks now, he might have become the rich American merchant his parents had pictured. But he didn't like business except as a means to an end. And anyway, if a fellow wanted to draw pictures all the time, what was there to do but draw them? That's what young Milovich did.

He went back to art school in the afternoons for awhile and then, in 1923, sold his interest in the store and went full time. He had money now. He remained in school for two years.

Operating as a successful merchant, Milovich found himself able at times to indulge his irrepressible desire to travel. Once he traveled as far away as Chicago and visited the Field Museum. There he saw a rare collection of Javanese batiks and was so impressed with their delicacy and beauty that he ventured to try the art for himself. There was no personal instruction in the batik-making, so Tanasko had to resort to the guidance of books and to his own ingenuity. He supplied himself with a few pieces of silk, dyes, paraffin, the necessary implements for applying the wax and went to work.

It was a formidable task, a painstaking, tedious one. As those familiar with the process know, there is no backing up, no erasing, no possibility of covering a mistake as may be done with a portrait in oils. Once a design is dyed into the cloth, it remains, and mistakes, if any, remain with it. Tanasko's first public showing of batiks was at the Public Library in 1925. In 1926 his work was seen at the Artists' Guild exhibition and the State Fair. Again at the last Guild exhibition, shortly after his return from a two-year stay in Paris, his work won the Decorations Prize for the second time.

DURING his two years in Paris, Milovich turned out a great many batiks, some of which were of great size and elaborate design. Weeks of painstaking labor went into them, for Tanasko takes no short cuts after the manner of commercial batik makers. Many of his more intricate pieces are dipped as many as 15 times.

It was upon his batiks that he depended for support during his second year abroad. Originally, he had ventured to hope for only one year in Paris—this on the re- maine of the proceeds from sale of his grocery and his commission work to be had in St. Louis. doesn't owe the artist everything. He owes it something.

Just now he is endeavoring to recoup finances with a few portrait commissions and has put aside his batik dyes and wax for a time. But he will get back to them before long. The batik is his medium. He may say he plans to divide his time equally between batiks and portraits, but my guess is that he won't do it. He can no more help making batiks than a poet can help making verse.

Professor Wuerpel characterizes Milovich as an artist who is peculiarly fortunate in having found his medium at the outset.

"SO MANY artists," says Mr. Wuerpel, "are handicapped by their inability to find the proper means for expressing themselves. Tanasko Milovich has accomplished that. Certainly no finer work than his has been seen in the East. It depended on a community can hope to develop itself in fields of artistic endeavor unless the artist himself is willing to accept some responsibility. The community that I have seen."

and several weeks after the murder was discovered, Armond's brother, Leon, came back on a boat from America.

Leon, it may be remembered, was the brother who had made such a dismal failure of the business ventures and whom Armond had to rescue from fraudulent bankruptcy. That was about a year and a half before the Bernays mystery. One of the first things Armond had done at the time of his arrival back home was to send Leon off to America to get a new start in life.

Leon had been in America, therefore, for a year and a half, during which period he seemed to have had considerable success. Shortly before M. Bernays disappeared Armond had shown to all his friends a letter from Leon, with San Francisco mentioned as the place where Leon had just negotiated a highly profitable business deal. So profitable was it that in the same letter Leon announced he would soon be coming back to Antwerp for a visit. He arrived in Antwerp soon after the disappearance of Bernays.

NOTE as was the possibility that he had had anything to do with the Bernays death, the police nevertheless took a look at his handwriting. To their utter amazement there was the closest possible resemblance between the handwriting of Leon Peltzer and that of "Henry Vaughn." sausage department, but it was little better than the other. Tanasko says he will never escape the memory of that period of desolation when life was one long round of hog-killing. Men were machines, he says, machines for killing and cutting up animals. The sight of slaughter was sickening and the odors were stifling. He couldn't eat meat for a month, he relates.

After a year in St. Louis, Tanasko determined to try Kansas City, but found it no better. It was even worse. He worked for another packing house—it was the only job he knew. Then, when he could endure it no longer, he got a job in the company's office as errand boy at $8.50 a week. A few months later he went to St. Joseph and worked at cleaning locomotives in a railroad roundhouse. The illness of his brother then brought him back to St. Louis. The brother died two days after he arrived.

TANASKO resolved to stay in St. Louis this time but there would be no more working in a packing house. He got a job as a grocery clerk. He was 17 now and able to earn more money. The worst years were over. Indeed, conditions improved so rapidly that at 18 he was able to take the first step toward fulfillment of his destiny as an artist. He went to art school at Washington University. He went for six months steadily. Even though he had to go back to work, the artistic spark had been fanned into a flame which could not be smothered now.

vat collection. Others he has acquired recently.

The arrangement of the museum is an example of Booth's ingenuity and of the whole approach to art at Cranbrook. The school boys enter first a room that is a natural history museum in little. It contains mounted birds, beautiful examples of minerals in the natural state, marine life, all of which gradually leads up to two or three cases at the end that contain some Roman bronzes, an Etruscan vase or two. Then it is but a step into the museum of art. Unconsciously, the boys observe the relation between design in nature and design in art. Booth's home with its more than 50 rooms is, as now planned, to be converted into an academy of music, dramatic art and the dance, to be conducted similarly to the Academy of Art.

Mrs. Booth and the Booth children, now grown and with families of their own, are entirely in sympathy with the Cranbrook idea. In fact, they have taken an active part in its creation. One son, Henry Scripps Booth, designed an addition to the Bloomfield Hills School for Children and is directly concerned with the growth of Cranbrook.

When he talks about Cranbrook, Booth's enthusiasm is almost boyish. There is no intimation of his 66 years. He seems to radiate energy and health. He is looking about now for painters whom he may persuade to come to Cranbrook.

"We've been interested in getting stimulating people here," he says. "Sometimes I am asked, why we have imported so many Scandinavians. But if they are doing the best work, why not? Too, it seems to me that the Scandinavian artists have a more realistic approach to America. They accept it as it is. And they don't think they can make the country over in a day."

"In this matter of taste, we don't expect to effect a revolution in a year. Nor possibly 20 years, or 30 years or 40 years. But I believe the influence of Cranbrook will be felt. I know it will."

covered at Harvard College Observatory. They extend our estimate of the diameter of the visible universe, according to Dr. Shapley, to about 2,500,000,000,000,000,000 miles.

All this dwarfs almost to insignificance the spectacular phenomena of meteors which the earth periodically encounters. It reduces to nothingness our moon, the tiny moons of Mars, the ten satellites of Jupiter and the innumerable small bodies that encircle Saturn. It even renders comparatively insignificant the end of the present classification of the universe as "a confession of ignorance and a confession of faith" to be filled in slowly as man goes on his way through dark thickets of ignorance toward the end of all knowledge. And that end lies, possibly, he intimates, in the one word, MIND.

Sunday Magazine—St. Louis Post-Dispatch—January 26, 1930.

THIS is the second of a new and amazing series of five true stories of famous crimes that just missed perfection, written by a master of stories stranger than fiction.

re-Vaughn's story seemed plausible. But they heard nothing more from the man himself. The letter had come from Basle, Switzerland, and in that city some traces of Henry Vaughn were found; of a visit there at the time the letter was written and mailed. Then Vaughn seemed to have vanished into thin air.

The police now were baffled, and if the reader has any theory or guess as to the story of the death of M. Bernays, he is that much clearer in mind than were the police of Brussels and Antwerp.

JUST as they were about to confess themselves beaten there arrived an anonymous letter at Police Headquarters. It was both in Brussels and in Antwerp. It will be remembered that an anonymous letter had already played a part in this story, the letter in which Armond Peltzer was accused of intimacy with Mme. Bernays. This time again Armond Peltzer was accused, but of a much more serious crime. The letter advised that the handwriting of "Henry Vaughn" be compared with that of Armond Peltzer.

The police lost no time in following up this clue; but they went about it very circumspectly. They saw, of course, that Armond was the only known man who would have any motive for killing Bernays, although the act was not quite in keeping with Armond's character. They also knew there would be danger of his taking flight. A letter of Armond's was secured and placed aside by the police with the letter written by Henry Vaughn. But not even handwriting experts could detect the slightest resemblance of the one to the other.

But once the police were on the trail of a theory, they were not reluctant to leave it without further investigation. So that they cast about for some other clue in the same general direction. It so happened that just about this

a letter yourself, something like the

AN OLD-FASHIONED WINTER IN ST. LOUIS

—By Post-Dispatch staff photographer.

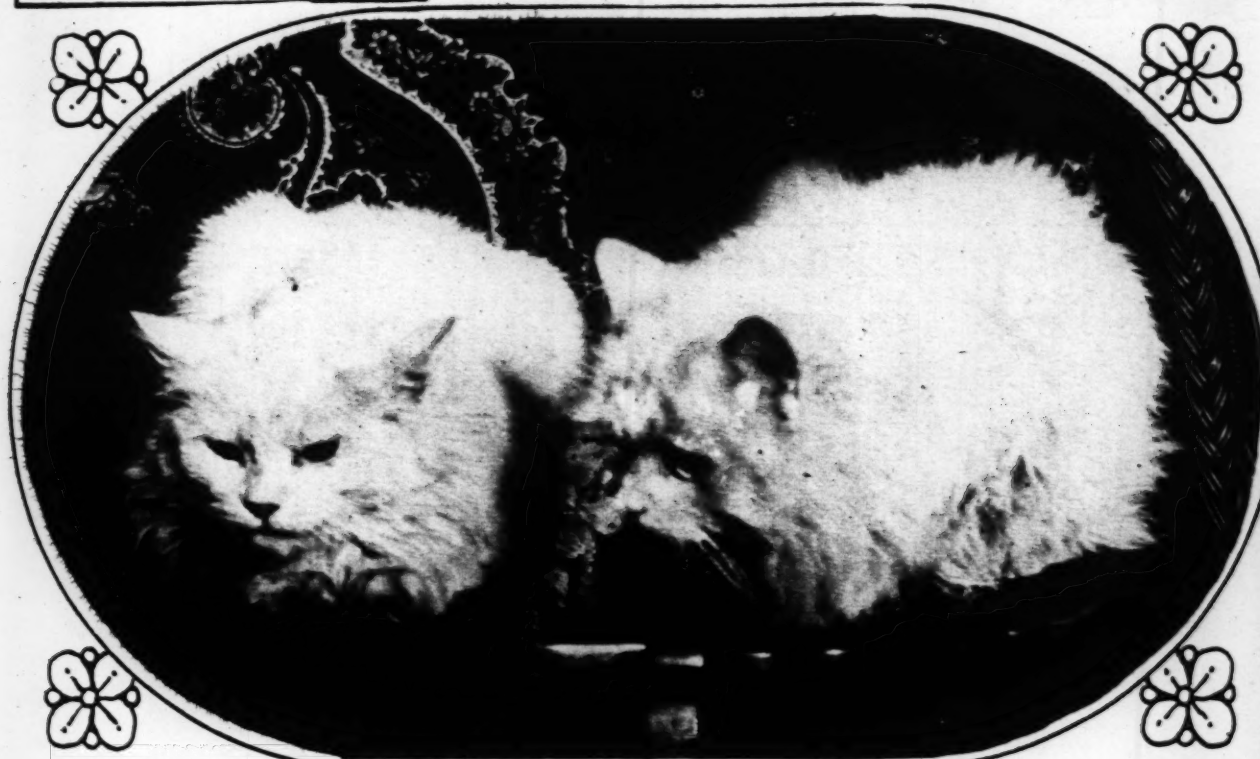

One of the races in the Silver Skates Carnival held in Forest Park last Sunday. This shows the first heat of the 220-yard open, in which Adolph Furman of St. Louis took first place, with Melvin Johnson, Detroit, second.

Thousands among the spectators lining the Grand Basin and nearby points of vantage a week ago got their first glimpse of ice hockey as it is played today. These snapshots were made during the game between two teams made up of players of the professional St. Louis Flyers.

The slide for youngsters on Art Hill.

PRIZE WINNING PEEKS—Cha Ming Prince Confucius and Cha Ming Hu Lak, owned by Mrs. F. Y. Mathis of Greenwich, Conn., champion exhibits at show in New York.

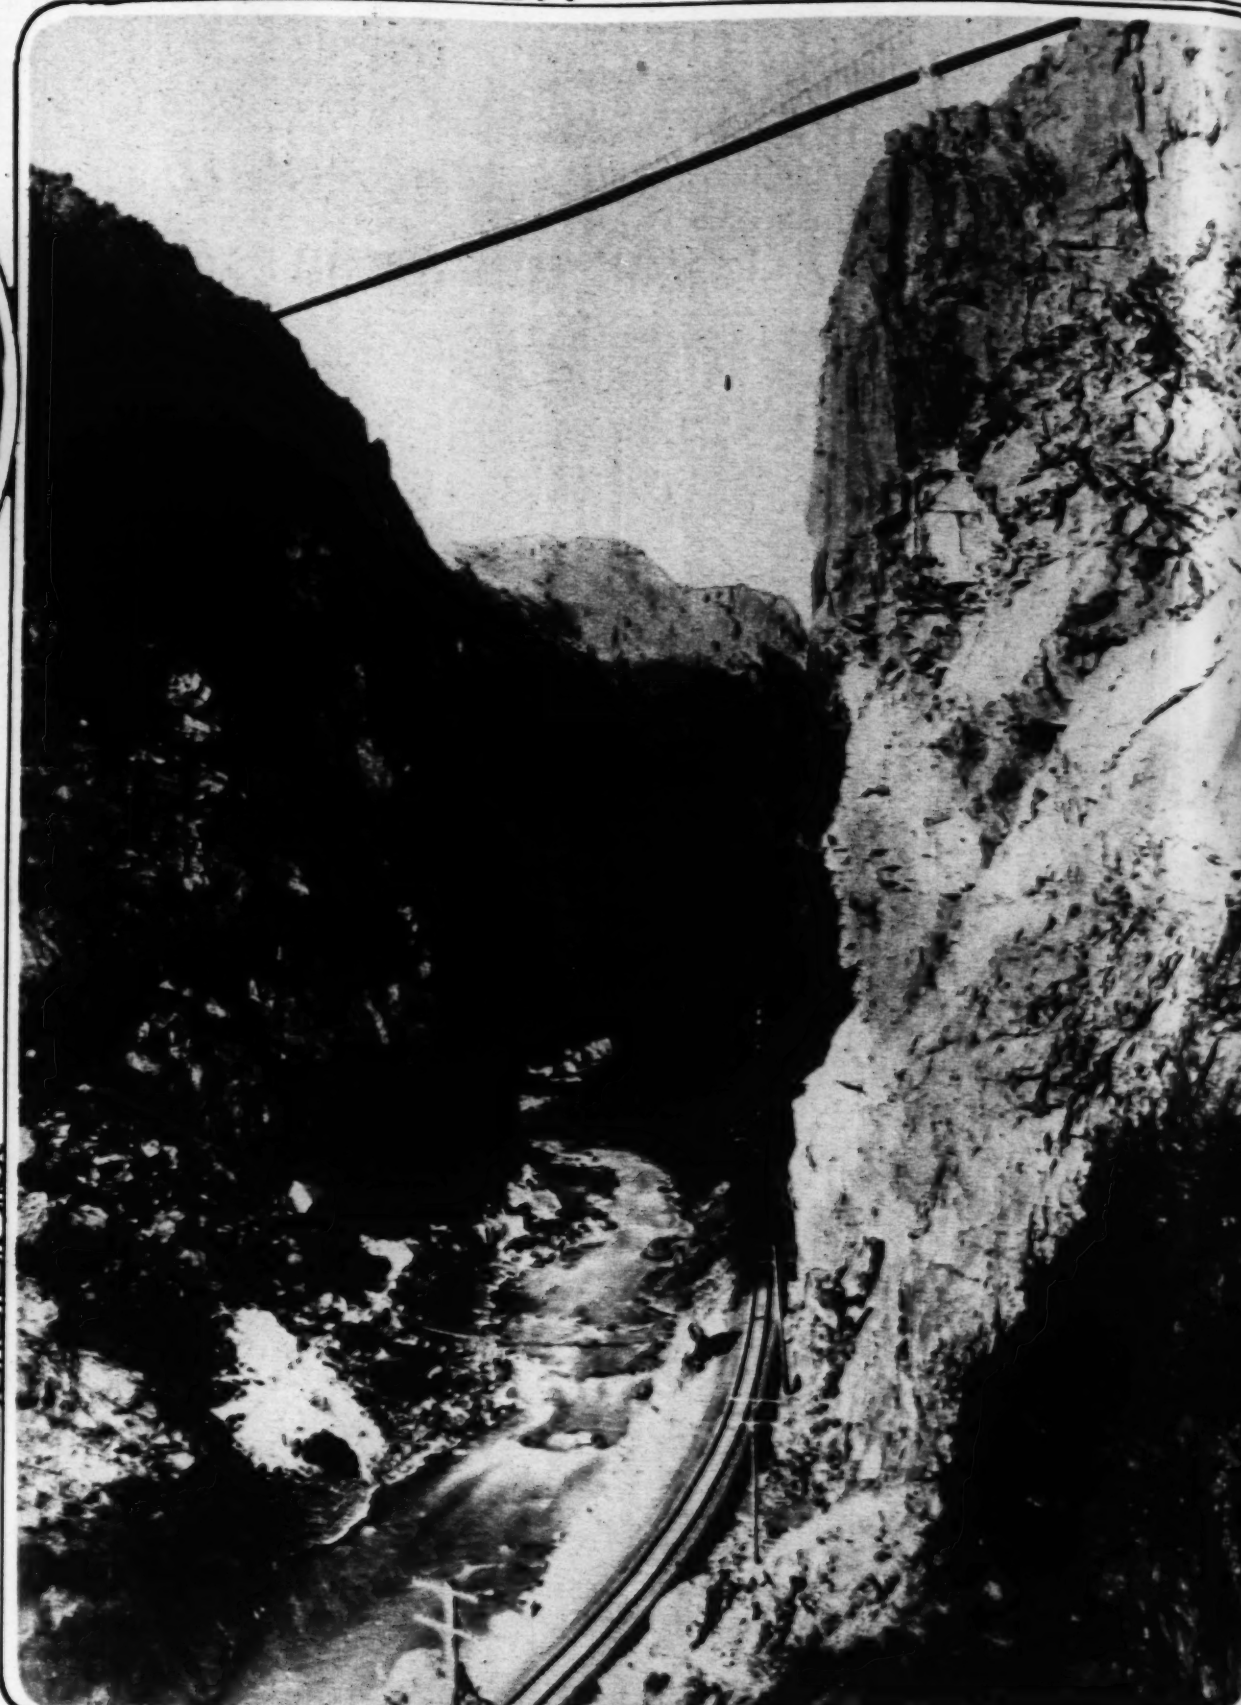

THE KEATON CHILDREN—Jimmie and Bobby, the two sons of Buster Keaton, the film comedian, and his wife, Natalie Talmadge Keaton.

THE GLADSTONE OF TODAY—Lord and Lady Gladstone photographed at their home in England as the son of the famous William E. Gladstone celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday. He has been a member of Parliament for 50 years.

ANCIENT CASTLE BOUGHT BY AMERICAN—James McShayne of New York, purchaser of the Castello Di Revigliano, not far from Veauvius, which he will use for a summer home after repairs and additions are made to old structure.

HIGHEST SUSPENSION BRIDGE IN THE WORLD—Looking up at the new steel highway over the Royal Gorge in Colorado, 1053 feet above the waters of the Arkansas River. The bridge is 1253 feet long.

AMOS AND ANDY, young macaws born recently at the home of Mahlon B. Wallace in the St. Louis Country Club grounds. Jeff Coulter, Wallace's gardener, who is raising the young birds, posed with them.

A NEW SPORT IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA—Digging automobiles out of the snow is an unusual occupation down there, but it happened this winter on the ridge route north from Los Angeles into San Joaquin Valley.

MEMORIAL TO WARDEN FROM CONVICTS AND FORMER PRISONERS—The sculptor, Vincenzo Miserendino, is here standing beside model of base which will support a statue of Thomas Mott Osborne, former head of Sing Sing prison. It is being executed at a cost of $25,000, contributed by men once in his custody. There are twenty-two figures, around the base, symbolizing influences the warden exerted upon the lives of the prisoners after leaving gaol.

SOCIAL MENTOR OF THE WHITE HOUSE—Warren D. Robbins of Tuxedo, recently Minister to Salvador, who has joined the staff of President Hoover as ceremonial officer.

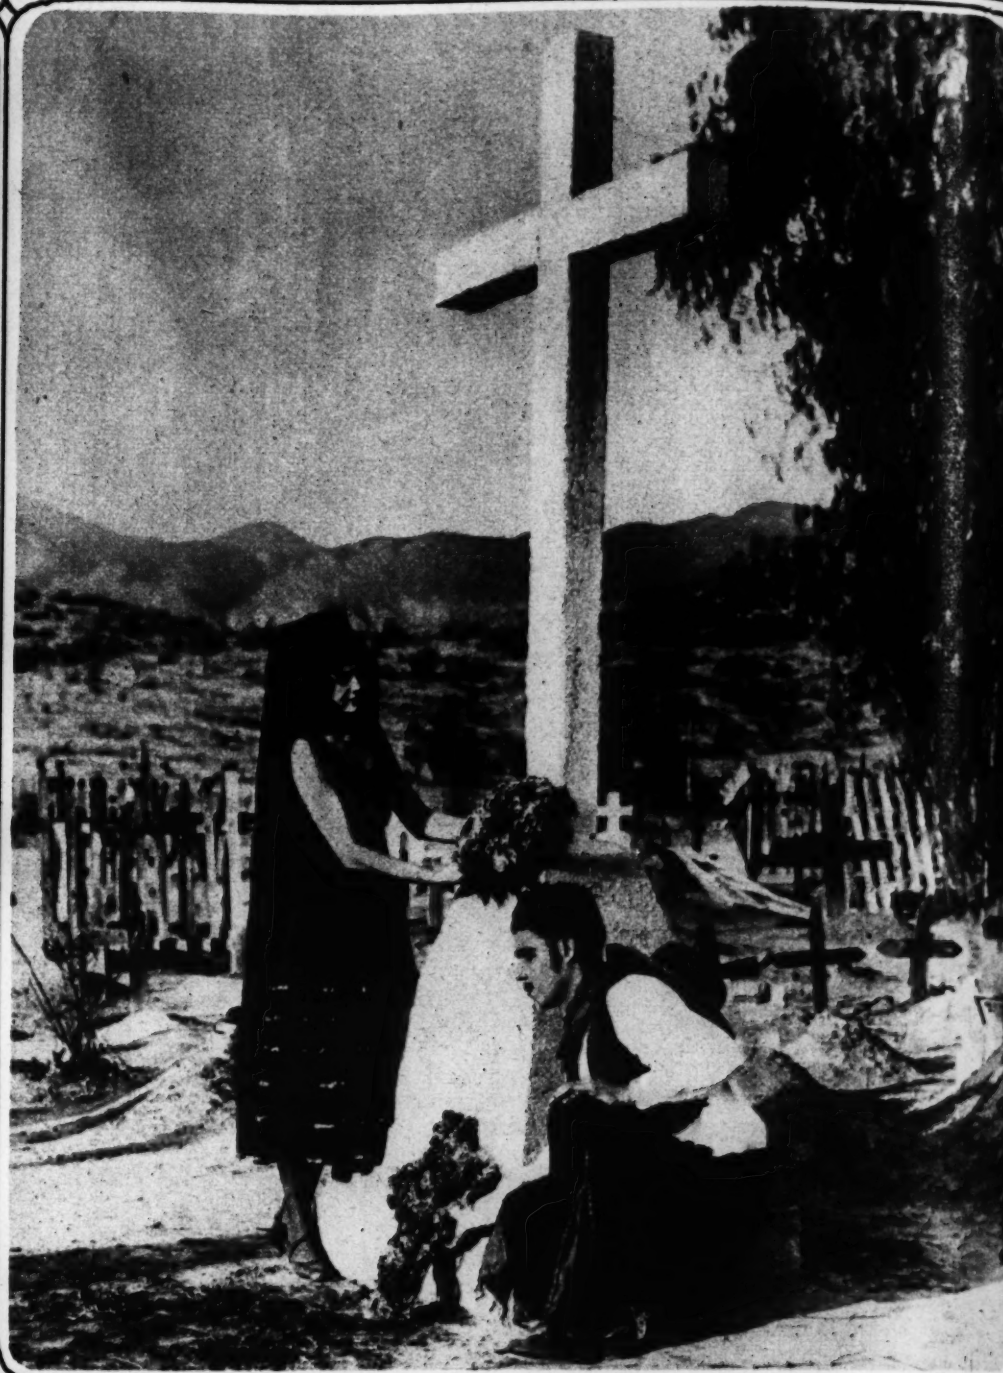

TWO GENERATIONS OF INDIAN ARTISTS—Calf Tail, the elder of the pair, is making a decoration for his tepees in Glacier National Park, while the younger, Albert Racine, a member of the same tribe, is a painter of Indian life in the modern school of art.

DON QUIXOTE AND HIS FAITHFUL SQUIRE—New equestrian statue placed in the Plaza de Espana in Madrid.

THE ROYALIST ROOTER RETURNS TO PARIS—Crowd welcoming Leon Daudet upon his arrival in the French capital after thirty months of exile following his plot to change the nation back to a monarchy. He was recently pardoned by President Doumergue.

IN MEMORY OF RAMONA—Monument in the Indian reservation cemetery near Hemet, Cal., where lies buried the native heroine of early California days.

IN A JAPANESE FILM STUDIO—One of the mementos brought back by Douglas Fairbanks of the round-the-world trip made by movie star and his wife, Mary Pickford.

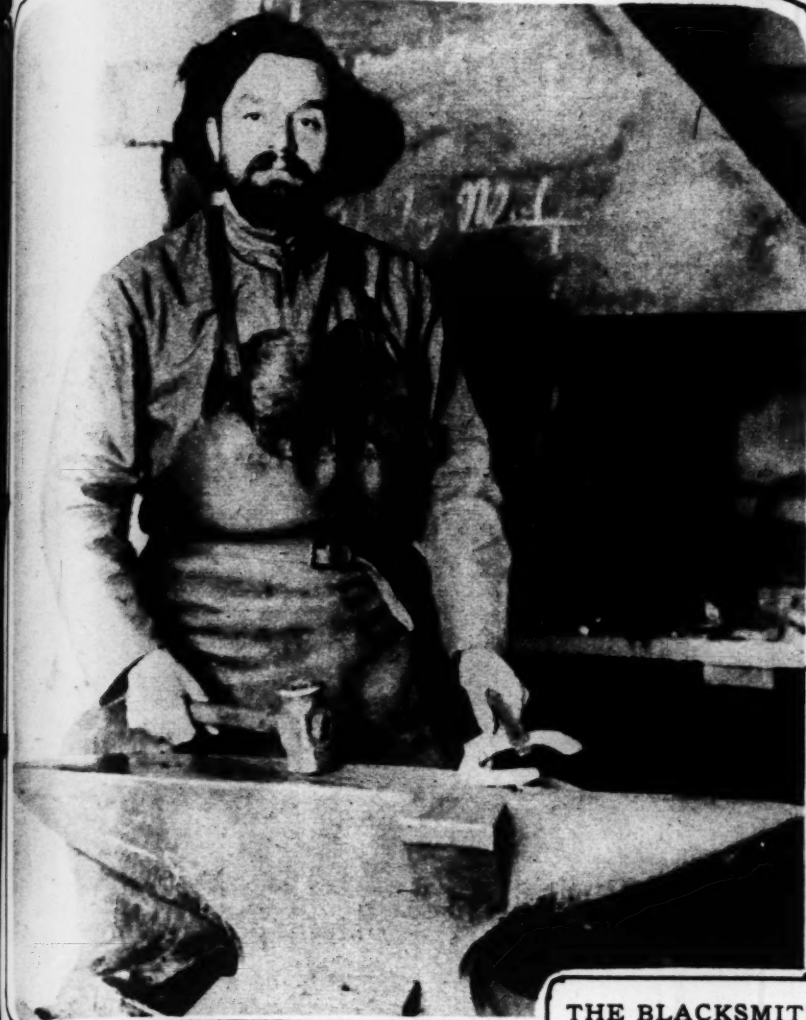

KEEPING THE TRACKS CLEAR IN SWITZERLAND—Snow plow work on the line connecting St. Moritz with Tirano, Italy. It's an almost weekly struggle to maintain train schedules through the Alps at this point.

MISS ELEANOR STEELE, whose a partner in the Morgan banking house, is here posing for her part in "The Magic Flute" by Brooklyn's Little Theatre. She entered professional operatic ranks.

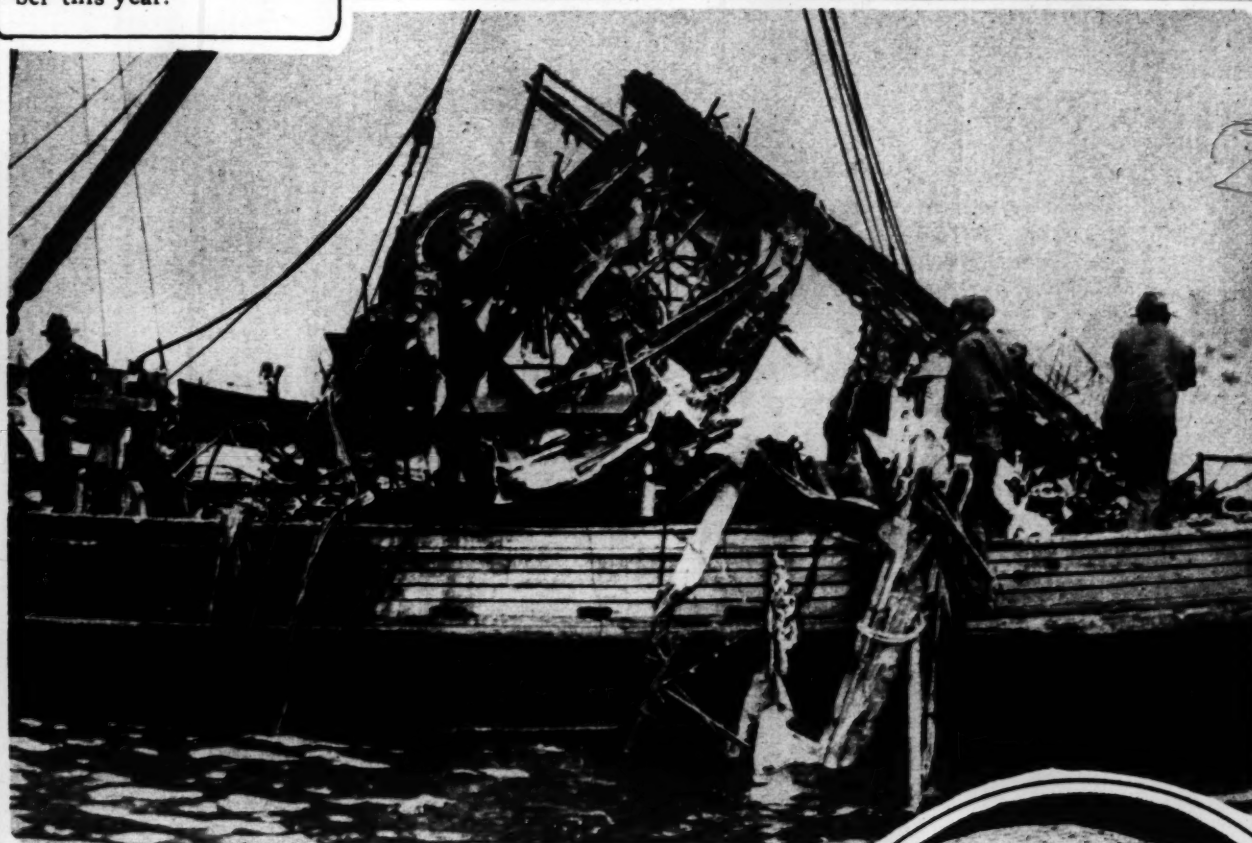

HAWAII'S SAUSAGE TREE—fruit so much resembling bologna.

THE BLACKSMITH OF OBERAMMERGAU—Hugo Rutz, who will take the part of Caiphas in the famous Passion Play to be presented in Bavarian village from May to September this year.

AN AVIATION CUSTOMS HOUSE—This is the first of six international ports of entry established by the United States. These passengers, who flew from Mexico to Los Angeles, are having their baggage examined by an inspector for the purpose of collecting tax on anything subject to import duties.

SALVAGING A DEATH PLANE—Bringing up from the bottom of the sea one of the two craft which collided in the air off the Southern California coast. Ten lives were lost in this accident, which resulted from an effort to make a moving picture film in the air.

A PRESENT FROM SALVADOR—Police Capt. Gifford of Los Angeles and hat he received in return for his trouble in explaining to an officer of Central American republic how automobile traffic is handled in this country.

MARY PICKFORD giving testimony in the suit brought by California to compel payment of $90,000 inheritance tax on the estate of her mother. Mary won.

MISS ELEANOR STEELE, whose father is a partner in the Morgan banking house, making up her part in "The Magic Flute", given by Brooklyn's Little Theatre. She recently entered professional operatic ranks.

HAWAII'S SAUSAGE TREE—Botanically it is Kegelia Africana, but it bears a fruit so much resembling bologna that it is known by a commoner name.

TOWERS OF MANHATTAN PIERCING THE FOG—How the lower end of New York City looked to an aviator one morning in January as he flew above the mist which covered all of the city but the tops of its highest structures.

Far better to know now that skin perfection, like strength, may be achieved and retained by intelligent, daily care. For Boyer has perfected an utterly new cream for achieving and retaining skin beauty.

Its beneficial light oils penetrate to the depth of your pores, floating out waste and neutralizing complexion-aging skin-acids. Clean pores never distend and are the very beginning of smooth skin beauty. Ten days with this new light cream of Boyer's will make a difference you can see and feel. Never will you go back to heavy, waxy cream. You will understand why women who jealously guard their complexions are loyal to the 75c jar of Boyer's Skin Cream. Your Druggist has Boyer's Beauty Preparations.

LOOK—and you will see that the world's distinguished women are its most beautiful women, too. Think—and you will be convinced that personal loveliness is a woman's likeliest way to win distinction. Then act—follow the example of the beauties pictured here. Pond's famous Method keeps their skin (as it will keep yours) always clear, smooth, fresh as flowers. Wherever they go, they follow (as you should too) Pond's four steps to beauty.

As Lady Violet Astor says, "Pond's have done a wonderful service to women!"

Beautiful Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. says, "Even on our Nevada ranch I have my daily facial with Pond's. One can keep one's skin young and lovely with just these marvelous Two Creams, the exquisitely fine Tissues, and the wonderfully invigorating Tonic."

Just four simple steps!

FIRST . . Pond's Cold Cream. "It cleanses divinely!" says Miss Helen Choate. Apply it lavishly all over your face and neck, for pore-deep cleansing. Make a fine art of patting in the cream with gentle, caressing, upward, outward motions. Wait a few moments so the fine oils can sink down into the pores and coax up every speck of dirt to the surface.

SECOND . . Wipe away all cream and dirt with Pond's Cleansing Tissues, following the same caressing motions as before. These velvety new Tissues are soft and amazingly absorbent, more efficacious, more economical than old-time towels and "rags." Mrs. Gifford Pinchot II calls them "the perfect way to remove cold cream."

THIRD . . Pond's Skin Freshener to remove all trace of oiliness after cold cream cleansing, to close and refine the pores. Soak a sizable pad of cotton. Dab briskly till your cheeks glow fresh as a rose. Lady Buchanan-Jardine says this fragrant mild astringent is "just the skin tonic we all need to tone us up."

LAST . . to keep your skin looking fresh and lovely, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream, a delicate film before you powder. You will delight in this well-bred "finish." Rouge blends more subtly, powder clings more graciously than ever before. Now your skin is perfect—cleansed, firraed, vital with glowing health, impeccably groomed.

"A straightforward way of keeping fit," beautiful Countess Howe sums it all up. "One can do it all by oneself at home or in the country, wherever one may be. So naturally I'm enthusiastic about Pond's!"

Follow this marvelous Method, and you too, will be enthusiastic—and lovely!
